SIXTY PEOPLE KILLED IN ATTACK ON BEIRUT

Italian Naval Squadron Bombard the Syrian City---Many Others Were Wounded---Victims Were Non-combatants

Beirut, Syria, Feb. 26.—A flotilla of Italian warships Saturday morning bombarded this city, killing sixty peaceful inhabitants and wounding a large number of others. They also sank a number of small Turkish gunboats anchored in the port.

Appearing suddeny off the port, the commanders of the Italian gunboat Volturno and the armored cruiser Guiseppe Garibaldi sent to the authorities a peremptory demand for the surrender of the Turkish gunboats in the harbor.

Before the provincial governor could deliver his reply to the Italian commanders or ask for time to negotiate, the cruisers opened a devastating fire.

In a short time the Turkish gunboats in the harbor were disabled and in a sinking condition. The custom house was greatly damaged and other buildings also suffered severely.

Three torpedoes finally destroyed the Turkish vessels. The Turks fought bravely but were at a great disadvantage, as they were unable to manoeuvre their vessels and their guns were of small calibre.

During the fighting in the harbor a mob looted the Government arsenal and seized rifles and ammunition. One shell burst close to an American building, but injured no one. All the Americans in the city are safe.

Italian Commander's Version.

Rome, Feb. 26.—The first official statement of the destruction of two Turkish warships Saturday in Beirut harbor was received yesterday from Admiral Favarelli, commanding the squadron, to which the cruisers, Guiseppe Garibaldi and Francesco Ferruclo, the attacking vessels, are attached.

The admiral sent the following despatch:

"I surprised the Turkish gunboat Avnillah and the torpedo boat Angora at daybreak in the port of Beirut. These ships were ordered to surrender, the time limit being fixed at nine o'clock. My decision was communicated to the governor and consular authorities through the Turkish officer who came aboard.

"At nine o'clock a signal demanding surrender was again hoisted. As no answer was given, fire was opened on the gunboat, which replied energetically. At 9.30 the gunboat was silenced, fire having broken out on board. Having suspended fire, I proceeded aboard the Guiseppe Garibaldi to the mouth of the harbor, where an action ensued with the Angora, which was badly damaged. Her destruction was completed with a torpedo.

"The report that the town of Beirut was bombarded is absolutely false. The squadron then departed."

Admiral Favarelli received a despatch from Admiral Direvel, who returned to Beirut in the afternoon aboard the Francesco Ferruccio, to ascertain if the Turkish vessels were entirely out of action. He found one of them still afloat and accordingly opened fire and sunk her with a few shots.

British Cruiser Leaves for Beirut.

Malta, Feb. 26.—British armored cruiser Lancaster left here yesterday under sealed orders, presumably to protect British interests at Beirut.

Expell Italians From Syria.

London, Feb. 26.—Turkey has decided upon the expulsion of all Italians in Syria, according to a special despatch from Constantinople. The order will go into effect immediately, but fifteen days' grace are allowed.

Sensation in Paris.

Paris, Feb. 26.—The Italian action at Beirut has caused somewhat of a sensation here, for France, like other European countries, has important commercial interests and religious and educational establishments in that city. An outbreak of fanaticism, which the bombardment of Beirut is calculated to provoke, is feared, and to prevent as far as possible the natural consequences of such an outbreak, the French Government has ordered the armored cruiser Admiral Charner, which is now at Suda Bay, to proceed to Beirut without delay.

Alarm In Vienna.

Vienna, Feb. 26.—The bombardment of Beirut by Italian warships occasions serious misgivings here. The Vienna papers indulge in sarcastic comments on "Italy's war prowess." Die Zeit urges the powers to take action to prevent Italy from repeating such attacks.

Killed at Porcupine.

South Porcupine, Ont., Feb. 26.—James Reilly was killed and Matthew Bonan severely injured at West Dome Mine Saturday morning by an explosion, thought to have been caused by drilling into a hole where an old shot had missed fire.

Scoutmasters Disagree on the Subject of 'Baccy.

Toronto, Feb. 26.—The first convention of the Ontario Scout Officers' Association was concluded by the Saturday afternoon session, at which papers were read on different points of interest to the movement, and a general discussion took place. The convention was voted a great success and it was decided to hold one annually in the future.

"Camp Sanitation" was the subject of a paper read by A. E. Mercer at the Ontario Scout Officers' conference. The speaker laid stress upon the necessity of taking every precaution to preserve the health of the boys while at camp. At the conclusion it was decided to have the paper printed.

A. Clark of Wycliffe College brought up the question as to whether a scout master should smoke. He was of the opinion that they should not. C. J. Atkinson endorsed this opinion. He thought that a scout master would have a greater influence if he would not use tobacco. The pros and cons of the question were discussed and opinion was pretty well divided.

The following are the officers for the ensuing year; Hon. President, Sir John Gibson; president, W. K. George; first vice-president, Lt.-Col. A. E. Gooderham; second vice-president, J. H. Collinson, Hamilton; Capt. R. S. Wilson, secretary-treasurer, commissioner for Ontario; H. G. Hammond, assistant commissioner and provincial secretary.

Executive, C. W. Henning, Hamilton; Lyons Woolverton, Grimsby; Lt.-Col. D. M. Robertson, Toronto; Noel Marshall, Sir Henry Pellatt, Sir Edmund Walker, Gen. Cotton, J. C. Eaton and James Scott.

CAN'T TOUCH ST. KITT'S.

City Abandons Hope of C.N.R. Passing Through.

St. Catharines, Feb. 26.—Since the visit to this city and district on Friday of Engineer Wicksteed of the Canadian Northern Railway Co., St. Catharines has practically abandoned hope of having the main line of the company diverted from Thorold to this vicinity. Wicksteed had interviews with representatives of most of the leading manufacturers in the city. He also looked over the surveyed route and the one suggested as an alternative, but finally declared that from this city it would be impossible to obtain a grade that would permit an engine to draw more than twenty-five cars, whereas the grade on the route surveyed will permit of hauling of fifty cars in one train.

The route surveyed begins the ascent of the mountain this side of Grimsby. It rises near Jordan, then makes a detour towards St. John's, circles back to Decew's Falls within a few miles of his city, then passes on to Thorold, using the present bridges over both canals and continues on to Niagara Falls.

Mr. Wicksteed, however, threw out the suggestion that in all probability the company will begin at once on the construction of an electric spur from Niagara-on-the-Lake through this city to connect with the proposed main line at Jordan.

In such case, the present bridge across the old Welland Canal, now used by the Port Dalhousie division cars, would be used. General Manager Seixas is in Toronto conferring with Canadian Northern officials as to the work of the company in this district during the coming spring and summer.

To Freeze Out Tariff Board.

Washington, Feb. 26.—The House committee on appropriations has decided to strike out the appropriations for the next fiscal year the sums included for the salaries and expenses of the tariff board.

The board will not be legislated out of office, but will be literally starved out of existence after the expiry of the current fiscal year on June 30 next. The House, however, will appropriate a sum of money for statistical research, the results of which are to be at the disposal of the ways and means committee in framing tariff legislation. This step is justified upon the ground that the House of Representatives and not the President is charged with the duty of originating all money bills by the express terms of the constitution.

There has been much complaint during the present session respecting the course of the tariff board in taking up for investigation certain schedules of the tariff to the neglect of others upon which the House desired immediate action.

ROOSEVELT'S ANNOUNCEMENT HAS CAUSED A SENSATION

Doughty Colonel and Ex-President Says He Will Await the Decision of the Convention and Enter the Lists if the Party Says So.

New York, Feb. 26.—"I will accept the nomination if it is tendered me and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference," is Col. Theodore Roosevelt's reply to the letter of seven Republican governors asking him to stand for nomination.

The much-awaited reply was given out last night at Col. Roosevelt's offices here during his absence on a trip to Boston. It was unexpectedly brief, but definite. It follows:

"Gentlemen:—I deeply appreciate your letter, and I realize to the full the heavy responsibility it puts on me, expressing as it does the carefully considered convictions of the men elected by popular vote to stand as the heads of government in their several states.

"I absolutely agree with you that this matter is not one to be decided with any reference to the personal preferences or interests of any man, but purely from the standpoint of the interests of the people as a whole. I will accept the nomination for President if it is tendered to me and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference. One of the chief principles for which I have stood and for which I now stand and which I have always endeavored and always shall endeavor to reduce to action, is the genuine rule of the people; and, therefore, I hope that as far as possible, the people may be given the chance through direct primaries, to express their preference as to who shall be the nominee of the Republican Presidential convention.

"Very truly yours,
"Theodore Roosevelt."

The seven governors assembled at Chicago two weeks ago and drafted a letter to Col. Roosevelt asserting that there was a popular demand for him to be President again and urging him to declare himself as to whether he would accept the Republican nomination "if it came unsolicited and unsought." For two weeks Col. Roosevelt considered the letter, indicating plainly that he had no intention of making a hasty reply.

The governors who signed the letter were: William E. Glasscock of West Virginia, Chester H. Aldrich of Nebraska, Robert P. Bass of New Hampshire, Joseph M. Carey of Wyoming, Charles S. Osborne of Michigan, W. R. Stubbs of Kansas and Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri.

Efforts of Col. Roosevelt's friends to induce him to make an earlier declaration of his attitude on the Presidential question had been unavailing. His laconic remark to a friend in Cleveland last week that "My hat is in the ring—you will have my answer Monday," was the first real indication that he had in mind an affirmative answer to the governors' letter.

Upon promise that the reply would be given out last night a small army of newspaper men gathered at the colonel's offices early in the evening. Secretary Frank Harper met the reporters punctually and gave out the correspondence without comment. He said he was in no position to comment, and in view of the author's absence in Boston, where he will spend several days, it was impossible to get an elaboration of the statement made in the letter.

News Caused Sensation.

Boston, Feb. 26.—"I think I have made my position clear, I have no plans beyond this night. For to-morrow and afterwards, no one knows what is in store."

This was Col. Roosevelt's response to the appeals made to him last night for some word in regard to his statement. As he spoke, he smiled expansively. Then he added with a chuckle:

"I'm having a quiet literary evening. I havn't talked politics with anyone."

Col. Roosevelt was at the home of Judge Robert Grant, a Harvard classmate, with whom he spent the night. News of his decision spread around the city like wildfire last night and created a great deal of excitement. Judge Grant's home was besieged by a crowd of persons anxious to see the colonel, who was quietly discuss-

Roosevelt Third Man?

New York, Feb. 26.—The Press on Saturday published a despatch from Washington. It said: "What is disturbing the Taft Republicans more than any other bit of information brought here is the statement that Col. Roosevelt will run for President even if defeated in the Chicago convention. Men of considerable importance are discussing this to-day."

The story is based upon the alleged conversation of a U. S. Senator with the former President in The Outlook office. Col. Roosevelt is represented as saying:

"The nomination in Chicago must be made by the open voice of the Republican party, and not by manufactured delegates. If the will of the people is not impressed upon that convention then there must be a third party with its own candidate."

Another Cuban Crisis at Hand.

Washington, Feb. 26.—Another crisis in Cuban affairs apparently is at hand. Reports from the island indicate that the unrest temporarily quieted by U. S. Secretary of State Knox's recent note of warning, is about to break out anew as a result of the Cuban supreme court decision invalidating the law ousting office holders who were Spanish sympathizers during the revolution.

Developments are being awaited with keen interest in official circles here. It is believed that the situation will tax the resources of President Gomes to the utmost.

To Maintain Cat In Women's Ward.

St. Catharines, Feb. 26.—Hugh E. McSloy, treasurer of the General and Marine Hospital, on Saturday received a peculiar donation. It was a check from Miss Annie Norris, Ontario street, for $50. With the money was a stipulation that the sum is to be expended in maintaining a cat in the woman's ward of the hospital. The grant was accepted and a cat will at once be installed and supported upon the $50.

YUAN IS ELECTED.

Republicans Will Notify Him Officially of Honor.

Pekin, Feb. 26.—The Government is preparing an elaborate reception for the delegation of Republicans who are coming here under the leadership of Tang Shao Yi from Nanking, to notify Yuan Shi Kai of his election as President of the Republic. The people, however, seem to be indifferent respecting the momentous visit. Telegrams have been received from various sections of the country, embodying various proposals with respect to the future. It is believed that Yuan Shi Kai is secretly inspiring this with the object of dividing the south on the matter of location of the capital.

While Yuan Shi Kai realizes the imperativeness of uniting the country, he is proceeding confidently in the knowledge that he possesses the means of averting or politically defeating his opponents. Apparently the country is very strongly in favor of Yuan Shi Kai as President. Many soldiers who are not Republicans, have given their full adherence to the President-elect, and Yuan Shi Kai holds the confidence of both Manchus and Chinese, which probably indicates that the suspicions that he was double-dealing for the court's overthrow were unwarranted.

The new Government has decided that the country shall hereafter be officially styled the Great Republic of China, the word "Great" being intended to include Thibet, Turkestan, Mongolia and Manchuria. It has practically been decided to convert the Forbidden City into a Government enclosure, where all the offices will be situated. When the Empress Dowager and the Emperor depart the extensive grounds around the winter palace will be converted into a public park.

Guests Bravely Rescued.

Galt, Ont., Feb. 26.—Fire broke out at 7.30 p.m., Saturday, in the Hotel Imperial and destroyed the eastern wings. The damage is $8,000, insured. The hotel is owned by A. J. Cardy, Niagara Falls. The blaze started in the lavatory.

The guests had a narrow escape with their lives. Miss Cowan and Mrs. Hounhan were bravely rescued; the former by James Harrocks, a boarder, and the latter by H. Rowley, a hotel porter.

Three guests descended by a rope ladder from a bedroom, Turner Virgin, Dr. Durran and James Hall. The first named made a thrilling escape from a third storey window. The Hotel Imperial is the oldest existing in Galt and is noted throughout Canada for its fine bowling green.

The Case of Johnny Turner

It Illustrates a Coming Solution of a Social Problem

By EDWARD B. TRAINOR

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

One day in the fall of 1900 two boys, Edgar Thorpe and Johnny Turner, aged respectively seventeen and sixteen years, were hunting in the woods of Missouri. Thorpe came into camp in the evening with a bottle of whisky, and the two began to drink. Turner had never tasted spirits of any kind. He had no memory of what happened at the time, except that he and Thorpe quarreled, till he was sobered by seeing his friend lying dead with blood oozing from a bullet hole in his forehead. Then he knew he was a murderer.

To confess the crime meant months in jail before being brought to trial, and the least punishment that might be expected was a term of years in state prison, and possibly he might swing. The courts do not admit the influence of liquor as an excuse for crime. Johnny didn't know this. He was too young to know anything about such matters. He was seized with a desire to get away as far and as quickly from the scene of his crime as possible.

Leaving the body where it lay, he struck out into the woods, walking all night. He has been through many horrors since, but he says that that first night after the murder was the most frightful of all. In the morning, needing something to eat, he stopped at a farmhouse and heard persons talking about the sea battle in Manila bay that had just occurred. Here was a chance for him to bury his identity. He would volunteer in the army and be sent to fight the Spaniards.

After eating a scant breakfast he went on till he struck a city in which he found the people excited over the news from Manila. Seeking a recruiting station, he offered himself for enlistment. The recruiting officer looked at him dubiously, wondering if he was of a proper age to join the army, but he was eager to fill up his company, and, since Johnny made one of five men he lacked for the purpose, the boy was accepted, going on the roster under an assumed name. He was sent to Tampa, Fla., and from there to Cuba.

The morning of debarkation was the first event to make Johnny forget that terrible scene in the wood when he had come to himself and seen what he had done. As boatload after boatload of men left the transports and were pulled to the shore the air was alive with their cheers rising above the strains of "There'll Be a Hot Time In the Old Town" from the military bands.

And there was a hot time, sure enough. The army marching inland toward Santiago was met by the Spaniards, and a sharp fight was the result. Johnny, who had enlisted with a vague boyish idea of getting killed in battle, forgot his original intention and felt only the emotions of a soldier. The ardor of battle triumphed over all else. Where other recruits flinched Johnny pushed forward. When the fight was over he had been marked by the captain for one of the reliable men of his company, and, a sergeant having been killed, Johnny was promoted to the position.

Before the fighting around Santiago ceased Johnny was made a lieutenant. But the war was short, and at the end of it he was still a boy, having barely turned seventeen. Nevertheless he was so badly wounded that it was expected he would die. He lay in hospital for a long while and when finally discharged was permanently disabled.

Retaining his army name, the young "veteran" went to work in an eastern city and by close application to his work gained the confidence of his employers. But while at his duties and, above all, when he went to bed his secret never left him. Often he would awake in the night with a start, and as if by a flash of lightning the scene in the wood from which he had fled would be vividly revealed to him.

Though Johnny was lost to the world, there was one with whom he communicated—his mother. To her he wrote, explaining his absence, and she realized the importance of keeping his secret. Six years passed and Johnny, partly by good luck, partly because in work alone he was able to temporarily banish the crime that haunted him, prospered. The only person who knew his secret and still loved and respected him was his mother, and he asked her to come to him. She did so, and from the moment of her arrival he found one to render his load less hard to bear.

But a time came when it again loomed up before him like the figure of a "giant despair." Ten years had worn away something of the sharpness of his suffering, his mother had in a measure convinced him that in his case the line between crime and misfortune was an imaginary one, when a new motive for regret came to him. Alice Blair, a woman a few years his junior, old enough to be impressed with the enormity of the crime of taking under any circumstances the life of a friend, became a part of his existence. The love between the two was stronger in the man because he considered it hopeless. He could not make the woman his wife under a false pretense—he could not bind her to him for a lifetime without a confession that he had blood on his hands. And, supposing he confessed to her, it would be wronging her and children that might come to them both.

Slowly, but surely, in this man's life the principle of confession and atonement was working itself out. What nothing else could effect was to be brought about by the woman he loved, she bearing her share of the punishment. He did not speak his love. It seemed with him rather a fever from which he was suffering than love. He would absent himself from her for weeks at a time, only to return to a companionship that he could not live without. Patiently she waited for an explanation that she felt assured must come in time.

One evening after one of these absences—a longer one than usual—the lover appeared. It was at an hour between daylight and dusk. She had been thinking of him and was beginning to fear that this dreadful something that was between them might, in this instance, separate them forever. Suddenly he burst in upon her, and so wild looking, so despairing, that for a moment she almost fancied that he was his ghost.

He had returned resolved to confess to her. He began at once to unburden himself of the frightful secret, and it was not long before it was all in her possession. She spoke no word. She gave him one look of heartfelt sympathy, then, overpowered by his and her misfortune, covered her face with her hands and bowed her head. He waited for her to speak, but she did not, and he silently withdrew.

The next day she sent for him. When he appeared a great change had come over her. She showed traces of a terrible mental struggle.

"I have forgiven what in any case is not a crime. I will be anything to you, but on one condition. Confess to the world and take the consequences. I can bear with you your public shame; I cannot share your secret."

He turned without a word, went to the office of the superintendent of police and confessed that he had murdered his friend Edgar Thorpe. The governor of the state in which the crime had been committed made a requisition for him, and he was taken there for trial.

When the members of the societies of Spanish war veterans heard that one of their number had given himself up to be tried for murder they at once became interested. Gradually the peculiar features of the case became known to them. Between the murder and the trial the accused had had an opportunity seldom falling to the lot of criminals to show that his act had been rather a misfortune than a crime and that he who committed it had become a good citizen as well as a brave soldier. Had he given himself up immediately after the murder the case would have been far different. A long term of confinement would have wrecked him.

As it was, while the law was satisfied Turner escaped the punishment of the law—at least, all except the degradation of entering a prison. His sentence was but a few months, and long before the term had expired he was pardoned by the governor of the state.

On the morning he was liberated a large concourse assembled at the prison door to welcome him upon his return to freedom. First and foremost was the woman who was the cause of his confession, next his comrades, veterans of the Spanish war, and lastly a multitude of sympathizers. As he stepped beyond the prison portal it seemed to him that he was leaving the greater part of his atonement behind him. True, the fact of having taken the life of his boy friend would live so long as he himself, but the secret would not be with him, not between him and the woman he loved, not between him and the world. In its place would be a heartfelt sympathy.

There is a lesson in the case of John Turner to which the world is slowly awakening, a lesson—it is rather a problem—respecting the treatment of criminals. But it will not be easily solved. Justice has not yet found a way of giving one who perpetrates a first crime an opportunity for redemption before inflicting a punishment that deprives him of that opportunity. Nor has a line yet been drawn between the criminally insane and those offenders who attempt to elude justice on a false plea.

Obliged to Quit Business

So Dreadful Was the Suffering From Itching Piles

After Twenty Years of Pile Torture Relief and Cure Came with

Dr. Chase's Ointment

You take no risk and you make no experiment when you use Dr. Chase's Ointment for piles. Many doctors still cling to the idea that nothing but an operation will effect a cure. But operations are expensive and dangerous and often fail in their results. Some have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment after operations had failed.

Dr. Chase's Ointment truly has a wonderful record as a cure. Here is a case which was reported recently:

Mr. John P. Marshall, 14 Barnes road, St. John's, Nfld., writes: "For upwards of twenty years I was troubled terribly with itching piles; at times so bad that I was obliged to lay up ,unable to attend to business.

"I tried many treatments without benefit, until II accidentally read of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and found at last a cure by using this ointment. I only used one box and part of a second one when I was completely cured, and have had no return of the piles. That was eighteen months ago, and, needless to say, I attribute this cure to Dr. Chase's Invaluable Ointment."

Many sufferers from piles have tried so many scores of treatments that they cannot believe that cure is possible. In order to convince the skeptical we are always willing to send a sample box free to anyone who encloses a two -cent stamp to pay postage.

Hall Caine's Role.

Hall Caine, with his long hair, his beard and his flowing cape, is fairly well known to everybody, if only from photographs. This fact encourages one to tell a story.

It happened when one of Mr. Caine's plays was running at the Wild-horses-won't-drag-it's - name - from-us theatre. The author decided that the least he could do after the performance was to go round and congratulate the leading lady. So when the curtain fell he went round behind and tapped at the lady's dressing-room door.

The lady sent her maid to see who it was. The maid went.

Now, the passage outside was rather dimly lit, and when the maid opened the door and saw a strange-looking figure standing outside she promptly ejaculated "Oh!" in a tone of extreme surprise, shut the door and returned to her mistress in a state of some bewilderment.

"Well," asked the leading lady, "who is it?"

"I—I scarcely know, miss," gasped the maid, then, as a brilliant afterthought, "unless it's the bearded lady!"—Tatler.

A Clerical Pun.

On one occasion at Athy, where Canon Stavely, the English divine, was then stationed, he was visited by the archbishop, whom he induced to visit a new coffee house which had just been opened in the interests of temperance. Naturally the distinguished guest was served with a sample cup of coffee. He tasted it, while Canon Bagot and the manager waited in complacent expectancy of commendation.

They were disappointed. The cup was hardly set aside by the bishop, who ejaculated, with prolonged and unmistakable emphasis:

"A-bom-i-nable!"

Then the manager suddenly remembered. "Oh, your grace," he explained, "a box of matches fell into the coffee tank this morning, and I did not think it right to waste all the contents of it."

"If your grace will come again," promised Canon Bagot, interposing quickly, "I faithfully promise you a matchless cup of coffee."

An Earl's Adventures.

The Earl of Ranfurly, who recently celebrated his fifty-fifth birthday, has had an adventurous and interesting life. Governor of New Zealand from 1897 to 1904, he was one of the most popular men that colony ever had, and his term of office was prolonged by the unanimous wish of the people. He holds considerable tracts of land in Australia, where he spent some years at fruit-growing. He is a keen yachtsman, and in his collegiate days used to keep a steam yacht, in which he always traveled from Cambridge to London by way of the Ouse, the Wash, and the East Coast. He has had quite a fair share of narrow escapes. On one occasion, when he was playing polo, he was nearly killed by some marksmen practicing at a neighboring range; another time he was knocked down by a couple of runaway horses, and had a third escape when he had to jump from the windows of Government House, Wellington, when a fire occurred there.

We are not susceptible to seasickness and we are decidedly apathetic about pleasantries on that theme, but we do wish that newspapers would cease to speak of societies "holding dinners." It suggests too much.—New York Mail.

Cats on Liners.

Every large ocean liner carries from six to ten cats, these being apportioned to various parts of the ship, as well as appearing on the vessel's books for rations. There is promotion for pussy on board ship. Ordinary unsociable cats are kept in the hold, in the steerage, or the forecastle; but a cat that is amiable and handsome is given the run of the first and second-class saloons. When at sea the cats attend to the mice and rats, but, after all, can do little more than scare them out of the parts of the ship frequented by passengers. In port the ship is visited by a professional rat-catcher, who frequently captures 500 in one day.

Needed a Week's Notice.

It is now fifty years since the British postoffice bank was established. In the early days there were some hazy ideas as to the rules of the bank. "Shure," said an old woman at an Irish branch. "Oi want to bank five pounds. Can I draw it out quick if I want it?" "Indade Mrs. O'Brady," replied the postmaster, "you can draw it out to-morrow if you give me a wake's notice."

The Last Train.

An Irishman got a job as a porter on one of the English railroads. Shortly after he began his duties a woman went up to him and said:

"I have just lost the train. How long shall I have to wait for the next?"

"Be jabers, you had better go and find the one you lost, else the company will be after yes," returned Pat.—London Answers.

WAS TROUBLED WITH Weakness and Palpitation OF THE HEART.

Through one cause or another a large majority of people are troubled, more or less, with some form of heart trouble.

Little attention is paid to the slight weakness of the heart, but when it starts to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beats fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, then it causes great anxiety and alarm.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can and will give prompt and permanent relief.

They do this by their restorative influence on every organ and tissue of the body.

Mrs. John J. Downey, New Glasgow, N.S., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I was troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart, would have severe choking spells, and could scarcely lie down at all. I tried many remedies, but got none to answer my case like your Pills. I can recommend them highly to all having heart or nerve troubles."

The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet

For Schools, Hotels, Banks and Private Residences

Heretofore it has been impossible to install a Sanitary System of inside closet without water works and sewage, and you will agree with us when we say that the present outdoor system of closets are not only very insanitary, but are at the same time one of the most fruitful sources of both moral and physical ills.

The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet is constructed principally for families and public bodies who live in a district where it is impossible to have waterworks and sewage. It can be placed in any part of a Residence, Store, School, Hotel, Bank, etc.

We have secured the Agency for this valuable Sanitary Closet, and invite investigation of its merits.

HEIGHTS AND DEPTHS DIVINE

Divine Power to be Exerted to Awaken People to Understand God's Glory.

Bombay, Feb. 25.—The Committee of the International Bible Students Association for the investigation of Foreign Missions have spent three weeks in India and traveled over three thousand miles. The seven members divided the work among themselves at the various stopping points and will colabor in the report. We report today's discourse in the Y.M.C.A. Auditorium by Pastor Russell, the Chairman of the Committee, as follows:

I had a great interest in your land and its people before coming to your shores, but my interest has been greatly increased by what I have witnessed during the past three weeks in India—not only in your largest cities, but also in your towns, villages and agricultural districts. As there are no other extremes in the world so great as between the caps of your Himalaya mountains and the wash of your coral strands, 29,000 feet below them, so likewise there can be found no greater contrast socially and financially than between your wealthy princes and your poverty stricken lower castes. Although such contrasts are deplorable we have no remedy to suggest, except the Divine one—the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom.

Meantime, if poverty be favorable to saintship, there should be excellent material in abundance here. Indeed, one of the things which has impressed me is the religious sentiment of India. The religious fervor of the thousands who bathe in the Ganges, and the numerous temples and shrines in every city, remind me of Saint Paul's words respecting some of his day, "feeling after God, if haply they might find Him." The two thousand temples and shrines of the one city of Benares speak volumes for the religious sentiment of the people and, although I have remarked of your hundreds of millions of hopelessly poor, I have not overlooked the fact that some of your wealthy have shown that they are not without generous instincts. Many of your merchant princes have evidently given largely to the charitable institutions, notably in Bombay; and I would not overlook the fact that in one of your great cities large animal hospitals have been provided for decrepit chickens, donkeys, horses, etc. However we may consider such sympathy misapplied, in view of human need and suffering, we cannot overlook the fact that sympathy is there only waiting for the proper direction which Messiah's Kingdom will shortly give.

In your own grand Bombay I noted with astonishment the Towers of Silence, where the Parsee element of your population gives the flesh of its dead to feed the vultures. Alas! my soul cries out, Is not such heroism worthy of a better cause—would not these Parsees make wonderfully faithful Christians, if they but had the blessing of the true Light? How I rejoice in the Divine promise that the true Light of the world shall yet lighten every man that cometh into the world! (John i, 9.) How glad I am that now I see the Divine provision for the hundreds of millions of India and of the whole world to come to a knowledge of the glory of God, under the uplifting of the Kingdom of Messiah! And how I rejoice to believe it is near, even at the doors—just behind a terrible time of trouble and anarchy, which India will not escape!

But I must not dwell too much on the dark side of India's picture; you know it too well already. I will allow the wonderful heights of the Himalayas from your sea shore to draw our attention to the Apostle's words respecting "the heights and depths, the lengths and breadths of the Love of God, which passeth all understanding." That is the text of my parting words to India. In the past our forefathers studied God's Words with the light of a tallow candle, or of a pine knot, or of a smoking lamp; now we may search the Scriptures in the clear, steady light of the electric lamp, which brings us almost noon day brightness.

Correspondingly, we find beauties in the Divine Word and Plan which our forefathers of the day of the tallow dip could not discern. Since we believed with our forefathers that God's love was merely for the "elect," saintly few, and that the non-elect, in His displeasure, He had doomed to eternal suffering. Now we ask the same blessings as ever for the "elect," but other blessings for the non-elect, the world—earthly blessings of restitution to human perfection and to an earthly Eden, world-wide.

Our forefathers saw the height of God's love for the holy angels and its condescension to the saintly of men, but they did not see its depths. They did not see that the Redemption accomplished by Jesus is ultimately to reach down to and embrace the very humblest and most degraded of human-kind. How the precious Scriptures which tell of Jesus as the Saviour of the world, as well as of the Church, escaped our notice, who can explain? But surely glad are we that now we can see clearly that the Redeemer is a Propitiation for our sins, the Church's sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.

This fuller appreciation of the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of love Divine is coming to Christian people as a benediction from heaven, just at the time when many are Higher-Critically repudiating the Bible and its God as unworthy of belief. The true view of God's Word we have intimated, namely, that all the families of the earth are to be blessed by Messiah's Kingdom, and that the Church, in process of election for the past eighteen centuries, is to be sharer with her Lord in that Kingdom.

Is it any wonder that this glorious view of our Creator and His plan for human salvation is inspiring—sanctifying, in the hearts of all who have the hearing ear to receive it? Is it not in full accord with the earliest statement of the Gospel, "Through thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed?" Is it not the claim of the Church and of the Bible that the saintly believers of the Gospel Age constitute the spiritual Seed of Abraham, the Bride of Messiah, "the Body of Christ which is the Church?" And have we not also the assurance, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the promise?" Galatians iii, 16, 29.

Another view of the heights and depths of God's love is that which recognizes us as a race fallen from human perfection into the mire of sin whose quicksands are swallowing up mankind at the rate of 90,000 every day. The Divine Program shows two salvations for the groaning creation. The first of these is the most wonderful; it is now in progress, and we urge all who have the hearing ear to lay aside every weight and every besetting sin that they may attain this special salvation offered to the Church. By faith, through the medium of exceeding great and precious promises, God is now lifting the obedient "elect" from the original pit of sin and death, from the mental degradation in which we all were as Adam's race; and to some extent they are being lifted also physically from this degradation.

The transforming work begins with each believer in Jesus who presents himself a living sacrifice to walk in the Master's footsteps. Even though these may not generally be of the wealthy and educated and higher social classes, the power of the Holy Spirit operating through the Divine promises gradually beautifies not only the characters but to some extent the features of those who rejoice to take up their cross and follow the Saviour.

However uncouth and rude or careless or savage they may have been before, the transforming influence of the Holy Spirit develops in them the fruits of the spirit—meekness, gentleness, patience, long suffering, brotherly-kindness, love; and these things continuing in them and abounding more and more, and attesting their faithfulness unto death, make these neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of God and in the character-likeness of Jesus; and hence the Resurrection change will usher them into the everlasting Kingdom of their Saviour—to be sharers in His glory, honor and immortality—far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named. Do we not here see wonderful depths from which these are rescued and wonderful heights to which they are yet to be lifted by Divine grace and its arrangements on their behalf? Surely all mankind who see this glorious arrangement of our God can glorify Him on this account.

For the world a somewhat similar and yet very different blessing is outlined in the Divine Plan of the Ages. Our poor race in some quarters of the world, fallen from the image of God almost to the level of the brute, sadly needs the uplifting, restricting, restitutionary influences which Messiah's glorious Kingdom will bring to them. To what heights will man be raised? Oh, not so high as the Church, the elect Bride of the Lamb—not so high as cherubim or even as angels, but very high, nevertheless—back to all that was lost in Eden.

How our hearts glow with gratitude toward God as we perceive that His original design for His human creatures is yet to be carried out to the letter! "His Word that is gone forth out of his mouth shall not return unto Him void, but it shall prosper in the thing whereunto He sent it." (Isaiah lv. 11.) He said, "Let Us make man in Our image"; and when he was made the Divine judgment expressed was that he was "very good," only "a little lower than the angels." (Hebrews ii. 7.) Moreover, he was crowned with glory and with honor in a sense that the angels were not crowned, for man was made the king, the ruler, the Divine representative of all the lower creatures of the earth. As we read, "Thou didst set him over the works of Thy hands: thou hast put all things under his feet, all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field, the fowl of the air and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas."—Psalm viii, 5-8.

This Godlikeness, in the flesh and this Divine authority associated with it has been marred and much of it has been lost. The six thousand years of the reign of sin and death have not changed the Divine intention. On the contrary, the human family has been multiplying; it has been given valuable lessons on the exceeding sinfulness of sin; it has learned to know evil first. Next it must be brought to a knowledge of good and to an appreciation of Divine mercy. This will come to mankind during the thousand years of Messiah's reign, in which not only the living will be blessed with knowledge and with recovery from the power of death, but gradually all that have gone down to the tomb shall come forth, that they may be raised up, up, up again to the perfection of life, and fully live again at the end of the thousand years.—Revelation xx, 5.

Nor will the lengths and the breadths of Divine love toward the elect Church, the Bride of Christ, be fully exhibited to angels and to men, even during the glorious period of Messiah's reign. Saint Paul explicitly declares, "that in the Ages to come He might shew the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." Is it asked what opportunity there will be for further favors to be bestowed upon the Church at the conclusion of the Millennial reign? We answer that as the Scriptures declare that God formed the earth not in vain but made it to be inhabited, and will make it glorious as His footstool in due time, so we may reason with respect to the other planets of our solar system. Gradually through coming Ages Divine power will be exercised in bringing into being millions of intelligent creatures on every planet of our system.

And still more than this, if our astronomical concepts are correct, all the fixed stars are suns, and around each sun are planets. Are there then, a thousand blazing suns? Yes, more. Are there ten thousand? Yes, more. Are there ten times ten thousand? Yes, more! Are there ten times a hundred thousand, a million? Yes, more! Are there ten times ten millions, a hundred millions? Yes, and more! And if we allow an average of ten planets to each sun this would make more than a thousand million planets, all made not in vain, but eventually to be inhabited. And astronomers assure us that we have every reason to believe that if we could stand upon the very furthermost sun of our knowledge we would see as many millions more beyond.

Alas! our poor minds are bewildered with such immensity, with such manifestations of the lengths and breadths of Divine Power and Wisdom, even as we have already been bewildered in our attempt to appreciate the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of Divine Love! Will there not indeed, then, be quite a sufficiency of the Divine Program to be outworked through Christ and the Church to justify the Apostle's statement that in the Ages to come God will manifest the exceeding riches of His grace in His loving kindness toward us in Christ Jesus?

India's hundreds of millions have not gone to a hell of hopeless despair and endless torture! Thank God, no! They have gone to the same hell to which Jesus went, the same to which the Apostles and Prophets went, the same to which all mankind, both good and bad go—the Bible hell, the tomb, the state of death—sheol, in the Old Testament Hebrew, and hades, in the New Testament Greek. They are all asleep, unconscious, until the morning of the resurrection. Thus "Abraham slept with his fathers," as did Kings David and Solomon, and all, both good and bad. Thus Jesus' friend Lazarus, fell asleep and was awakened by the Saviour on the fourth day, called forth from the tomb. Thus also Saint Stephen, stoned to death, fell asleep; and Saint Paul speaks of mankind in the tomb as sleeping in Jesus, and of the Church as being asleep in Christ.

In the glorious morning of the New Dispensation, inaugurated by Messiah's Kingdom, the awakening of mankind will gradually proceed. Our Saviour informs us that His Church, the elect Bride, will constitute the First Resurrection, and that subsequently all that sleep in the dust of the earth shall come forth, "every man in his own order," in his own rank. Eventually all shall be brought forth and thus Sheol will be no more, Hades shall be destroyed as the Scriptures say, "Oh, Sheol, I will be thy destruction!" (Hosea xiii, 14.) Our Lord declares that He has the keys of Hades—the rightful authority to open the tomb and ultimately release all the prisoners of sin and death and to grant them restitution privileges under His Messianic Kingdom, which first of all will bind Satan, and overthrow his Kingdom of darkness and sin, ignorance and superstition.

As for those who will ultimately reject Divine favor, the message is that they shall die the Second Death. From it there will be no redemption, no resurrection, no recovery. As Saint Peter declares, they shall perish like natural brute beasts.

It is time that we should begin to magnify God's Love, the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of which are beyond all human appreciation. As we do this our hearts are enlarged; our lives are ennobled; the spirit of God is shed abroad in our hearts; the light of Divine Truth shines out from our words and conduct, and thus we become copies of God's dear Son, little by little, in the spirit of our minds; and thus we are fitted and prepared for a share with Him in His glorious Kingdom which shall bring in Restitution—uplift from sin and death for Adam and his race.—Acts iii, 19-21.

Behind the fingers of industry to the hod carrier—from nibbly in the suds to the woman with the scrubbing brush—the accomplishments of every one of us depend absolutely on the accomplishments of our stomachs. Backed by a good digestion, a man can give the best that is in him. When his stomach fails, he becomes a weakling.

To this loss of power no one need submit. Right habits of eating, drinking, sleeping and exercise, aided by Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, will restore and maintain the full efficiency of the human mind and body.

Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets contain the active principles needed for the digestion of every kind of food. They go to the assistance of the weakened stomach, and enable the sufferer, right from the start, to assimilate and get the benefit of the food eaten. With this assistance, the digestive organs regain their tone, and when the use of the tablets is no longer necessary,

England Needs Champions.

Sir James Barr, M.D., president of the Liverpool branch of the Eugenics Society, presiding at a meeting at Liverpool, said that public interest in the subject was increasing, and was bound to lead to some great event in the future.

At the end of 1911, he said he was asked to specify the five greatest events in 1911. But the aerial flight around Great Britain was won by a Frenchman; the trans-channel swim was accomplished by a Yorkshireman, who had lived a great deal in France, and the launching of the Olympic and the Titanic had happened in Belfast. He could not point to five achievements in England during the year.

It was time that the country instead of breeding inept individuals, should breed men able to accomplish some great feat.

The First Umbrellas.

Those who suppose that the umbrella is a modern contrivance will be surprised to learn that umbrellas may be found sculptured on some of the Egyptian monuments and on the Nineveh ruins. That umbrellas bearing a close resemblance to those of to-day were in use long before the Christian era is shown by their representation in the designs on ancient Greek vases. The umbrella made its first appearance in London about the middle of the eighteenth century, when one Jonas Hanway, it is said, thus protected himself from the weather at the cost of much ridicule.

Famous Smokers and Antis.

Mr. Gladstone detested tobacco. Thomas Hardy, the great novelist, has never smoked a pipeful nor a cigar in his life. Ruskin abhorred smoking of all kinds.

Sir T. Lauder Brunton does not use tobacco in any form. Other eminent men, past and present, who have disliked tobacco are John Stuart Mill, Sir Robert S. Ball, who never smoked but once, when he was at school; Gen. Sir William Butler, Dr. W. B. Carpenter, the great physiologist; Matthew Arnold, Dr. Alexander Bain, Professors Sheat and Murray, the philologists; Frederick Harrison, Professors Freeman and Gardiner, and Mr. Lecky, the historian; W. D. Howells, and Sir Erskine May.

Non-smokers are, therefore, in very good company. On the other hand, Mark Twain said he commenced smoking when eight years old, and smoked 300 cigars a month from the age of thirty onwards. Edison, at work, chews tobacco constantly. George A. Sala said he was a constant smoker, but if he could begin life again he would never touch tobacco. Mr. G. A. Henty smoked from after breakfast until he went to bed at 2 a.m.

Looking Ahead.

David A. Ball of Pike county, Mo., was once state senator and acted as lieutenant governor during the two years he presided over the senate. He had an ambition to be lieutenant governor, in fact.

One day he confided this ambition to his old family doctor. "The old man," Ball says in telling the story, "walked two blocks with me without making any comment. Then he turned and said:

"That's all right, Dave, but look here. Suppose you were elected and the governor should die. Wouldn't that leave Missouri in a mighty bad fix?"—Saturday Evening Post.

COULD NOT SWEEP FLOOR

Was So Terribly Afflicted With Lame Back.

It is hard to do housework with a weak and aching back, and no woman can be strong and healthy unless the kidneys are well.

The weak, lame and aching back comes from sick kidneys and should be attended to immediately so as to avoid years of terrible suffering from kidney trouble. Mrs. Harvey W. Brownell, Northport, N.S., writes:—"I now take pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About a year ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad at times I could not sweep my own floor. While looking through your B.B.B. Almanac I saw Doan's Kidney Pills were a great remedy, so thought I would try a box or two. After using five boxes I was completely cured, and I am very thankful to have found so speedy a cure."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. In ordering direct specify "Doan's."

TROPHIES of AMERICAN VALOR TO BE PRESERVED

The "Old" and First Chapel in the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.

Movement Is Started to Care for the Moth-Eaten Battle Flags of Many Nations, Won in Hard Fought Conflicts by United States Navy.

THE priceless trophies of the glory and valor of the American navy, which should be a living inspiration to the generations yet to come, instead of being publicly displayed and sacredly preserved, have for many years been boxed up and hidden from the public gaze.

The last time these historic relics were on view for the public was when they draped the walls of the ordnance department of the old Naval Academy. It was a shrine of patriotism in those days, for on entering "the old chapel," which in the old days was used as the Department of Ordnance and Gunnery, one saw the royal standard of England which was captured at York, Canada, on April 27, 1813. It is an enormous flag, 28x27, and it covered the major part of one of the four walls of the little room. Its historic and patriotic value is enhanced by the fact that it is the only royal British standard in existence outside of the ones owned by our British cousins themselves.

There, too, one could see the immortal pennant of Commodore Perry, with its wonderful talisman, "Don't Give Up the Ship;" the flag that flew so bravely from the masthead of his flagship, the Lawrence, when she led the way into action with the British on Lake Erie, September 10, 1813.

Head by bugs the ensign of the Macedonian, captured by Captain Stephen Decatur, October 12, 1812, and next to it was the first Stars and Stripes that was ever hoisted to Japan, the flag that was used by Commodore Perry in that epoch making interview with the Japanese near Yokohama, in July, 1853.

This aggregation of flags has been justly called by an officer of the present navy "a priceless collection." Among the flags is the ensign of the Insurgente, captured by the U. S. S. Constellation in 1799; the ensign of the Guerrière, the Cyane, the Java, the Boxer, the Macedonia and the Frolic all British ships captured by the American Navy in the War of 1812. There, too, are two Mexican flags, guidons, beautiful pieces of art work whose history is unknown, but it is evident they were prizes in the Mexican War.

The collection contains also the ensign of the Confederate ironclad Albemarle, which was destroyed by Lieutenant Cushing in 1864. Among the trophies are a number of Korean flags captured in 1871, flags taken in the war with Spain, among them the standard of the Governor-General of the Philippines and the Spanish ensign that flew over headquarters.

Several months ago Commander W. C. Cole, U. S. N., officer in charge of the grounds and buildings of the Annapolis Naval Academy, took up the matter of preserving and suitably hanging these precious trophies which have for many years been boxed up and hidden out of sight. His greatest help came from Mrs. Amelia Fowler, who has charge of the preservation and exhibition of the flags of Massachusetts. She looked over the national collection at Annapolis with an expert eye, and made an estimate of what it would cost to preserve and properly exhibit them.

In 1900 these flags, of which there are about 150, were packed in wooden boxes that were made as nearly airtight as possible. On opening the boxes recently many of the flags were found to be in a deplorable condition, many of them so badly moth eaten that they were in tatters. It is estimated that it will require the sum of $25,000 to repair and preserve these historic standards.

Systematic effort is now being made to arouse general interest throughout the country so as to make an impression on Congress, in the hope that an appropriation sufficient to care for these flags may be made. Commander Cole has had some of the nearly destroyed flags photographed and has sent the pictures to Congress as object lessons showing the need for immediate action.

Old Ironsides' History.

IN the collection is the ensign and pennant of the Guerrière, a British frigate that had been captured from the French by the British in 1806. She mounted forty-nine guns. On August 29, 1812, in latitude 41 degrees 42 minutes north and longitude 55 degrees 48 minutes west, after an engagement of thirty minutes with the frigate Constitution, affectionately known as "Old Ironsides," and which carried fifty-five guns, the Gurrière was captured. Captain Dacrass commanded the Guerrière and Captain Isaac Hull the Constitution. The Englishman lost fifteen killed and sixty-four wounded, the American seven killed and seven wounded. The Guerrière was dismasted and so cut up that she had to be set on fire and blown up, as she was not worth being taken into port. "Old Ironsides" also captured the Cyane and the Levant, both at once, and had a narrow escape, through good seamanship and a favoring wind at the right moment, from an English squadron after a three days' chase. Her fourth capture was the English frigate the Java.

Ensign of the Reindeer.

THIS flag is a memento of the capture of the Reindeer, a British ship, carrying nineteen guns, commanded by Captain Manners, by the sloop of war Wasp, twenty-two guns, Captain Johnston Blakeley. The engagement lasted but nineteen minutes. The Reindeer, of a crew of 118, lost twenty-five killed, among them her captain, and had forty-two wounded. The Wasp lost five killed and twenty-one wounded. Like Hull, Captain Blakeley received a medal from Congress for his success. The Wasp had a sad but gallant fate. She had compelled, two years before, the British ship Avon to strike, but was prevented from taking possession of her by the approach of a squadron of the enemy. The Avon sank shortly afterward. After taking several prizes the Wasp disappeared. She was last heard from in latitude 18 degrees 35 minutes north, and longitude 30 degrees 10 minutes west, on October 9, 1814.

Ensign of the Insurgente.

THE Insurgente was a French frigate of 40 guns, Captain Barreault, which was captured, after an engagement of one hour, by the United States ship Constellation, thirty-eight guns, Commodore Thomas Truxtun, on February 9, 1799. The Constellation's battery was composed of 24-pounders, and the Insurgente's but 12's. She was taken into the United States service and was lost in 1800.

Ensign of the Dominica.

THE Dominica, a British schooner, of 15 guns, was captured August 5, 1813, by the privateer schooner Decatur, 7 guns, Captain D. Diros, out of Charleston, S. C.

Ensign of the Landrail.

THE British cutter Landrail, 4 guns and 33 men, Lieutenant Lancaster, while on her way across the English Channel with despatches, was captured July 12, 1814, after a desperate resistance, by the privateer schooner Syren, 7 guns, 80 men, Lieutenant J. D. Daniels, out of Baltimore. The crew were brought into New York, but the Landrail was recaptured on her way across.

Ensign and Pennant of the Detroit

THE Detroit was the flagship of the British squadron on Lake Erie, captured September 10, 1813, by the American squadron under Commodore O. H. Perry. The British squadron, under Jesse D. Elliot, the second in command. Perry was promoted to captain from the date of the action.

Ensign of the Macedonian.

THE Macedonian, a British frigate, mounting 49 guns, Captain Garden, was captured October 12, 1812, by the frigate United States, mounting 54 guns, Captain Stephen Decatur. Her original figurehead, a miniature of the British lion in wood, is still preserved at the Naval Academy. A medal was awarded by Congress to Captain Decatur.

Ensign of the Frolic.

THE Frolic, a British brig, mounting 22 guns, Captain Whinyates, was captured October 18, 1812, by the sloop of war Wasp, 18 guns, Master Commandant Jacob Jones. The Frolic lost from 70 to 80 in killed and wounded. The Wasp had five killed and five wounded. Captain Jones was awarded a medal by Congress.

Ensign of the Duke of Gloucester, captured in the attack upon York, Canada, by the combined forces of Commodore Isaac Chauncey and a force of soldiers under Generals Pike and Dearborn.

Ensign of the St. Lawrence, a British schooner, fifteen guns, which was captured by boarding by the privateer schooner Chasseur, fourteen guns, Captain T. Boyle, out of Baltimore.

Ensign of the Confiance.

THE frigate Confiance, thirty-seven guns, flagship of the British squadron on Lake Champlain, under Captain Downie, the brig Linnet, sixteen, and the sloops Chub and Finch, eleven guns each, were captured on September 11, 1814, off Plattsburg, by the American squadron, under Commodore Thomas McDonough, after an action of two hours and twenty minutes. There were also twelve or thirteen British galleys. Most of these escaped. The total British force was 96 guns and 1,000 men. Their loss was 84 killed, 110 wounded and 357 prisoners. Captain Downie was killed. The American squadron mounted 86 guns and had 850 men. Their loss was 52 killed and 58 wounded. Congress awarded three medals for this victory—one to Commodore McDonough, one to Master Commandant Henley and one to Lieutenant Cassin.

THE Penguin, a British sloop-of-war, mounting 19 guns, Captain Dickinson, was captured March 24, 1815, off Tristan d'Acunha, by the sloop-of-war Hornet, mounting 20 guns, Captain James Biddle, after an engagement of twenty-two minutes. Each ship had a crew of 132 men. The Penguin lost fourteen killed, among them her captain, and had twenty-eight wounded. The Hornet had but one killed and nineteen wounded. Among the number was Captain Biddle. Congress gave Captain Biddle a medal for this action.

THE Boxer, a British brig, 14 guns, Captain Blythe, was captured September 4, 1813, off Portland, Me., after an engagement of forty minutes, by the brig Enterprize, 16 guns, Lieutenant William Burrows. Lieutenant Burrows died from his wounds. Captain Blythe was killed. Two medals were awarded by Congress for this action—one to Lieutenant Burrows and the other to Lieutenant Edward Rutledge McCall, upon whom the command devolved when Lieutenant Burrows was wounded.

Captain Barclay, was composed of the Detroit, 19 guns; Queen Charlotte, 17; Lady Prevost; 13; Hunter, 10; Little Belt, 3, and Chippewa, 1; total, 63 guns and 500 men. They lost forty-one killed and ninety-four wounded. The Americans had the Lawrence, 20 guns; Niagara, 29; Ariel, 4; Caledonian, 3; Somers, 2; Scorpion, 2; Trippe, Tigress, Ohio and Porcupine, 1 each; total, 54 guns and 490 men. Their loss was twenty-seven killed and ninety wounded. Congress awarded Captain Perry a medal; one to Master Commandant James Lawrence.

A Legion of British Flags.

ENSIGN of the Alert, the first man-of-war taken by the Americans in the War of 1812, captured by Captain David Porter in the Essex.

An ensign captured at Tuspan, Mexico, April 18, 1847, by a landing force commanded by Commodore M. C. Perry.

An ensign marked San Juan, whose history is unknown.

A Mexican ensign captured November 11, 1847, at Mazatlan by a landing party under the command of Commodore W. B. Shubrick. There is also a mate to this, taken at the same time.

Two guidons, Mexican flags, marked "Es. Ao. de Jalapa and Escuadron Activo de Vera Cruz," whose history is unknown.

Chinese Flag.

THERE is a memento of valor taken from the Celestial Kingdom on November 13, 1854, which fell into the hands of the Americans when they captured a pirate battery at Coolan, Island of Tylo, by the crew of the Macedonian's pinnace, under charge of Acting Master John G. Sproston, under orders of Lieutenant H. G. Preble.

Corean Flags.

THERE are twenty-one of these banners. One is a standard which was the flag of the Corean generalissimo, which was captured June 11, 1871, by Captain McLane Tilton and Corporal Brown, M. C., of the Colorado, and Private Purvis, of the Alaska. Captain (now Lieutenant Colonel) McLane and Private Purvis, now employed at the Naval Academy, yet live in Annapolis, Md. A surveying party that had the implied assent of the Corean government was attacked and an explanation was demanded. None coming after a delay of ten days, Rear Admiral John Rodgers, with his fleet, attacked with a landing force, under command of Commodore H. C. Blake. Five forts were destroyed, fifty flags and 451 pieces of artillery were captured. Ten of these flags were taken by A. Morris, James Willing, James Corcoran, M. Thomas, E. Heintz, M. Harris and W. Tate, of the crews, and Private J. Davis, Private McGranville and Corporal James McDevit, of the United States Marine Corps.

An Algerine Flag.

THE ensign of the Estedio, an Algerine brig, captured June 19, 1815, in the Mediterranean, by the American fleet under Captain Stephen Decatur, is among the precious relics.

Memento of the Civil War.

NONE of the flags captured from the Confederates during the civil war was ever displayed on the walls of the Bureau of Ordnance. They are never flaunted in the faces of a united country, but they are kept as relics of a great struggle and as memento of valor. Among these flags are:—

The ensign of the Ellis, a Confederate gunboat, captured at Elizabeth City, February 10, 1862, by Lieutenant John McDiarmid.

Ensign of the Albemarle, blown up on the night of October 27, 1864, by Lieutenant W. B. Cushing.

THE flag hoisted at the masthead of the U. S. S. Kearsarge during its engagement with the Confederate steamer Alabama, off Cherbourg, France, June 19, 1864, is one of the relics in the magnificent collection of standards, that number more than a hundred and fifty in the total of all of the varieties.

What the Doctors Say About Dyspeptic Albuminuria.

JUST as weakness of the gastric functions may lead to the appearance of sugar in the urine, although it may not be a question in this case of real diabetes, so in a similar manner an abnormal digestion is liable to cause albumen to appear in the urinary excretion, although the kidneys may not be out of order in any part whatever.

The general symptoms of dyspeptic albuminuria have no definite characteristic. Sometimes the gastric symptoms predominate, at other times the subjects appear in excellent health. In other cases again, the patients attract attention to one or several particular symptoms which cause anxiety. These symptoms, in order of frequency, are:—A sensation of fatigue and exhaustion, coincident generally with intellectual languor, nervous excitation, loss of weight without apparent cause and despite the maintenance of a good appetite, a marked pallid or yellowish ashy complexion, with a fatigued and unhealthy appearance, headaches, skin eruptions, palpitations of the heart, giddiness, shivering sensations and sometimes fetid breath.

Most of these symptoms, if not all, are due to the casual dyspepsia and not to albuminuria. It is certain, too, that the symptoms of any albuminuria lesion or of Bright's albuminuria are always absent. Thus swelling of the limbs is never observed.

This type of albuminuria is essentially irregular, in the sense that it is found in certain emissions and not in others. In the most numerous cases it appears in one or two emissions a day, not daily, but at more or less regular intervals.

As a general rule there is no albumen in the urine on waking, that is to say, after fasting and resting during the night. The albumen appears only in the urine after digestion, or again after a long walk, after fatigue or a chill. In exceptional cases traces of albumen are found in the urine in the morning, their appearance being due to the fact that the patient has not completely voided the bladder on retiring to rest, or that he has received a chill, or again, that he may have got out of bed during the night. The quantity of albumen is always slight and varies between indeterminable traces and sixty centigrammes at most per litre.

In a second series of cases the albumen, while generally apparent in quantities ranging from simple traces to sixty centigrammes in a litre, and only rarely amounting to a gramme or a gramme and a half, exists in a continuous manner in the urine after digestion or after a long walk, and is constantly found in the morning's water.

Finally, in a third category of instances, the albumen is constant, diminishing only in fairly large proportions in the morning urine. At first functional, the disease has now become lesional and touches on the confines of nephritis and Bright's disease. The proportion of albumen now becomes more considerable. It may easily amount to from one to two grammes or even more in the urine after digestion, while the symptoms of Bright's disease which appear at a more advanced stage leave no doubt as to the reality of the lesion.

An important characteristic to be noted is that in more than two-thirds of the cases the albumen disappears even in the urine after digestion if the patient takes absolute rest in bed for several days.

It would seem that gastric albuminuria depends on the post-digestive absorption of a portion of the alimentary albumen, which, being unaffected by the gastric juice, and not combining with the salts of the organism nor being transformed by the circulating oxygen, constitutes a kind of foreign substance in the system, from which it is removed by means of the kidneys. But if this abnormal function is prolonged for any length of time the kidneys in their turn become affected and after first of all showing signs of fatigue they end by undergoing alterations in their texture.

The albuminuria must therefore be treated without delay, and also the particular kind of dyspepsia which gives rise to it.

For this purpose it is well, first of all, to make a diagnosis of the form of the dyspepsia in question. Then by means of preliminary alimentary experiments one must determine the classes of foods which in the course of digestion give the least quantity of albumen eliminable by the urine.

These preliminary experiments serve as a guide for fixing the dietary of the patient. Most frequently an absolute milk diet is the one found requisite to begin with. But there are cases, and fairly numerous cases, in which ordinary milk tends to augment the albumen in the urine, particularly in dyspeptics with butyric fermentation, while, on the contrary, sterilised milk is found to reduce the albuminuria.

Hence, a beginning may be made with an absolutely milk regimen, either ordinary or sterilized milk being used, as found most suitable. The patient must at the same time be recommended to remain in bed or at least to take a long rest in bed with a minimum of movement, and must be urgently required to lie down after each milk repast and to remain in this position for half an hour, with a hot water apparatus over the stomach for the circulation.

In the third period the milk is stopped. The dietary may then include some light fish, such as sole and whiting; next chicken and roast beef, while still making the greatest use of vegetable foods.

If the preliminary experiments have shown that milk increases the amount of albumen, the procedure is then modified according to individual cases by insisting on a vegetable regimen or more rarely on a meat dietary. It is seldom that a strict application of a suitable dietary fails to cause the albuminuria to disappear.

It is impossible here to insist on the series of medicaments which are suitable for use concurrently with the various phases of the regimen followed in the cure of dyspeptic albuminuria. It is important not to lose sight of the fact that rapid treatment is necessary in order to avoid the danger of temporary albuminuria, independent of any renal lesion, becoming persistent.

It is indispensable that the patient should know how to test for albumen himself and that he should apply the test not merely every day, but, several times each day. The treatment should be the more rigorously instituted the more the albumen persists.

"Dr. Miles' Nervine Raised Me From the Grave"—Mrs. Taylor

This is a strong statement to make, but it is exactly what Mrs. Thomas Taylor, of Hearn, Texas, said in expressing her opinion of this remedy.

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine raised me from the grave and I have much confidence in it. I can never say enough for your grand medicines. If anyone had offered me $100.00 for the second bottle of Nervine that I used I would have said 'no indeed.'"

MRS. THOMAS TAYLOR, Hearn, Tex.

Nervous exhaustion is a common occurence of modern life. The wear and tear on the nervous system is greater now than at any time since the world began. For sleeplessness, poor appetite and that "run down" feeling, nothing is so good as

Dr. Miles' Nervine

THE SMALLEST REPUBLIC

The Island of Tavolara, has a Population of Only 56.

The smallest Republic in the world, without contradiction is that of Tavolara, a little island situated about 7½ miles from Sardinia. It is a little more than a mile in length, and has a population of 56. The sovereignty of the island was recorded in 1836 by King Charles Albert to the Bartoleoni family. Up to 1882 Paul I. reigned peaceably over his little island Kingdom, but at his death the islanders proclaimed a Republic. By the Constitution of the Republic the President is elected for ten years, and women exercise the franchise.

POISONED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

"When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For years there I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicines for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 24.—The demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat for May-June shipment continues dull, but there was a fair enquiry from Glasgow for nearby shipment, which orders are difficult for exporters to fill on account of the scarcity of freight and the difficulty in getting wheat forward from the west. There was some demand for oats for shipment and an bids were in line a few loads were sold. A good business is being done on spot in car lots of oats and corn. Flour is fairly active and the demand for bran and shorts is good. Butter is firm under a good demand.

Bruchesi Blames Minister.

Montreal, Feb 26.—His grace the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Montreal preached yesterday in the cathedral in order, no doubt, to meet the comments coming from Justice Charbonneau's judgment. His grace commented on the marriage question from the Catholic standpoint, saying that the people of Quebec always supposed that the civil law here confirmed automatically a judgment of the ordinary dissolving of a marriage when the minister is not a competent party. A judgment in the contrary sense had just been delivered and his grace hoped that final decision will be reached in the higher courts. He strongly condemned non-Catholic minister for marrying two Catholics, generally presenting themselves before him with what he called a civil permit. If these ministers had not done this, all this trouble and dissension would have been avoided, and, speaking for the Catholic clergy, Mgr. Bruchesi declared that no priest would marry two Protestants.

Referring to the future, his grace said: "Come what may, the Catholic marriage will always be a sacrament and can never be infringed upon by the civil law."

Used Third Degree.

New York, Feb. 26.—Winnifred Ankers, an attendant at the Brooklyn Nursery and Infants' Hospital, was arraigned Saturday in magistrates court in Brooklyn, charged with homicide in connection with the death of eight infants at the Hospital since last Sunday.

The woman's confession came after a grilling examination, during which she broke down when told that they would take her baby away from her if she did not tell the truth. The Ankers woman then told how the babies had been poisoned.

In her confession to the police the Ankers woman said that she put two or three drops of oxalic acid in the bottles of milk prepared for the babies. She said she removed the stoppers of about 14 and dropped the acid in. There were 30 bottles of milk in the ice box and she was still dropping the acid in when she heard some one coming. She stopped for fear of detection.

The Ankers woman is only 24 years of age and has been an attendant in the hospital for the last ten months, since her baby was born. She is an orphan and was adopted by a family named Ankers. Of recent years she is said to have lived a life of uncertain habits.

Senator Miller Buried.

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—A great many friends of the late Hon. William Miller, P.C., K.C., of Arichat, N.S., who died in Ottawa on Friday, paid their last marks of respect to the deceased by attending the funeral, which was held yesterday afternoon from the Senator's late residence. The funeral was marked by a large representation of Senators and members, while there were also a number of personal friends and prominent citizens of Ottawa.

The late Senator expressed the desire in his will that if he died in Ottawa, his remains be interred in this city.

An Ancient Bat.

Near the ancient country seat of the Carews in Cornwall, England, stands a quaint old church, to the door of which are nailed four horse-shoes. These have been in their present position for nearly 500 years. A former member of the Carew family made a wager with a friend that he would ride his horse a mile out to sea in Tor Bay and back again. The feat was more difficult than appears at first sight, for the cross-currents are dangerous, even for boats.

He won the bet, however, and nailed the four horse-shoes of his steed to the church-door to commemorate the performance.

An Exaggerated Report.

Editor—You say here in your report that Mr. Jones has "taken a partner for life."

Reporter—Well, I suppose the expression is a trifle bromidic.

Editor—It isn't its bromidic quality I was thinking of, but don't you know our policy is never to be extravagant or dogmatic in our statements?—Boston Transcript.

THE ICE STOVE.

Dr. Graham Bell Has Beaten the "Dog Days" Problem.

Prof. Alexander Graham Bell, the Canadian inventor of the telephone, and scientist of world-wide fame, has recently invented and constructed an apparatus for cooling dwelling houses in summer at small cost and with simple operation, which has been used with much success in the inventor's home during the hot spells of the summer.

While other dwellers on his street sweltered and wilted under the torrid temperature that rose daily to 90 degrees, Prof. Bell sat comfortably at work in his study. On his desk the thermometer, throughout the whole summer, has never registered higher than 61 degrees.

While there are numberless appliances for cooling buildings, they are, for the most part, adapted only to large structures, and are of a costly and complicated nature, dependent upon involved mechanism and many-syllabled chemicals, requiring an expert to operate. Prof. Bell's latest invention avoids all these objections.

His first became interested in the subject during a recent tour of the world, being much impressed in India and other tropical countries with the total absence in the dwelling houses, even of the wealthy classes, of all means of tempering the fierce heat. When he returned to the United States he at once addressed his talents to devising an apparatus that, while avoiding the objections of high cost and complex operation, would yet achieve satisfactory results in the cooling of private dwellings. With characteristic energy he soon conceived and constructed an appliance which, he thought, would fill the requirements. Nature aided him, for hardly had he installed this latest creation of his genius when a series of blistering hot spells put it to a crucial test.

This is the method of constructing the "ice stove," as it is now installed in Prof. Bell's home in Washington:

On the window ledge is set a small fan, about six feet in diameter. It is operated by a small electric motor attached by a wire to an electric light socket. The fan is enclosed in a casing. Under the lower sash of the window is set a board in which is a 9-1-2 inch hole. A short pipe connects this hole with the encased fan, thus supplying pure air from outdoors. Another pipe runs from the fan casing to a large wooden box, which formerly served as a pantry ice box, about three feet high and broad, and about four feet long. In this box are cakes of ice. The lid fits with airtight snugness. From the opposite side of the box at which the pipe from the fan enters, another pipe leads off to the apartments to be cooled in just the same manner that hot air pipes lead from a heating furnace. This pipe is heavily encased in asbestos. When this service pipe comes through the wall into the room to be cooled, it runs down to within about three inches of the floor, the end being open for the discharge of the cold air.

All that is necessary to cool the room is to turn on the electric current and start the fan. This draws the air in through the window pipe and drives it through the connecting pipe into the ice box. Here the pressure of the air from behind, due to the driving power of the fan, forces it across the ice, thereby cooling it, and thence on into and through the service pipe, whence it is discharged into the room.

Time Brought Revenge.

Dr. Kaiser, upon whose lawn the famous tent was erected, in which the meetings were held, had been the centre, not only of this, but of previous political battles. In 1908 Mr. Fowke was elected, and by way of soothing the wounded feelings of the doctor, some ingenious, but good humored Grit walked to the door of the town physician and tied a lemon to the door knob. This was discovered next morning, and (it meaning fully read, but the doctor concluded that "there would come another day. So the lemon was preserved and hidden away for three years.

At the demonstration on the night of Sept. 21, when Mr. Fowke was defeated, the lemon was brought to light amidst an uproar of laughter, and a reward offered of a Government job to the man who would hang the lemon on the defeated candidate's door. A procession of enthusiasts carried out the project.

Ontario Railway Mileage.

Ontario's railway mileage totals 9,047.94. During 1910 there were completed and opened for traffic, according to the report of the Public Works Department, just issued, 227.32 miles of railway. Of the 787.36 miles of the Transcontinental across Ontario, all of which have been located, 531 miles have been graded, and 265 miles of tracks laid. On the Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway 66 miles are under construction.

Prior to Confederation the railway mileage in Ontario totalled 1,447.5 miles. Since then 7,597.44 miles have been completed. There are now 702.77 miles under construction. The total electric railway mileage is 728.73. There are under construction 67.5 miles.

Hon. Mr. Parent.

Hon. Simon Napoleon Parent, who is retiring from his position as chairman of the National Transcontinental Railway Commission, as a result of the overthrow of the Government which appointed him, is a Quebec lawyer, who has been a civic and political leader at the Ancient Capital for many a year. He started by becoming an alderman of Quebec city in 1890. Then he became successively mayor, member of the Quebec Legislature, member of the Cabinet, and Provincial Premier. He resigned the Premiership in 1901 to accept the position he is giving up. He is a fine-looking man fifty-six years of age.

First Sunday School.

It is a hundred years ago this month since the first Protestant Sunday school was inaugurated in Brockville, which was then known as the Village of Elizabethtown.

It five feet stand of books he got.
Somehow his courage flinches.
For, though he much admires the lot,
He hasn't read three inches.

ABSENTMINDED.

Men of Genius Whose Thoughts Were Wont to Wander Astray.

Absorption in their work is often carried to such extremes as to make men of genius strangely oblivious to what is going on around them. Many amusing stories are told illustrative of this tendency to "absentmindedness." According to Sir David Brewster, when Newton left a room to get anything he usually returned without it.

The physicist Rouelle was notoriously absentminded. One day while performing a laboratory experiment he said to his students:

"You see, gentlemen, this caldron over the flames? Well, if I were to cease stirring it an explosion would at once occur that would make us jump."

As he spoke he involuntarily ceased stirring, and his prediction was fulfilled. The explosion took place with a frightful noise, every window in the laboratory was broken, and Rouelle's audience fled wildly outside.

It is related of a gifted ecclesiastic, Bishop Munster, that, returning home and finding his door placarded with the announcement, "The master of the house is out," he calmly remained in front of the door, awaiting his own return.

Burton, the mathematical prodigy, during a visit to London was taken to see Garrick in "King Richard III." Afterward, being asked how he liked the play, he said he really did not know what it had been about, as he had been too busy counting the words spoken by the different actors and the number of times each went in and out.

Ampère in a moment of preoccupation perched a problem on the back of a cab standing in the street and was vastly astonished when the starting of the cab caused his problem to disappear. Lombroso says that much the same thing happened to Gioia, who, in the excitement of composition, wrote a chapter on the top of his bureau instead of on paper.—Amslee's Magazine.

GREAT ENGLISH COAL STRIKE BEGINS
DERBYSHIRE MINERS FORSAKE THEIR PITS

Others Will Follow Suit and There Will Be 600,000 or 700,000 Men Off Work by Thursday of This Week.

A CONFERENCE TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., FEB. 26.—To-day sees the actual commencement of the long-talked-of coal strike. Fortunately strikes in England are not carried out simultaneously. They come in instalments, like the elections. This morning the men of the Derbyshire mines forsook their pits; to-morrow, the Nottinghamshire men, next day, Yorkshire, etc., until on Thursday night, unless some settlement is made in the meantime, there will be from six hundred thousand to seven hundred thousand men on strike. There was to have been a conference this morning between representatives of the men, owners, and government. The Daily Mail in out this morning with an editorial, demanding that the Government prevent the strike and keep the mining going, even if they have to put soldiers in the mines. All troops at Aldershot have had their leave stopped, presumably to have them in readiness to proceed to the strike-affected districts at a moment's notice.

Mr. Donaldson's singing is vivacious and spirited, given with a clear mellow voice of well-balanced calibre. The admission will be the same—only 5c.

Mr. King is keeping the Princess in the proud position of being the cleanest and best amusement theatre in the city.

MILITARY WEEK AT THE CAPITAL

Special Wire to The Examiner.

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—This is military week in Ottawa, every day being taken up with some sort of convention of a military character. This morning a corps of Guides commenced their deliberations and will continue this afternoon and to-morrow with a banquet as an incidental this evening. All information has been refused to the press until the convention is ended. To-morrow the Dominion Rifle Association meets, then comes the artillery and cavalry association, and the military medical association will also foregather. In the midst of it all the South African veterans will celebrate Pardieburg Day with a banquet at Rideau Hall.

MARRIED FOR A JOKE

Special to The Examiner.

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 26.—A tenday mystery concerning the strange disappearance of the girl who was married to George E. Watson, a fifty-two-year-old wealthy Saskatchewan farmer, by Rev. Doctor Ebenezer Crummy, and was lost by Watson in a big departmental store just after leaving the minister's house, was unravelled to-day when Miss Dorothy Rogers, the pretty eighteen-year-old daughter of a civil engineer, prominent here, confessed to the authorities that she was Mrs. Watson, having met and married him through a matrimonial advertisement just for a joke, then deliberately deserted him. The parents will appeal for annulment.

Livery Horse Figures In Runaway

The solemnity of a peaceful Sabbath was somewhat rudely broken by the impromptu performance of a livery horse in charge of Mr. J. Boyette. When the driver went to alight in front of his residence yesterday afternoon the horse made a break for liberty, and succeeded in covering a couple of miles at a record-breaking clip. The animal was finally captured, and on investigation revealed the fact that little or no damage had been incurred to the outfit.

LAID IN SUPPLY OF LIQUOR IN ANTICIPATION OF DRY SPELL

Local Man Fined $13.40 for Contravention of Act Governing Blacklisters---Wm. Lavery Failed to Put in an Appearance.

Allan Armstrong, a carter, pleaded guilty in the Police Court, this morning, to a charge of being under the influence of liquor while on the black list, and requested that the case be conducted in private. His Worship refused to take the suggestion seriously, however, and to the evident satisfaction of the "railbirds," he insisted that the case be conducted in the usual way.

In the witness box, the defendant stated that this was his second term as a blacklister, he having been put on the Indian list in January last, for the second time. On this occasion, knowing that he was about to be placed on the Indian list again, he laid in a small supply. This, he claimed was responsible for his down fall on Thursday last.

He was fined $13.40 with ten days to pay it in, in default of payment, thirty days in gaol.

Wm. Lavery, with a charge of being drunk and disorderly registered against him, failed to respond to the call of his name in court, this morning. The Court suspended business for two minutes in the hope that Lavery would put in an appearance, but when he failed to show up at the expiration of that time, other business was taken up.

A summons will be issued for Lavery's appearance.

Peterborough Might Have Been "Bourg de Pierre"

Toronto Star Weekly: Announcement that the Postmaster-General has reconsidered his decision to change the name of Blind River, Ont., to Riviere a l'Aveugle has been received with mixed feelings. Blind River may burn bonfires, but there are those who will never cease to regret that the letters from Ontario towns will not bear the postmarks which had been prepared by certain volunteer advisers of the Cabinet Ministers among the Nationalists.

STRENUOUS CAMPAIGN

Brampton Man Goes to Gaol for Three Months for Selling Liquor Without a License

A BREWERY CASE

Special to The Examiner:

BRAMPTON, ONT., FEB. 26.—Being unable to pay a fine of $500 for selling liquor in this no-license town, George Harte, this morning, went to jail for three months.

This is part of a strenuous campaign by the temperance people here to clean out the "blind pigs" which they fear may throw discredit on the administration of no license law, and cause the commissioners to issue licenses on May 1st, as they have power to do so. There is great indignation and further prosecutions will result, following the discovery that certain brewery companies had distributing warehouses in town to deliver liquor from. A test case affecting all the cities in Ontario will be made.

SEVERELY BURNED

IS OUT OF DANGER

A pathetic incident occurred yesterday, when little Violet Tobin, the nine year old daughter of Mr. Patrick Tobin, of 598 Donegal street, narrowly escaped a horrible death by burning.

The occurrence took place in a neighbour's house, and when discovered, the little one was pluckily attempting to extinguish the flames which, commencing in her sleeve, ran up to her head, burning the left side of her face and hair. She was badly scaped and was almost speechless. Messrs. Comstocks ambulance was called for and took the injured child to St. Joseph's Hospital, where her burns were attended to by Dr. Gallivan.

It is understood that the child on seeing the fire was low, attempted to rekindle it when, in some manner, the flames caught her sleeve. She was badly burned about the left arm and face and had a narrow escape from losing her eye, which was badly bloodshot. Violet had kindled fires on her own initiative many times previously.

On enquiry at St. Joseph's hospital this afternoon it was discovered that the little girl is doing nicely and is out of danger.

A SMALL FIRE.

A chimney fire at 718 Wolfe St. gave the Fire Department a run this afternoon. The alarm was responded to during the progress of a blinding stiff head wind. When the firemen arrived at the scene of the conflagration the fire had almost burned itself out, with the result that a few gallons of chemical was all that was needed to subdue the flames. The house was occupied by Mr. John Foster. No damage was done.

"MADAME SHERRY" BIGGEST HIT IN A SCORE OF YEARS IS COMING ON SATURDAY

George W. Lederer's name as a producer of musical pieces usually spells something near the last word in approximate perfection of production. Playgoers familiar with the manager's successes while he held forth at the New York Casino, at a time when he controlled the fortunes of Lillian Russell, Jefferson De Angelis, Walter Jones, David Warfield, Louis Mann, Edna May, Maybelle Gilman, Paul Edwardes and other stars had opportunity during that period to observe the finished quality of his theatrical equipments. In "Madame Sherry," a musical production that has scored a success of greater popular magnitude than any musical piece offered in the metropolis in a score of years the Lederer touch and the Lederer manner are said to be vitally contributing elements accounting for the production's furore. Aside from the notes of mirth struck by the story—and past performances has demonstrated that no one better than Lederer knows how to effect stage fun—"Madame Sherry" is said to fascinate not alone by its score with its ravishing "Ev'ry Little Movement Has a Meaning All Its Own" theme, but to enthrall as well by the general beauty shimmering throughout the production's three acts. The scenic opportunities for the Lederer artistry are a New York gilded youth's studio, with bevies of dancing feminine guests devoted to Grecian terpsichore, the salon of a millionaire's yacht, under full sail in the waters off Coney Island, with her feminine guests as models for the Lederer ingenuity and taste in costuming. The conduct of every member of the cast which term takes in the feminine chorus, is said, too, to reflect this general sense of beauty, a quality that one unconsciously appreciates, who listens to many of the airs of the published score of the production. "Madame Sherry" is to be presented here at the Grand next Saturday, March 2nd, with special matinee at 2.30.

REPUBLICANS ARE SORE

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, N.Y., FEB. 26.—That Roosevelt is in the Presidential nomination campaign in earnest, is indicated by the fact that permanent headquarters of his campaign committee were opened on Madison Ave. this morning. President Taft refuses to comment on Roosevelt's declaration.

The Herald (Republican) editorially slops Roosevelt hard for breaking his promises and providing a great opportunity for the Democrats by cleavage in the Republican party. Many prominent Republicans look on his attitude with serious antagonism.

Will Hon. Mr. Monk Surrender?

OTTAWA, ONT., FEB. 26.—The arrival of Archbishop Bruchesi of Montreal accompanied by Archbishop Gauthier of Ottawa, adds another element of strength to the clerical forces fighting for the establishment of Separate schools in Manitoba. The two archbishops arrived quietly in Ottawa on the eleven o'clock train from Montreal last night. The rumour is this morning revived that Hon. F. D. Monk has laid down his arms before the steady Nationalist pressure. The surrender of the Minister of Public Works would of course mean the end of his political prestige in Quebec. He would remain unbeatable in Jacques Cartier, but would be of little further use to the government through out the province.

THE POST OFFICE CHANGE.

The recent change made in the incumbency of the Peterborough post office, and the manner and underlying facts, of the change, show that the late Liberal government regarded such matters from a different point of view than that which influences the Conservative government, or rather its local representative. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier came to power in 1896, strong pressure was brought to bear for the removal of Mr. John J. Hall, Inspector of Inland Revenue. The responsible members of the Liberal party deprecated any such action so long as Mr. Hall was at all able to perform his duties; and as a result he was allowed to retain the position till his death. Every one knows that up to the time of the elections of 1896, the Trent Canal office was an active party centre, and that Mr. George Giroux, as he himself will perhaps admit, was a partisan with others. Yet, when a change of government came, Mr. Giroux, assuming a position of neutrality, was permitted to retain his position, and held it for fifteen years under a Liberal government, with advance of salary, and still is in office. Mr. H. C. Rogers remained postmaster at Peterborough, for twelve years under the Liberal government, till with advancing years, he resigned his position of his own accord. Mr. Burnham when dealing with the postmastership might well have remembered the consideration that was extended his old room-mate. Efforts were also made to secure the removal of Mr. Pearce, the Norwood postmaster, but considerations of efficient fulfilment of the duties of the office, kept him undisturbed. The vacancies that occurred in the Peterborough Customs, were from the nature of things, unavoidable.

There is no doubt that the change in the local postmastership had no shadow of justification on the grounds of inefficient discharge of the duties of the office by the late postmaster. There was no party reason, either, for the majority of the responsible and substantial members of the Conservative party, were opposed to the change, especially when the general qualifications, and claims to party preferment of the new postmaster are considered; and while his personal political relations, perhaps, justify the statement that the post office incident, has many of the earmarks of a prearranged understanding as to the disposal of an important public office.

There is no ground for contesting the fact that the late postmaster was improperly and meanly removed—and not for the cause assigned. There is nomore offensive and unscrupulous partisanship than that shown by the new incumbent. There have been no complaints made of ineffective post office service, and even if there had been, no one will contend that the new appointment was made, or could be defended upon the grounds of securing more effective public service in connection with the post office.

One thing is certain; the change in postmastership meets with the disapproval of the general public independently of politics. There is, perhaps, nobody relieved of office, better able to take care of himself than the late postmaster; but that does not justify the evil principle that lies behind the change, which was not made in the interests of better public service, but to discharge obligations incurred in respect of hole and corner arrangements, at the expense of respectable members of the party in whose name they were independently made. The whole affair, from beginning to end, emphasize san unfitness to represent West Peterborough, even if the fact of enjoying the position under false pretenses—voting contrary to the issues upon which election was got, were not thrown into the scale.

Shiloh's Cure

NAMING A PROVINCE.

The Toronto Star is patriotically worrying over its new title for New Ontario. It still sticks to Upper Ontario as the proper thing. How would the Star like to modify its first impression and accept Superior Ontario. This would meet the views of those enthusiasts who believe in the superior quality of the northern country, and would have a geographical fitness of application in respect of the regions bordering on, and contiguous to, Lake Superior. If an agreement is found difficult to reach upon the question of nomenclature, the matter could be speedily settled, by referring it to Hon. Mr. Pelletier, Postmaster-General. He has no difficulty in finding new names, albeit they are French, for "English-speaking" post offices, and he is by this time pretty well warmed up to the work of tackling the re-naming of a part of a province.

LIMITING ITS USEFULNESS.

The Tariff Commission is to be defended, on the principle of its utility; but it must be allowed to operate, as far as possible, for one of the main objects, the removal of the tariff from the domain of party politics. It is defensible as a valuable instrument in collecting information upon which parliament can base an intelligent adjustment of the tariff. It goes without saying that the facts it collects should be placed at the disposal of the Government as the responsible body; but it also follows that parliament, to which the Government is responsible, should be placed in possession of the information as well, so that there can be intelligent consideration of the proposals of the Government. There seems to be a disposition to reserve the facts gathered by the tariff commission for the exclusive use of the Government. Upon this point the Montreal Herald remarks:

> What Mr. Pugsley, Mr. A. K. Maclean and others of the Opposition critics are showing, with the help of overzealous Conservative members, is that the proposed Tariff Commission is not what the public have been led to expect, and what, one ventures to think, the bulk of the people who take note of it at all are convinced it will be. The ostensible reason for establishing a Tariff Board is that the Tariff shall no more be a politician's affair. There will be a Board, and the Board will get information, and by the information the tariff duties will be set. So, no Cabinet, no Finance Minister, no Parliament, can go wrong, because, with the facts there, they would instantly be caught at it. That is what nineteen men in twenty see to be good in the Tariff Board. But Mr. Maclea and Mr. Pugsley have just been forcing the Conservative Ministers and members to vote down the proposal to make the facts known. The Minister of Finance is to get the information, yes, but not the House of Commons, not the people of Canada. The proposal to have the Board's proceedings and findings reported to Parliament was voted down, and then shouted down. But the plain man who heard or read Mr. Borden's pledge may ask, in that case, what good is the Board? Precisely Mr. Pugsley's point. The Board, it is clear, will neither take the tariff out of politics, nor politics out of the tariff. And yet that is what they want us to believe it is for.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

There's a prospect of another Dominion bye-election. The latest rumour to spread about the corridors of the Parliament buildings in Ottawa is to the effect that there may be another bye-election soon. It was reported in the papers some days ago that Mr. A. H. Clarke, of South Essex, is to take up his residence permanently in Calgary, resigning his seat in South Essex. The rumour is to the effect that Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King will get the nomination.

The old-age pension scheme, in spite of its distinguished paternity, does not seem to meet even the approval of the Tory Mayor of Tory Toronto. "I don't think an old-age pension scheme is needed in this country. It would tend to pauperise people," said Mayor Geary to-day, when the controllers received a request from the special committee of the House of Commons, now dealing with the problem, for information and opinions on it.

The controllers agreed with the Mayor's opinion, but decided to give the special committee information about the number of people over 60 asking for relief.

THE SUPREME COURT SHOULD BE SUPREME.

(Toronto Star)

"We have no doubt that the judgments of the Privy Council are correct, and that the Canadian courts are wrong," says the Toronto World, which is at present in a very dutiful and docile frame of mind.

Then it proceeds to blame our own judges for their inability to interpret contracts the way the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council does, and those of our lawyers who represent the interests of municipalities and governments as against companies. Hon. S. H. Blake in the hey-day of his power, drew up Toronto's contract with the Street Railway Company. Yet of what use was that contract a few years later, when spread before a court three thousand miles away, and in a country where the civic and social conditions bear little resemblance to our own? Ingenious judgments were given releasing the company from one obligation after another under the agreement.

Statesmen beyond the Atlantic could not govern this country from Downing street because they could never comprehend the thousand differences between conditions there and here. Nor can their juries comprehend the values and propositions of the issues they are handling. They are too far away. They do not understand that a Canadian Company is far from being inspired by the sense of obligation of an English company. They do not understand that a public agitation which in England would present the horrid front of Socialism may here be a sound and progressive movement with no horrid front at all and containing no menace to any interest that is honest.

The World talks about "jokers" in the contracts drawn up between the public and companies. The one gigantic joker in all such contracts is that these agreements can be carried out of the country, across the ocean, and brought back in shreds—carried abroad where the public interests as they exist here are not comprehended, but where the world-wide and universal interests of investing capitalists have had profound investigation.

It is a system that we have outgrown, and there is no sound reason why a contract should be taken outside the country for final interpretation. There should be appeals to the judicial committee of the Privy Council on constitutional questions only.

The position taken by the Star will bear discussion; it is simply a suggested phase of evolution of national autonomy. Canada has long since reached the stage of legislative autonomy, of administration autonomy, of fiscal autonomy; and it seems logical to think that if we Canadians can make—and administer our own laws without reference to a superior power, we are competent to interpret our own laws. We are always getting farther away from the days when our destinies were subject to the fiat of Downing street; and the recognition of the supremacy of the Supreme Court of Canada is only a natural evolutionary step. The Star's suggestion that the step should be gradual to the extent of reserving constitutional question to the Privy Council also involves a national course of procedure.

MEN ARE HELPLESS AS INFANTS

The sturdiest chap in town usually loses his self-control, and is utterly unable to regard his condition with the common sense that characterizes the every-day actions.

For example: He comes home tired, eats a heavy dinner and sits down to read and smoke away a quiet evening.

Suddenly he notices a weight on his stomach; then sharp pains around his heart, and a feeling of suffocation. Thoughts of heart disease" rush over him, and in his agony he fears the worst.

A couple of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets might have given him relief—might have saved him hours of suffering.

Carry a package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets in your vest pocket or keep them in your room, take one after each heavy meal, and ward off indigestion.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets relieve stomach troubles by aiding nature to supply those elements, the absence of which in the gastric juices, causes indigestion and dyspepsia. They tend to aid the stomach to digest all kinds of food and to quickly convert it into rich red blood.

We know what Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are and what they will do. We guarantee them to relieve indigestion and dyspepsia. If they fail, we will refund your money.

Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Sold only at our stores or by mail. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—McDermid and Jury.

St. George's Choral Society

The St. George's Society will hold their first annual concert early in April in the Grand Opera House. It is intended to put on a high-class concert, and to call on nothing but local talent, and it is safe to say this can be done. The Choral Society are practising glees, part songs, etc., by such celebrated composers as Sir Edward Elgar, Lord Mornington, Pinsuti, etc. The society was formed in the beginning of the present year, and now has about seventy members. One of the objects of the society was to encourage a taste for music of what might be termed "the higher class". This object seems to be near fulfillment and the Peterborough public will probably be given the opportunity of hearing Handel's "Messiah" in the near future. Practically every church choir in the city is represented in the membership, and, although most of these hail from over the sea, the committee will be pleased to see any ladies and gentlemen interested in choral work, attend the rehearsals, and become members. The Society is entirely undenominational. All Saints' Parish hall has been secured for rehearsals through the kindness of the Wardens. Intending members are requested to join at once in order to attend the necessary number of rehearsals for the April concert.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS
Your druggist will refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days. 50c.

BELL OF ST. LUKE'S FALLS TO EARTH

While proclaiming the advent of morning service and while yet the worshippers were entering the church of St. Luke's, yesterday morning, the bell suddenly lost its attachment, and, falling on the roof of the porch, tumbled off on to Mother Earth. Sexton Legen sustained a bad fright, but the damage resulting from the incident was confined to the bell only, which, before replacing, will require repairing. No one was sufficiently near at hand to sustain injury.

Scott's Love Affair

This was not Scott's first love affair, but it was equally genuine, says a writer in the Bookman. Some four years previously he had chanced to meet at the Greyfriar's Church in Edinburgh, a very charming young lady of seventeen. As the Sunday service closed an unexpected shower came up. Scott had an umbrella and the lady had none—sufficient reason for escorting the fair one to her house. There was also sufficient reason for falling in love with her, for Miss Williamina Stuart was not only beautiful in face and figure, but lovely in character. Highly educated, accomplished in music and painting, well versed in literature and with the best family conections, she was still a sweet girl, of charming manners and no affectation. For three years Scott cherished the most ardent feelings of love, but in silence. He was then a young man of small worldly prospects. He had written nothing and was unknown outside the circle of friends in the law courts, where he was but a beginner. This, however, would not have been an insurmountable difficulty had the love been mutual. But the young lady had already given her heart unreservedly to an intimate friend of Scott's, William Forbes, a man of noble character. She gave Scott no encouragement, but frequently wrote him in a friendly way, chiefly concerning literary topics. After many months of patient restraint Scott finally wrote her a frank and unreserved declaration of his feelings, and received in reply a letter which filled him with many forebodings but with "new admiration of her generosity and candour." She urged upon him the continuation of their simple friendship as the "prudent line of conduct." Unfortunately, Scott read between the lines, as too hopeful persons sometimes do, sentiments which were not intended. The final disappointment came in the autumn of 1796, and in the following January Miss Stuart became the bride of Walter Scott's successful rival.

Peterborough Will Have A Team In The Canadian Baseball League

Strong Committee Appointed at Saturday Night's Meeting to Work Out the Details.

SECRETARY WAS HERE

It is practically certain, as a result of Saturday night's meeting that Peterborough will be represented by a team in the Canadian Professional Baseball League this season. Mr. M. M. Robinson, of Hamilton, sporting editor of the Hamilton Spectator, and Secretary of the Canadian Professional Baseball League, was in the city on Saturday, and met a number of local baseball enthusiasts, the whole matter being gone into thoroughly. An interesting feature was the announcement that if a local stock company was not formed to operate the team, the League itself would, in all probability place a team in Peterborough. Mr. Robinson however stated that the League officials would greatly prefer to have the team under management of Peterborough people, believing that better patronage, and better results, generally, would be given with local men interested in the proposition.

The Secretary gave the history of the six western towns and cities which formed the League last season, giving the figures as to cost and receipts. All had a splendid season last year in spite of the fact that the first year is always the experimental one. Hamilton had cleaned up $3,000, London had a large surplus, Chancer Elliott did well in St. Thomas, "Pop" Williams, owner of the Berlin team, was ahead of the game, and even Guelph, where the team lost fifteen games in succession, there was but a small deficit. This year, with Ottawa and Peterborough added to the circuit, the League will be given Class C rating, and there is every prospect of a most successful season. In mapping up the schedule every effort is made to give the teams the best chance for good gates and, as far as possible, Peterborough will be given home games on the last three days of the week, so as to take advantage of the Thursday half-holiday and Saturday afternoons.

A strong committee was appointed at Saturday's meeting, which will set to work at once to form a stock company here to carry on the club. Judging from those who are already taking an interest in the project no difficulty will be experienced in securing the necessary capital and everything looks most promising.

A team in the strong Canadian Baseball League will put Peterborough on the sporting map with a vengeance this summer, and will solve the problem of amusement for the citizens of this city. The announcement that Peterborough is to be represented will be received with supreme satisfaction by the fans.

Among those suggested as Manager and the one who is most highly recommended is "Old Folks" Templin, second baseman of the champion Berlin team last year. Templin is at present at his home in Reading, Pa., but is prepared to accept the position should it be offered to him.

The League season will be opened on May 19th and end on Labour Day.

President Fitzgerald, of the Canadian Baseball League, Who Will Likely Visit Peterborough This Week to Discuss the Local end of the League

LAKEFIELD AND HASTINGS PLAY ON WEDNESDAY

Lakefield and Hastings will make an effort on Wednesday night to settle their differences and decide which team will have an opportunity of playing off for the Trent Valley League silverware. The teams were to have played last Wednesday night but the weatherman blocked the contest. A great deal of interest is being taken in the meeting of these two teams and both towns will run an excursion to Peterborough, bringing many rooters. Brock Street Rink will undoubtedly contain the biggest Trent Valley crowd of the season on Wednesday night.

THE Y. M. C. A. LEADERS HAD A FINE TRIP TO TORONTO

The Intermediate and Senior Leaders Corps of the local Y.M.C.A. journeyed to Toronto on Saturday to be the guests of the Toronto Central Leaders Corps, where a most enjoyable time was spent. Upon their arrival they were entertained to dinner at the Broadview Branch by Mr. Gilchrist, late General Secretary of the local association. The boys took a trip to the West End Association new building and were conducted through the building by Mr. A. Pearson, one of the secretaries.

The boys were then taken in tow by the Central men, who led the way to the Toronto University gymnasium where the Intercollegiate boxing, wrestling and fencing championships were being conducted, and all enjoyed the contests immensely.

At 6.30 all sat down to a banquet at the Central Building. After the speeches and programme were concluded, all adjourned to the gymnasium, where two fine games of basketball were played by teams from East Hamilton, West End and Central teams. At half-time, between the Central and Hamilton games the local boys gave an exhibition of long horse and springboard work, and between the halves of the second game the local boys pleased the crowd present with some parallel bar pyramids.

Sunday was spent very quietly, all meeting at the building at 10 a.m., and a short walk was taken through the Rosedale district. At four o'clock all attended the men's Bible class. Tea was served in the building at 5.30 by the Fellowship Club, to which all the Peterborough boys were invited. After tea all adjourned to the parlour, where an informal song service was held, after which all adjourned to the Strand Theatre where a large men's meeting was conducted, the Rev. Dr. Hincks giving a most helpful address. From here the boys boarded a car for North Toronto station and commenced the return journey on the 10 o'clock train. The local boys are quite thoroughly convinced that the Central Leaders are "some hosts." The local boys, one and all report a splendid time.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

There will be a meeting of the City Basketball League on Wednesday evening in the Association parlour at 7.30 to get things lined up for the season.

Members are reminded that the athletic contests will be held as follows: Junior contest, March 15th; senior contest, March 29th.

Business men's gymnasium class Tuesday at 6.00.

Senior Leaders will meet Wednesday at 6.30.

LOCAL BONSPIEL COMMENCES TUESDAY

To-morrow has been definitely settled upon as the date for the opening of the local bonspiel at the Charlotte street rink. With seven sheets of good curling ice in readiness and with the advent of cold weather, the event should prove of especial interest to curlers. There will be a primary and consolation class, and already a large number of local curlers have announced their intention of competing in these events. If the weather man refrain from butting in, the bonspiel should be concluded by Thursday or Friday. The draw was made Saturday night and the following skips will play to-morrow night: Sturgeon vs. Pinchin; Thompson vs. Yeats; Matthews vs. Foot; Ferguson vs. Campbell; Wadell vs. Morphet; Medd vs. Renwick; McDermid vs. Hall.

Four rinks will go to Orillia on Thursday to play off the second round in the Neil-Sheppard fixture.

HEFFERNAN STARRED

OTTAWA, FEB. 23. — In the final for the championship of the eastern section of the Intercollegiate Hockey Union, the Ottawa University team to-night defeated Laval by a score of 13 to 1 at the Arena. The game was played in the presence of about 2,000 spectators, and was one of the most rugged games of the season. The Laval boys made a good fight for it in the first half, but in the second they went to pieces and were outplayed and outskated at every turn. Their defence play was very loose, and their forwards had neither speed nor combination; Father Stanton's boys, on the other hand, playing a great game. They scored from all angles on the Laval team, and led the visitors at their mercy when the ball rang. Heffernan and Chartrain starred for Ottawa, while Gouvernment was the picks of the Laval team.

CANOE CLUB HAS LEAD OF FIVE

TORONTO, FEB. 26.— In the first game of the junior O.H.A. finals played at Ravina rink on Saturday night, Toronto Canoe Club defeated the Orillia seven, last year's finalists also, by the score of 7 to 2, the winners leading at half time by the score of 1-0.

The Canoeists have, therefore, the comfortable lead of five goals to work on for the final game in, Orillia to-morrow night and from their past performance as a road team should give the Orillia youngsters an even game in the northern town and incidentally be returned as junior O. H. A. champions for the season of 1911-12.

The mild weather made the ice very sticky and the play was greatly handicapped owing to players on both teams overskating the puck and misjudging the passes. However, the game was a very brilliant exhibition at times, but not as fast as it would have been had the weather kept cold.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

The Bell Telephone Co's. team keeps up its winning streak in the Mercantile League and the Hello team have yet to lose their first game. Saturday night they pulled out a 1-0 victory over the C.G.E. Machine Shop, scoring the only goal of the game a few minutes before time was called. It was a hard-fought battle all the way through. Landfield of the T. A. S. team starred for the Bell aggregation. Dwyer played his usual good game in the nets for the losers. Leo Deroaher refereed satisfactorily.

The Dominion-Montreal Bank League team will journey to Lakefield to-night to play an exhibition game with the Lakefield Trent Valley League team.

Brass Dept. vs. Controllers.

The Controller Dept. has been very anxious to "put it over" the Brass Dept., and Saturday saw them attempt it. Owing to a scarcity of skaters in the Controller Dept., Manager Guerin signed up two stars, viz., Kennally and Cassidy, who are well known to all hockey fans.

The game started at 5 p.m., Peterborough beating for choice, and his handling of the game was a fine object lesson to any budding referee, his decisions being invariably right. We should like to see these referees like Pete. The Controllers soon got busy and had the "brass" defence doing a bit of premium work, Kennedy giving the Controller bunch an idea of what was expected of them and at half time the score was 4-0 in favour of the Controllers.

But the Controllers couldn't stand the pace, and the fact that the Brass boys were "on the waggon" gave their superior stamina a chance and they just won, the Controllers down. Only the excellent display in goal by Cassidy saved their bacon. But for his superb exhibition the Brass would have won easily, and when Pete signalled the close, the game stood 5-5.

Kennedy, the O. H. A. star was worth any two of the Controllers and Guerin wasn't half bad, but he can't stay the distance and his conjuring trick two minutes from time showed how essential it is to have a good manager. Cassidy in goal, was fine, but the rest didn't live up to their reputations.

The Brass boys played their usual gentlemanly game and where all are good it is almost impossible to discriminate, but Sanderson and Capt. Russell were on top as usual. Hagerman, who played for the Brass Dept., checked very nicely and he and "H3" combined well. A severe fall on the ice shook "our shooter up" and he wasn't himself till half time, but he did well then.

The Brass and the Armature Depts. will meet at the first opportunity, possibly on Saturday next. Following were the line-ups:

Controllers—Cassidy, Adamson, Lebar, Kennedy, Bonskil, Guerin, Henthorne.

Brass—"Golden" Barnett, 'H3' Hillier, 'Sawyer' Hagerman, 'Shooter' Clute, 'Brushholder' Sanderson, 'Speed Lathe' Prest and 'Speed Merchant' Russell, capt.—Cam.

The Peterborough intermediates will practice at Brock Street rink tonight between 7 and 8 o'clock. A full attendance of members is requested, as there will in all probability be a game this week.

SPORTING NOTES

PARIS, Jan. 26.—Parisians have taken seriously to boxing. I do not mean to say that nowadays Parisians put their fists up at every street corner or that the lengthy street corner argument (which begins with a wealth of repartee and finishes after blocking the traffic for a quarter of an hour, with shoulder shrugs and mutual expressions of contempt) has now given way in Paris to the British fashion of settling discussion in the street.

The duel, with its pleasant accompaniment of publicity in print and photograph, is as popular in Paris as ever, but the sport "la boxe" (Frenchmen cannot or will not say boxing) has become the very latest thing for the amusement of fashionable Paris, and it is sinking deeper.

There was a boxing match the other night at the Cirque de Paris. Every Paris newspaper gives it the place of honour this morning, although it finished late. The Figaro, the fashionable newspaper which was the last to adhere to the aristocratic price of a penny a copy, and even now, when almost every Paris newspaper sells at a halfpenny, costs a penny a day, devoted three-quarters of a column headed, "Sensational Victory," to the match.

This was the beginning of the Figaro article:

"When the sound of the gong announced the end of the battle, which for twenty magnificent renewals of combative society set the Frenchman, Georges Carpentier, and the American, Harry Lewis, face to face, the amazed and enthusiastic crowd, without waiting for the decision of the judges, saluted with frenzied ovations the victory of our champion. Then suddenly there was dead silence—we waited in anguish for the verdict. . ." And so the writer in Figaro continues lyrically to celebrate the fact that M. Georges Carpentier has, after twenty rounds, been judged to have proven a better boxer than Mr. Harry Lewis of America.

Until a few months ago Parisians looked on boxing as a brutal occupation. It was not considered a sport at all. Parisians preferred "la savate," the art of self-defence by kicking, in which the fists play a very small part, indeed, endurance goes for little, and skill is everything. Now women, society women, and women of all classes of society, in Paris attend boxing matches, boxing is a topic of conversation, and the Cirque de Paris was a blaze of rich jewels, and the stalls and boxes were as full of handsome dresses and white shirt fronts as the stalls are on a gala evening at the opera.

Here are the prices charged for seats—which give some notion of the hold which the gentle art has gained on fashionable Paris. For every seat was filled and crowds who tried to gain admission at the last moment went away disappointed or waited in motor cars, carriages or in the crowd around the doors to hear the result of the fight which they could not get in to see.

Boxes at the Cirque de Paris cost £14 and £10 each. The first two rows of chairs round the ring were sold at £4 a chair, the third round sold at £3 and upward, and resold £4 chairs for £12 and £15. And to stand in the crowd inside the Cirque de Paris and get an occasional glimpse of the combatants over somebody's shoulder cost eight shillings.

The interest in this first big boxing match chapped the whole aspect of a very quiet neighbourhood. The Cirque de Paris is near the Invalides, and the unusual excitement must have disturbed the Little Corporal in his long, peaceful sleep under the great tomb of black marble. Long before nine o'clock (the fight was not to begin till 10, and began at 10.30 or later) motor cars, carriages and cabs commenced to put on duty to control the traffic. Enormous crowds on foot thronged not only the pavement but the roadway, and the whole impression was that of a festivity of international importance. Perhaps that is the secret. Frenchmen have suddenly admitted boxing to the rank of real sport, class it with aviation now even, and are as anxious that a Frenchman should take first rank in the ring as they are anxious for first rank in everything.

They have acquired a most amusing smattering of the jargon of the ring, and as they have not yet learned to translate boxing terms into French, talk in the crowd of "uppercute," "le knockout," "le swaiting" (swing), "les directs," and other technicalities sound quaintly on the British ear.

While the soccer code of football has not yet advanced into general popularity in this country, signs are not wanting that all over Canada and the United States this system of clean, open football, which characterizes the soccer, is rapidly coming into more general recognition.

It is a certainty that within the next five years it will be firmly established all over the country on a permanent basis. The game well deserves the distinction which it now holds throughout the world—it is the most skilful, open and spectacular form of football ever devised, and to play it properly demands pretty nearly all the qualifications that go to make the true sportsmen and athletes. Skill, speed, judgment, strength, endurance, agility, etc., are all necessary.

Played on a Big Scale

It is common knowledge that in the British Isles the game is played on a mammoth scale, with its hundreds of thousands of players and supporters by the million. It is not generally known, however, that the majority of the countris of Europe are now linked together in one big association instituted in Paris in 1904 and Milan in 1910. The name of the federation is "La Federation Internationale de Football Association," the object being to control and develop international association football. The following countries are members, and have associations which control the game in the respective jurisdictions.: Austria, Belgium, Denmark, England, France, Finland, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Luxemburg, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, South Africa, Sweden, and Switzerland.

That the above countries are potent factors in the advancement of soccer into world wide notice, and that their activities are by no means lethargic, can be gathered from statements made by Arthur Berry, of Liverpool, a well-known amateur. Mr. Berry has played football against Russians, Danes, Austrians, Finns, Swedes, Belgians, Dutchmen, Frenchmen, Swiss, South Africans, and other foreign folk.

"Football throughout Europe," Mr. Berry says, "has greatly improved during the last four years. Some of our neighbours are more than tacklers or mere hinderers to other players. They know all about the combination, about pushing and gliding the ball into position in front of the goal, and when there they can shoot.

French Too Hot-headed

"The French people appear to me as too hot-headed ever to play real scientific football, but the other northern European countries show the best points of the sport. The Dutch and the Danes are quite good. The Germans are making rapid progress, and in Holland gates of over 20,000 are not uncommon.

"The other countries of the federation are all full of enthusiasm, and their grounds are splendidly appointed and have every convenience of the well equipped, modern athletic enclosure."

Mr. Berry thinks that if Britain is to continue as the leading nation playing association football there is much need to keep the finer points of play in view and not to sacrifice science for strength and speed, which are the natural gifts of many of the nationalities that he has played against.

Soccer is the most cosmopolitan game in existence to-day, as in addition to the countries mentioned in the federation, there are many more countries not affiliated with that body.

It is not a big stretch of the imagination to foresee the time when great contests will be arranged to determine the champion country of the world in soccer football, perhaps on the plan of the Olympia games; in fact, that is already done on a small scale as the present Olympic games, when perhaps Russia versus Denmark may be the deciding issues.

Cards Stay Brief.

The St. Louis Cardinals will go to West Baden, Ind., for a week, and will finish their training in their own park in St. Louis. The Browns also will use their own park for training purposes.

It seems strange that big league teams should continually change their training camps. Frequently a manager thinks he has found an ideal training spot and the next time he goes here he gets so disgusted with the place that he swears he will never go there again.

Fred Clarke of the Pirates is perhaps the most consistent manager in the big leagues when it comes to training places. Ever since Clarke took charge of the Pirates in 1900 he has trained in Hot Springs, Ark. His team always reports later than any other big league team, as Fred does not believe in long training trips.

Johnny McGraw, manager of the Giants, thinks he has found the ideal training spot in Marlin. The Giants own their Marlin park, and McGraw is willing to back Marlin against any other place in the south. McGraw believes a ball player needs plenty of heat to get in condition, and thinks the baths in Marlin possess remarkable qualities. He recently said that as long as he is manager of the Giants Marlin will be host on the big league map.

Baseball News

Of all the 280 players who were in the American league in the season of 1901, the year when the younger organization really made its bid for equal honours with the National, only three are slated for the American league berths during the campaign of 1912. And peculiarly each of the three is still regarded as a star in his department of the game and expected to deliver the goods even as brilliantly as he did several years ago. Nap Lajoie, of Cleveland; Eddie Plank, of the Athletics, and Billy Sullivan, of the White Sox, are the three survivors. Each is likely to survive several more seasons in fast company.

In 1901, Lajoie was with the Athletics but the following spring joined the Naps, of which team he has been a member ever since. Plank, however, has remained with the Athletics all these years, Philadelphia being the only big league club to which he has belonged. Sullivan has been Chicago's mainstay behind the bat and its manager one year.

But aside from the four mentioned, there are others who were big leaguers in 1901 who cast their fortunes in with the American the following year and have been in that circuit ever since. For instance, Sam Crawford was with Cincinnati in 1901. He has been a star Tiger ever since. Bobby Wallace and Jack Powell were with the Cardinals that year, coming over to the more aggressive league the following spring. It was also in 1902 that Doc White and Bill Donovan deserted the National League and joined the White Sox and Tigers. Tom Hughes and Topsy Hartsel were members of the Chicago Nationals in 1901 and came over to the American to start the campaign of 1902. Hartsel has just left for the minors, but Tom Hughes, after an absence of one year, is again in the American, and due for another fairly successful season.

The National League can point to but six players who have served continuously since the spring of 1901. They are Wagner, Clarke and Leach of the Pirates; Mathewson of the Giants; Kling of Chicago, and now of Boston; and Chance of the Cubs, Chance then being an outfielder.

Mike Donlin and Roger Bresnahan are two other National League veterans, each of whom worked for a few seasons in the American League between 1901 and 1912. Donlin was out of the game altogether for two years.

RICHARD HALL & SON

TOM EASTWOOD IS VERY ANGRY

(From a Correspondent.)

The past two weeks have been very cold. Last week it was strong and chilly to the extreme. But there is one gentleman who resides at Buckhorn, who is the "maddest" man between Selwyn and the Monk Road. You know the post office has always been on the Smith side of the river; and for some reason, unknown to the residents of this burg, Mr. Burnham and Hon. Mr. Pelletier, the great French Nationalist chum of the "Federation," have ordered the removal of the post office to Mr. Jones' residence and place of business, across the river and half a mile distant from the old post office. The reason given, is that Mr. Shearer; the former postmaster, was an offensive partisan. But the fun of the matter is that he is not half as offensive as the new official, who is not only politically offensive, but offensive and not popular with the public in other ways, while Mr. Shearer has been as harmless as possible. But our genial Boniface, Mr. Thomas Eastwood, has been a resident of this place for many years, and the old post office has always been convenient for himself and his guests, who in the summer time, comprise the largest part of our population. Now, his guests and himself will have to go down the river, across the canal and up to Jones', before they can reach his Majesty's post office. This is the last straw to the camel's back. Tom can't stand that. After fifty years' hard fighting for his party to be thus treated is awful, not to speak of the discomoding of the residents of Smith who use the Hall's bridge post office. There is only one thing that seems left for Mr. Eastwood to do, and that is to break open a case, hang it up on a boulder in front of his door, and have the rural delivery man deliver the mail to his hostelrie by thi smeans. The blacksmith shop that used to exist on the south side of the river, is gone, and now the post office is gone, and what was once looked upon as an ambitious village in Smith, has been transplanted across the river in Harvey; and the hotel and store will be left stranded and desolate, and without benefitting anybody in any way to warrant the disturbance of the old, happy conditions. Mr. Jones, however, thinks that Mr. Eastwood should be satisfied with getting favours from one government and should let him bask a little in the sunshine of the other; and the people think that if Mr. Jones' fight for "Protestantism" only landed him the post office and if the post office will soothe Mr. Jones' wounded feelings over, Mr. Burnham's vote on the Ne Temere bill, and reconcile the good Orange voters to Mr. Burnham talking one way to them at election time, and falling into the arms of the Nationalists when he gets to parliament, then the people think that everybody is easily satisfied. Some of the grumblers in Smith and around Hall's Bridge, should be proud that their votes has put a government in power, that places them in the hands of a French Nationalist Postmaster-General. Next thing we know, he will be changing the common ugly English name of Hall's Bridge to the melifluous French name of Pont du Hall.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Elms, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

BIG LOAD OF HAY.

Mr. John Young Brings One and One-Half Tons Through the Snow.

Mr. John Young ex-Reeve of Ennismore, landed on the market on Saturday, notwithstanding the condition of the roads, a load of hay weighing one and one-half tons, one of the largest loads delivered on the market this year. When Mr. Young starts out to accomplish anything, it takes more than an ordinary snow storm to block him, and the price obtained for the hay rewarded him for his efforts. Very few farmers were on the market with hay on Saturday.

IMPORTANCE OF MISSION WORK IN CANADA'S WEST

Subject of an Address at All Saints' Church by Mr. W. R. Allin, B.A. —The Canadian Field Extending

FOREIGNERS ARE HERE

In the present day problem of carrying the Gospel of Christ to all parts of the world, the importance of the Canadian field resulting from the rapidly increasing population was impressively emphasized by Mr. R. W. Allin in his address at All Saints' church last night. Mr. Allin is assistant secretary of the Missionary Society and his wide experience in that position, enabled him to forcibly present the constantly growing necessity of mission work in this country.

The situation in Canada, Mr. Allin said, is without parallel in the history of the world. During the period from 1891 to 1901, there were 141,925 new arrivals into this country. During the next decade the number increased to 223,331, and from 1901 to 1911 the immigration figures total 1,764,475. More people entered Canada during the year ending March 31st, last, than during the whole period from 1891 to 1901.

Mr. Allin showed that the country districts in Eastern Canada are standing still and being depopulated, while the cities are growing by leaps and bounds. "The situation in Canada is three times as serious as it ever was in the United States. Emigrants to the United States were drawn largely from Northern Europe, while Canada's are mostly from the southern parts of that continent. We have the foreigner right here in this country and we have not ignore that fact. He is pushing his way into all parts of the country."

Have No Religion.

Mr. Allin stated that he had been informed that 75 p.c. of the people from the States in the middle west showed no interest in religion. He had asked a consul if this statement were overdrawn and was told that it was undoubtedly true. Years ago when the people of Scandinavia had entered the United States they passed to the middle west. They were strangers and practically no effort had been made to carry the Gospel to them. Accordingly, they began to forget it at first, gradually becoming careless and indifferent until they were utterly without regard for spiritual affairs.

"Now they are forcing their way into Canada, and our men all tell me the same story. We are reaping the neglect of the Christian churches in the United States, but we must see that this condition is not repeated.

"After all the only things worth striving for in this world are the spiritual. We cannot take our material goods with us when our allotted time on earth comes to an end. The only way to lay up stores for the future is to sew material stores that we may reap them hereafter."

60 Nations Represented.

Sixty nationalities were represented in the last million immigrants who arrived in this country. Mr. Allin illustrated the situation by the numerous little streams that trickle down a mountain slope merging here and there until finally they all pour their waters into one great torrent. Thus, have many countries contributed contingents to the flood of immigrants that have been pouring into Canada. Herein lies the work of the church.

"One sometimes wishes that the old word "missions" might be dropped for a year in order that the old prejudices some have against it might disappear with it. I have no patience with the man who says he has no use for foreign missions. Ninety-nine out of every one hundred of such men have not lifted one finger to help those around about him, not to mention those to whom the Gospel must be carried in foreign fields. The man who knows what the Gospel has done for him and who appreciates it will exert himself to see that the work to be done here is put on a solid foundation."

A determined effort to make the churches throughout the world self-supporting is meeting with success, and Mr. Allin enumerated those dioceses which required no outside assistance.

The Alberta Government recently guaranteed bonds for the construction of three lines of railway extending from Edmonton into the Peace River district. This will mean many new settlements and a steady growth in population.

In concluding, Mr. Allin appealed not only to the sense of an obligation to meet the requirements of the west, but also to the sense of patriotism and love of country, a heritage which, he said, should not be neglected.

"If this country is to hold its own among the nations of the earth, it must be built on a solid foundation. There is only one thing that can be pointed to that will ultimately form a stable foundation for this country on which to build, and that is the Gospel of Christ."

FOLKS PAST FIFTY MUST USE CASCARETS

What glasses are to weak eyes, Cascarets are to weak bowels—a 25 cent box will truly amaze you.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

A MESSAGE FROM THE NORTH COUNTRY

Rev. A. J. Vale, of the Diocese of McKenzie River, Addresses Large Congregation in St. Luke's Church Last Evening

At St. Luke's church last evening the special preacher was the Rev. A. J. Vale, one of the Missionaries who are conducting a three-days' conference in this city. The Rev. Mr. Vale hails from the diocese of McKenzie River, in the great expanse of the north country, where, as yet, only a few assiduous workers labour, under great difficulties, to teach the natives, namely, the Indians and the Esquimaux, the Gospel, and who are responsible for the civilization of those people.

In his sermon, last evening, he endeavoured so give the congregation a little idea of that country, and explained that others were needed to carry on the great work of teaching. He said in part:

The diocese of Mackenzie River covers an area of 600,000 square miles and the place I come from is Hay River. Our work is that of a boarding school, as it is generally understood here, to teach both in English and Indian. In addition to the missionary classes we give the boys and girls a thorough practical education, so that they shall have the same advantages as the white men. The land is very fertile in this north country, and we are able to support ourselves. It costs us $13.20 for a hundred pounds of flour, for, in addition to the price usually paid, we have to pay a rate of ten cents a pound for carriage, so you will see that we have to grow our own flour as much as possible.

On leaving the diocese of McKenzie River, we were only allowed three hours to make our plans for a whole year, and the Bishop has, therefore, asked us to raise money to build a ship independent of the transportation there, so that travelling will be made easier.

We have lately come into an heritage of some twelve hundred people in our diocese, namely, a new tribe of Esquimaux that have not yet heard of the Gospel, and who still use stone implements. The number of these people baptised is now one hundred and seventy, and each is a missionary in himself for many of them can read and write, although never having attended a school. The Esquimaux first missionary offering was furs.

Another tribe has been discovered some distance east, numbering about one thousand, who have, as yet, no one to teach them. In addition, there is a tribe of about three hundred Indians who want a teacher, and we are praying that God will raise up a man to come and help us. I want you people to give liberally for the support of this work and to pray that some one will rise up and come out to us. We have already taught the girls to keep their homes clean and, as to the boys, we have four volunteers as missionaries, already.

MR. A. J. SLOAN HERE ON A VISIT

Is a Firm Believer in the West and Weighed in Peterboro

Mr. A. J. Sloan of Winnipeg, brother of Mr. Geo. Sloan, Chamberlain street, and an old Peterborough boy, spent the past few days in this city renewing old acquaintances, after an absence of eight years. He was one of the delegates from Winnipeg to the National Builders' Convention held in Toronto on Wednesday and Thursday last, and at its conclusion came on to Peterborough for a few days.

Winnipeg is going to have an exceptionally busy year, Mr. Sloan says, some of the larger building to be erected being the Federation Life, 12 stories; Union Trust Co., 14 stories; Fort Garry Hotel, covering practically a whole block; T. Eaton Co., doubling their plant; Hudson Bay Co., erecting large store, an Industrial Bureau and many other less pretentious buildings. The estimates for the year's construction work are placed at from 20 to 25 millions.

Mr. Sloan has been twenty years in the west and, like the majority of the men from that district, he is a great booster for Winnipeg. The city had a population of 24,000 at that time. Today it is 175,000. Many fortunes have been made, and Mr. Sloan is apparently obtaining his share of the general prosperity, but looking back he can now see the great opportunities that passed him, and many others who did not then realize the immense boom that was to come to Winnipeg. Land was then comparatively cheap, but the newcomers from the east were not impressed by the chances to invest.

Immigration from the United States has been extremely heavy and during the coming year it is expected to continue in about the same proportions. Mr. Sloan met many of his old friends who were pleased to see him looking so well.

MONTREAL GROUP IN TORONTO ARENA CO'Y

Important Local Interests Join Toronto Group in Providing Large Arena Gardens for Queen City

A strong group of Montreal and Toronto capitalists have joined together in the organization of the Arena Gardens of Toronto, Limited, which is to give to the City of Toronto Arena Gardens and Building equal to anything that can be found in the larger cities of the United States. Montreal interests took very kindly to the proposition from the outset, owing very largely to their knowledge of the tremendous profits that have been made out of the Montreal Arena, which even this winter on hockey alone has been said to have made a net showing of over $60,000 and is able to pay dividends somewhere between 30 per cent. and 40 per cent. annually.

Among the Montreal group are Lt.-Col. John Carson, who has made such a success of the Crown Reserve Mining Company, Mr. W. I. Gear, one of the leading officials of the Robert Reform Company and vice-president of the Crown Trust Company, Mr. A. C. Brooke Claxton, K.C., director of the Montreal Arena Company; while the Toronto group will be represented on the Board it is said, by Sir Henry Pellatt, Mr. Joseph Kilgour, director of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Mr. R. A. Smith, of the firm of Osler Hammond, and Mr. T. F. How, general manager of the Bank of Toronto. It is the intention to have Mr. Lawrence Solman, who has made such a success of Hanlon's Island, occupy the position of managing director of the new company.

To be wise for yourself than for other people.
To be wise to-day than to be foolish to-morrow.
To be a giant on the floor than a pigmy on a pedestal.
To acknowledge our faults than to boast of our merits.
To bend the neck promptly than to bruise the forehead.
To keep at one thing a long time than to do many things in a short time.
To be the builder of our own name than to have it built for us beforehand.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN

"No woman in America can stay at home these days and be a good mother," writes Elizabeth Wood. That's what Professor Charles Zueblin of Boston said recently in a lecture at staid old Philadelphia. He said in effect that the time has gone by when women can afford to sit by the fireside and allow the world to gallop by on its way to perdition. He says the old-fashioned mother is out of place, and that she must get into city politics and into legislative chambers, and that she cannot remain at home and "be true to her motherhood."

Philander P. Claxton, Commissioner of Education for the United States, who came to Boston last week from Washington to talk to the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, says that most of the good mothers are found in the homes.

When I finally made my way to Mr. Claxton through the mass of club women surrounding him all eager to shake his hand, I questioned him as to his ideas on the subject of club life and motherhoods, the old-fashioned mother, and a few other things.

Her Children First

"Woman's first and most important duty is motherhood and the proper upbringing of her own children. If she has none of her own, then it's perfectly right that she should assist in the care of the needy.

"The old-fashioned mother was a good mother, but not a progressive one. No, a truly progressive woman makes all the better mother. She is able to meet and compete with any situation, she is able to follow step by step her children through every phase of life. The sphere of the old-fashioned mother was too narrow, too limited for the mother of these times."

"But do you agree with Professor Zeublin that no woman in America can stay at home and be a good mother?" I queried.

"I think that every mother should get out and enjoy life occasionally. All work and no play is bad for anyone. A woman should first make the home beautiful, then make the world beautiful. But the children are and should be her one and most important consideration.

"The most practical thing in the world is an ideal—every woman and every man must have one—and it is up to the surroundings in the home what ideals the children will have and upon that depends what they will accomplish in the future.

Clubs Return Monotony.

"I don't think that women should be compelled to go out in the world to work, but they should go out into the world to learn, broaden and keep pace with the times. If this must be accomplished through clubs, then clubs are truly a God-send, and through the medium of the club the woman accomplishes great good. This is bound to inspire her, as well as the fact that she is constantly coming in contact with brainy women and thereby sharpening her own wits. The club takes the woman away from the dull monotony of the home, cheers and stimulates her and consequently makes her a better wife and mother.

"But if either must be sacrificed, let it be the club. Women can stay at home and be good mothers but they won't be the intelligent mothers that they would be if they got out into the world a bit and studied the conditions which they must shortly brace their children to meet. Men are the producers, and they should be allowed and even made do their work of producing. Woman's work is to conservation of life.

"Women spend the money. The women buy the food and the clothing and decide which is the better quality, etc.; therefore they should have the handling of the money. A woman can spend the money in a way which will bring the greatest good to the greatest number, and she should be allowed full charge of the family purse. Man can earn the money, but the woman should spend it.

A RUNAWAY.

A team of horses belonging to one of the local livery barns and attached to a sleigh, took fright yesterday afternoon in the business section and raced away up George street, down Brock street and eventually found their way back to the barn. Happily there was no one in the vehicle at the time of the runaway. The sleigh, however, was rather badly damaged.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

A FRIEND of mine, who had been bothered by the return of an old trouble with her indigestion, threatened to consult a new doctor.

"What's the matter with Dr. J.F" I asked. "Didn't he help you the last time you had those spells?"

"Oh, yes, I suppose he did," she admitted. "But I know just what he'll say if I go to him. He'll ask if I am careful not to let myself get overtired, and he'll want to know if I'm outdoors as much as he told me to be, and if I do my exercises and drink plenty of water and rest before eating. And then he'll tell me to go home and do all those things. Just as like as not he won't give me any medicine at all, or nothing but some meaching little pills. I want a doctor who will give me some good strong medicine that will do me some good.'

If there are any doctors among my reader friends, I feel quite sure they must recognise this woman. I don't mean this particular woman, but the type. For she is an excellent example of that very common class of people who think they can disobey the laws of health ad libitum, and then go to a doctor and 'get some good strong medicine' to make them well again.

There was a time when doctors encouraged, or at least did not discourage, people in the idea that they could do this, but the medical teaching of to-day says most emphatically that the man or woman who hopes to arrive at health by the short cut of drugs, instead of taking the broad highway of right living is doomed to disappointment.

Everywhere there is springing up this new school of medicine, the principal idea of which is to teach the patient principles of conservation, prevention and right living, instead of simply to cure him by drugs, after he has ignored all these principles. Drugs are used, of course, but only in combination with natural forces. And everywhere sluggish human nature is begging—like a child for candy—to be given back its drugs and its faith in them as substitutes for right living.

Let me tell you what one doctor said about this new school of medicine. She has not been so busy of late, as she was five or ten years ago, and this is the reason—"It's just because of all this prevention talk," she said. "Why, there isn't anywhere near the sickness there used to be. With all this talk about fresh air and bathing, with all that's taught in the schools, and all the health instructions in the magazines and newspapers, and the athletics and gymnastic classes, how could there be so much sickness? There isn't room for so many doctors now, as there used to be — they aren't needed."

Think what that means if it is true. It means that the doctors themselves are teaching, preaching, and publishing doctrines that in the end will hurt their own profession.

And yet they are willing—and many of them eager—to do it. Doesn't it seem as if we ought to be willing to listen to these doctrines and try to absorb the good from them, instead of childishly turning our backs upon them?

LIVES OF PAPINEAU AND M'KENZIE SUBJECT OF INTERESTING PAPERS

Regular Meeting of Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T. A. S. Held Friday Evening

While it is no disparagement of its predecessors, the regular meeting of the Ladies' Literary Society, in connection with the St. Peter's T. A. S., which was postponed from Feb. 9th, owing to the unfavourable conditions of the weather, was one of the most successful of the season, the subjects chosen, namely the lives of Papineau and McKenzie proving unusually interesting. There was a good attendance and prior to the reading of the papers a pianoforte duet was admirably rendered by the Misses Hurley and Gorman, while Miss Carrie White charmed the audience by a well delivered recitation.

The first paper, entitled "Wm. Lyon McKenzie," was read by Miss Bessie McNamara, who, in part, said:

Wm. Lyon Mackenzie was born near Dundee, Scotland, on the 12th of March, 1795. When he was 25 years of age (his father being dead), he migrated, with his mother, to Canada. The discontented condition of Upper Canada drew him into politics, and he started a paper called the "Colonial Advocate," which attacked the Government with great asperity.

Most of the changes which he advocated were wise, and have since been adopted, but the violence of his attacks aroused great anger among the political and social set at York, now Toronto, which was headed by John Beverly Robinson. Mackenzie, at this time, was comparatively poor; his paper appeared irregularly and was on the point of suspending publication when his office was attacked and his type thrown into the bay by a number of the supporters of his opponents. In the action against the chief rioters, Mackenzie was awarded £625 and costs, and was thus enabled to set up a much larger and more efficient plant, and the Colonial Advocate ran until the 4th of November, 1834.

In 1828, Mackenzie was elected Member of Parliament for York, but was expelled on the ground that he had published in his newspaper the proceedings of the House, without being authorized. Five times he was expelled and five times re-elected by his constituents, until at last the Government refused to issue a writ, and for three years York was without one of its representatives.

In October of 1834, he was again elected Member of Parliament for York, and was allowed to take his seat, the Reformers being in the majority, but, in the general election of 1836, the Tory party won a complete victory, Mackenzie and almost all the prominent Reformers being defeated. This defeat greatly embittered him, and more and more openly, in his speeches throughout the province, he advocated armed revolt. He was also in communication with Papineau and other leaders of the Reformers in Lower Canada, who were already planning a rising. Early in December, 1837, Mackenzie gathered a mob of his followers at Gallon's Hills, some miles north of Toronto, with the intention of seizing the Lieutenant-Governor, and setting up a provisional government. Misunderstandings among the leaders led to the total failure of the revolt, and Mackenzie was forced to fly to the United States, with a price on his head. In the town of Buffalo he collected a disorderly rabble, who seized and fortified Navy Island, and for some weeks troubled the Canadian frontier. While in the United States Mackenzie was tried for a breach of the Neutrality Laws and served over eleven months in prison. He also published the Caroline Almanac, in which he referred to Queen Victoria as "Victoria Guelph the bloody Queen of England," and to the British Cabinet as "Victoria's bloody divan," thus showing his animosity at that time for England and British institutions. He returned to Canada in 1849.

In 1851 he was elected to Parliament for Haldimand, defeating Geo. Brown. He allied himself with the Radicals, and, on the leadership of that party being assumed by Brown, became one of its lieutenants. He was still miserably poor, but refused all offers to accept a Government position. In 1858, he resigned his seat in the House, owing to ill-health and died on the 28th of August, 1861.

The second paper, which was no less interesting, was read by Mrs A. Law, who dwelt with the life of Papineau, the great Canadian Reformer of the 19th century.

The next lecture will be given by the Rev. Fr. Fitzpatrick of Ennismore.

If The Hair Root Is Not Dead, Do Not Despair

Falling hair means scanty hair, and scanty hair means baldness. The whole trouble is caused by dandruff germs that destroy the natural nourishment that is supplied to the hair root.

PARISIAN SAGE, the scientific hair nourisher, penetrates into the roots of hair and not only kills the germs but supplies the hair root with just the kind of nourishment it should have.

If you are getting bald; if your hair is falling, don't wait till too late, but get a bottle of PARISIAN SAGE to-day.

It is possible to save your hair and prevent baldness if the hair root is not dead.

PARISIAN SAGE is guaranteed to satisfy every user, or money back. It stops falling hair, scalp itch, and banishes dandruff in two weeks. It is a refined hair dressing that puts a radiant lustre into faded, dull hair. Fifty cents at Wm. Medill's and dealers everywhere.

M. POTTER HONOURED.

Well Known Great Lakes Missionary Presented With a Watch.

The following from the Toronto World refers to the father of Rev. J. G. Potter, formerly of St. Andrew's. Mr. Potter, senior, is well known in Peterborough:

James S. Potter was honoured by the Upper Canada Trust Society at a banquet in McConkey's last night when he was presented with an illuminated address and a gold watch in recognition of his 70th birthday. For 40 years he has been a missionary among sailors of the Great Lakes, and for the past decade has been superintendent of the work with headquarters in Toronto. J. K. Macdonald, president of the society, was chairman of the assemblage and made the representation. Rev. Alfred Hall, representative of the British and Foreign Sailors' Society, also presented Mr. Potter with a salver made from the copper of Nelson's flagship, the "Victory."

In reply Mr. Potter mentioned that during the last few years traffic on the lakes had expanded seven or eightfold, thus demanding greater work on the part of the missionaries. He said a sailor's home was being erected in Port Arthur, costing $30,000.

Rev. E. Bosworth At Murray Street

Rev. E. Bosworth held the rapt attention of a large congregation at Murray street Baptist church yesterday morning, as he rapidly argued his leading points, dealing with the evangelization of the French Canadians in the lower province, or, to use the speaker's own words, "The work of conveying to these people a message that will bring them in touch with a living God."

The occasion of Rev. Mr. Bosworth's presence in the city was for the purpose of placing before the people of Peterborough, a synopsis of the great work which is being conducted by the Grand-Ligne Mission in the Quebec Province, and incidentally to promote the interest and sympathies of the community towards this movement.

Dispensing with a text, the speaker took his hearers into confidence, by asking them to forget for the time being that he was in any way connected with the Grand Ligne Mission, or that he was here for the purpose of speaking on that subject. "I want to talk to you as a Canadian, to Canadians," he said. "We are living in a time fraught with so much importance to Canada that, in my opinion," said Mr. Boswell, "we are laying the foundation for one of the mightiest nations in the world." The solemnity and the awful responsibility that rests upon the people of this budding nation in the twentieth century is fearful to contemplate, especially if we should fail in the task that is ours, in the building up of this powerful nation. The population of Canada is composed of about two-fifths French Canadians, and three-fifths British and other nationalities. When we come to examine the former closely, there is not much racial difference. The French that were selected to populate the Lower Province came from Brittany and Normandy, from whence also came our Highland Scotch. So it is no so very long ago since we were almost brothers.

The question arises, what was God's purpose in putting these two nations together in this land of liberty. Without any desire to be presumptuous enough to pry into God's plans, I should say that one of the reasons was to aid in the development of the nation. Britain believes that Canada should be governed by Canadians in conformity to British laws, while on the other hand, the French speaking people are trained to regard a foreign heirarchy as the only government worthy of recognizance. The latter form of government claims the right not only to rule, but to encroach upon and control the realms of conscience. The Roman Catholic church aspires to exercise the strong hand of authority without regard to a limit set upon it by the civil law. In case of conflict between the ecclesiastical and civil powers, the ecclesiastical ought to prevail. Such is the teachings of the Roman church. The ne temere decree, which, since its inception into the constitution of the Catholic church, has been responsible for the rending apart of couples who were legally married in the eyes of the State is not only a symptom of the disease, but is an instance of the principles upon which the Church of Rome undertakes to rule the civil law.

"I want for myself absolute liberty of conscience, and I desire the same for my fellow men," declared the speaker. "The only power that will ever bring about the entire absence of ecclesiastical conflict, is the power of Jesus Christ. When this is brought about, the sharply drawn lines which now exist between the different races, shall be effaced. The morality and commercial aspect of countries where Roman Catholic heirarchies rule, retrogresses, as instanced in countries such as Spain, Italy and many others."

In the building of a strong nation, we are apt to overlook the moral needs, in our endeavour to advance the commercial and political requirements of the nation. The moral needs is one feature which characterizes our work in the French-Canadian mission in the Lower Province. Convert the habitant and he will become a valuable asset towards the evolution of a great nation. "Rome emphasizes sin. So do we in our work as missionaries," continued Mr. Bosworth, "and we follow it up with a message that will bring the people into touch with a living God.' The message of Rome is ambiguous to the church. Absolute obedience is one of its rules." Gladstone once said that "he who surrenders his will, judgment and conscience to the Roman Catholic church, surrenders his loyalty and civil liberty." The work of the Grand Ligne Mission is to save men, rather than antagonise them, although there are times when circumstances bring religious parties into controversy.

During the inception of the Grand Ligne Mission, the missionaries in charge were constantly persecuted and there are men to-day, living under the ban of suspended sentence, who would have been languishing behind prison bars had it not been for the missionaries, who protested against their incarceration. These men were charged with various acts of violence towards the missionaries, and the motive for their actions was always attributed to one cause. "We had no desire to antagonize these men. One of our aims is to develop to a brighter standard the character of the people with whom we associate, and in this work I ask for your prayers and sympathies," concluded the speaker.

A Timely Revelation

(Short Story.)

Silas Martin, a worthy bachelor, recently installed in Coraville, leaned his grey head on his hands and gazed absently out of his lonely window toward the cottage of his enamorata.

He had just returned from the home of Miss Priscilla Brown, where he had spent a blissful evening. He had eloquently told the spinster of the loneliness that only her presence could ease, and she coyly yielded to his persuasions and named the day.

A ruddier glow than art had given, the glow of satisfaction and delight had mounted to her cheeks as she thought of the surprise with which the news of her conquest of Silas would be received by the village.

Prematurely grey through sorrow and worry, Silas Martin, because of his financial standing, was regarded as the best "catch" the village afforded, and Priscilla, realizing this, had used every possible means to gain his good graces. At the death of his mother, some months before, she had been his consoling angel, and was unceasing in her attentions to the bereaved Silas.

There is no surer way to a man's heart than through sympathy for his misfortunes, be they real or imaginary, and Silas, being only human, was easily won into thinking that Priscilla was the only woman who really realized how much he suffered.

"You will love me always, won't you, Silas?" she had asked to-night. "You will still love me when my hair is grey, and I am wrinkled and old, won't you?" And then she shuddered within herself at the thought that he might possibly discover that neither raven locks nor the pink and white complexion which he so admired were her own. But no, he would not know until he had been securely bound in her matrimonial web, at any rate, and then what matter, so long as she had changed her name from the Miss Priscilla Brown that she so detested.

Needless to say the pair had for some time been the subject of village gossip, but, as is often the case, no word of the public comment reached the party most concerned, and poor Silas remained blissfully ignorant of Priscilla's duplicity.

"Easy known he's a stranger in these parts," said one wrinkled grandma. "Priscilla and me went to school together and she's one month and five days older than I be. And her temper! Sakes alive I pity him!"

But Dan Cupid had indeed succeeded well in impairing the vision of Silas and as he leaned on the sill this calm, peaceful night, he was the happiest of men. The warm, flower-scented air made him drowsy at last, and he fell into a peaceful sleep and dreamed of a bright and orderly home in which this "Prissy" reigned as queen, and he, her abject slave, was the envy of all unfortunate bachelors.

Suddenly a shrill cry for help rent the stillness of the night and Silas awoke with a start and rubbed his eyes. Again the cry was repeated and his heart almost ceased to beat at the sound, for it came from the direction of Priscilla's house, and, fearful for the safety of his beloved one, he started to her rescue.

Love lent swiftness to his feet and with a speed that would have put to shame the young lads of the village he dashed down the road, along the gravel path of Priscilla's garden and through the open door.

"Help!" screamed a thin, piping voice from the room above, and he cried out as he reached the head of the stairs, "I'm a-coming, Prissy. Where be ye?"

Then, through the chamber door his startled gaze met Priscilla, clad in a red flannel night gown. Then his eyes strayed to her face, and a puzzled expression replaced his look of alarm. Surely this was Prissy, but where were her red cheeks, where her teeth, and, oh, horrors! what had she in her hand? It was a wig, which she had vainly endeavoured to transfer from the bureau to her bald head before he should reach the door.

"What's the matter, Prissy?" he gasped when he had recovered his speech. Then he saw her stagger, and reached her side just in time to catch her in his arms, for she had fainted! His Prissy, minus her dress pads, was a far different creature from the one he had left about two hours before, and as he gazed on her white wrinkled face, his dream of bliss vanished, and he shuddered at the thought of the fate that had almost been his.

Gently he laid her on the bed, and with a glance at her head hitherto so skilfully concealed beneath her wig, he murmured: "No, things are not what they seem." Then he left the house, and on reaching home penned a farewell note to Miss Priscilla, hastily packed a few belongings and left for the West on the morning train.

His lawyer subsequently received instructions to sell his furnished cottage and give the proceeds to Priscilla Brown as balm for her wounded heart and blighted hopes.

As for Priscilla, she might have believed that her midnight encounter with a burglar and the untimely entrance of Silas was but the product of her overtaxed nerves but for the fact that her jewellery, of no small value, was missing, and morning brought further proof, in a letter from Silas in which he said:

"Miss Brown,—I hope that you have by now recovered from the shock of last night. I have decided not to marry, and you will never see me again, I hope. Try and forget—Silas Martin."

But Priscilla Brown will not readily forget, nor will she ever let the villagers forget that, though never married, she will at least engaged for one sweet evning, and in proof of this assertion she cherishes the hastily penned message of her "faithless lover,' 'and sighs sadly at the remembrance.—Boston Post.

TWO BURNS' VOLUMES UNEARTHED.

Two interesting volumes, having relation to Robert Burns, were brought under the hammer at Sotheby's, London, recently. One is a first edition of "Poems ascribed to Robert Burns, not contained in any edition of his works hitherto published" (Glasgow, 1801). This copy has at the end two manuscript poems, entitled "To James Boswell, Esq., after having read his life of Dr. Samuel Johnson," and "Burns' Advice." The authorship of both is attributed to Burns, but on the following blank page there is attached a slip of paper containing the following verse:

When Princes and Prelates,
And hot-blooded zealots,
All Europe has set in a low,
The poor man lies down,
Nor envies a Crown,

But comforts himself with a mow. Above this poem a previous owner wrote as follows: "Given to me by Mr. Campbell as written by Burns—but I doubt." The other book, a first edition, published in 1788, is "a catalogue of five hundred celebrated authors of Great Britain now living." It contains the first notice of "Robert Burns, a ploughman, his poems published in 1786," adding: "Mr. Burns was on the point of embarking for America when he was prevented by a letter from Dr. Blacklock, exciting him to a further pursuit of his literary career." A contemporary MS. note adds: "One of the first ones of real genius since Milton."

ADDITIONAL ESTIMATES

Four Million Dollars of Extra Expenditure Brought into Legislature

PUBLIC BUILDINGS TOO

Toronto, Feb. 27.—Supplementary estimates for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31, 1912, were presented to the Legislature yesterday by Sir James Whitney, in the absence of Hon. A. J. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, who is ill. Including a grant for the extension of the line through Huron Grey and Bruce, and $2,000,000 to the Hydro-Electric Commission, the supplementaries total $4,077,464.18. The main estimates, presented during the last session of the Legislature, called for an expenditure of $8,080,911.66, so that the total estimated expenditure for the current fiscal year is $12,-168,365.84. In addition to this sum, further supplementary estimates will be presented during the session, bringing the amount up to several hundred thousand dollars more.

Most of the sums contained in the volume presented yesterday are increases in salaries for civil servants. A new position is created, at a salary of $1,800. It is the intention of the Provincial Government to appoint a parole officer, who will visit prisoners paroled from the Central Prison farm at Guelph, and assist them in obtaining employment after their discharge.

Increases of $100 a year are given to all the Deputy Ministers and to several chief clerks and accountants.

For constitutional questions $20,000 additional is set apart. A new registry office will be erected at Kenora at a cost of $8,000, and the completion of the new court house will cost $3,300. Other expenditures at Kenora bring the total up to $26,800.

Large amounts will be spent on the public buildings and improvements, including $200,000 for the purchase of farm land, erection and equipment of the new hospital for insane, to be erected at Whitby. A similar amount is included for the erection of buildings for the provincial prison at Guelph. This amount may be subdivided and charged to capital and maintenance by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-council. Additional buildings and farm land equipment for the hospital for the insane at Brockville will require $50,000, of which $15,000 is a re-vote. A new dormito / building for the institution of the blind at Brantford will cost $65,000, and a similar amount will be spent on the deaf and dumb institute at Belleville.

To replace the kitchen and amusement hall at the London Hospital for the Insane, which was destroyed by fire, there is an item of $25,000. Additional buildings at the Orillia Hospital for Feeble-Minded will cost $20,-000. A new residence for the medical superintendent at Woodstock institution calls for $6,500. For electric wiring in the hospital at Mimico $10,-000 is provided, of which $9,800 is a re-vote. For repairs to the Hamilton asylum, made necessary by fire, $18,-653 will be needed.

On the Parliament and the Departmental buildings $12,919 will be spent this year, including increases in salaries to various employes, and $5,150 to provide salaries for additional watchmen and two boiler inspectors, yet to be appointed.

For the completion of the north wing of Osgoode Hall $21,800 is set aside, containing a re-vote of $13,668. For the new Government House $60,000 is needed; and for the completion of the reconstruction and fireproofing of the west wing of the Parliament Buildings, the new north wing, furnishings, Hydro-Electric equipment, and library fittings, $310,000 is necessary.

New land will be purchased as an additional experimental plot at the O. A. C., Guelph, at a cost of $18,580. Electrical plant will cost $10,000, part of which is a re-vote. The new dining hall will cost $75,000, new dairy stables $15,000, new building for field husbandry and experimental department, an amount to be decided upon later.

The reconstruction of the Ontario Government building in London, in the interests of colonization and immigration, calls for an expenditure of $15,000 this year, more than one-third of which is a re-vote.

For technical education in the province the sum of $34,500 is set apart, of which $3,500 is for the salary of the director, $25,000 for day industrial classes and $6,000 for agricultural training in high schools.

For public and separate school education more than $117,000 will be voted, including $29,000 for rural, public and separate schools in counties, $29,-000 for examiners for departmental examinations, $10,500 for continuation schools, $19,000 for public and separate schools in new districts, and other miscellaneous grants.

To provide for a farm director $2,-500 is placed in the amounts to be voted. The director has yet to be appointed.

As a result of numerous deputations asking for grants, several special amounts have been placed in the estimates for charitable purposes, as follows:

For institutions mentioned in the statutes, $7,100; sanatoria for consumptives, $11,671.45; industrial schools, $9,895.48; children's aid work, $1,241.23; Alexandra industrial schools, $7,000; industrial refuge for women (addition to provide for feeble-minded), $5,000; building of infants' home, $5,000; total hospitals and charities, $47,038.14.

NO BISLEY TEAM IF ROSS RIFLE IS REJECTED

E. M. Macdonald Initiates Discussion of Treatment Shown by British Officials and Arm Manufacturers to Canadians at Matches.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—If Canada is to be represented at the next Bisley meet, the National Rifle Association will have to mend its ways.

This was the direct challenge issued by Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, when E. M. Macdonald (Pictou), on the orders of the day being called, moved the adjournment of the House to discuss the policy of "pin pricking" shown by the N.R.A. in the treatment of Canadian marksmen in connection with the use of the Ross rifle.

"If this sort of thing is continued," said the Minister, "in the first place I doubt if the association (the D.R.A.) will send them, and in the second place I doubt if the men would go."

"It does not rest with the National Rifle Association to define for the Dominion of Canada, what form of rifle or what form of sight we shall use."

He intimated that the Canadian Government had offered to loan them 5,000 to 10,000 long Ross rifles in order to place British and other competitors "on an equality with our boys." So far, however, the association has not seen fit to avail themselves of the offer.

Mr. Macdonald reviewed the history of the trouble, which he ascribed to the hostility of British rifle makers and the fact that the Canadians, through the use of the Ross rifle, had incurred the ill-will of the N.R.A. by winning too much prize money.

He read a couple of letters showing that the average winnings of Canadians had jumped from £430 to £635 when the new rifle was adopted.

The latest regulation, adopted in the autumn of 1911, prescribed that the back sight had to be attached in the same way as it was on the British army rifle. This was a mere pretext to bar the Ross rifle, as it was impossible to attach the sight to it in this manner.

He charged that the N.R.A. were not acting in good faith and asked the Minister of Militia to take the matter up.

In this connection, he read an extract from The Pall Mall Gazette, which compared the new British service rifle with the Ross rifle, to the great disadvantage of the former, which it declared would be obsolete before the force was armed with it.

He also read the sworn statement of Pte. Clifford, the winner of the King's Prize at the last Bisley meet, and referred to the affidavits of five other Canadian competiters, as to the persistent and unwarranted interference of range officers, and particularly Major Silverthorne, with Canadian marksmen.

"This must be stopped," he declared. "If it is not, let Canadians not go over, and let the whole empire know why they do not go over."

There was not the slightest doubt in his mind as to the cause of the animus displayed by the N.R.A. The rifle manufacturers of Britain were behind it, and since the signal success of the Canadians three years ago, when the weapon was first introduced at Bisley, had caused the cancellation of orders for 5,000 Ross rifles. They evidently realized that something had to be done to stop the sale of the Ross rifle to the marksmen of the empire. This regulation as to sights capped the climax. The N.R.A. would have been more straight forward if they had said outright that no Ross rifles, or that only Lee-Enfield rifles could be used.

As to the treatment of Private Clifford, Col. Hughes declared that the "Clifford position," with the butt resting on the ground, had been commended by Lord Kitchener and Lord Roberts.

The Ross rifle, he declared to be "the best military rifle in the world to-day."

On a visit to Washington a year ago, the Minister said he had been given by the U. S. military authorities full details of the new British service rifle. He had obtained the same information from the German military authorities last summer, but when he tried to get it from the British authorities there was nothing doing. It was a "deep impenetrable mystery."

"This is a strange way," he commented, "to treat those of us in the colonies who are interested in Imperial affairs.

W. B. Northrup (Hastings) asked how many of the long-barrelled Ross rifles were in use by the Canadian militia at the time Sir Frederick Borden certified that it was the arm of the service. He questioned the correctness of this certificate, and thought the bottom of the interference complained of was the want of confidence in the rifle the Canadians were using at Bisley doing the real service Ross rifle.

Meteorite Almost Struck Liner.

Boston, Feb. 27.—A narrow escape from being struck by a meteorite was experienced by the Leyland Line steamer Bostonian, which arrived yesterday from Manchester, England.

At five o'clock Saturday morning, Captain Perry reported he saw the meteorite, flashing brilliantly, falling to the southwest of the vessel. There was a loud hissing sound as it approached the water and then with a loud report it fell into the ocean a few ship's lengths from the bow of the steamer. So great a disturbance did it cause in the sea that water was dashed over the decks of the steamer.

Royalty at Lumber Camp.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Princess Patricia and a party from Government House will have an experience unique to members of the royal family to-morrow. They have been invited by J. R. Booth, the veteran lumber king, to visit one of his shanties on the Madawaska river and see lumbering operations in full swing. The party leaves by special train to-night.

CRISIS NOW ACUTE

Result of Coal Strike Conference is Kept Secret

HAVE OWNERS YIELDED?

London, Feb. 27.—On the eve of the resumption of the conference between Premier Asquith and other Cabinet Ministers and the miners' representatives, which marked the most critical stage of the Government's efforts to avert a coal strike throughout the United Kingdom, the nation is kept actually in the dark as to what has been accomplished in the direction of securing peace since the negotiations opened on Feb. 22. On that date the miners' delegates informed the Premier that they were powerless to agree to anything, or to assume any responsibility, until authorization had been obtained from the miners' federation, which meets to-day in London. As a consequence, the subsequent conferences have been with the coal owners alone.

It was announced last night, however, that the executive of the miners' federation had decided to recommend to the conference the acceptance of the Premier's invitation to meet him and his colleagues and discuss the situation. This invitation was extended to the miners' representatives on Feb. 23, by the Premier, who asked that a committee be appointed from the national federation to hear the whole subject of the controversy, with the Cabinet Ministers.

The conference yesterday lasted two hours, but, conforming to the rule, which has been rigidly observed, with respect to all previous meetings, the official report given out contained not the slightest hint as to what transpired. In the meantime, the strike was actually begun.

A few thousand miners employed in the Derbyshire district ceased work at noon. To-day several thousand more notices expire, and it is not likely that the miners will consent to work until Thursday night, the date fixed for the general strike. On Wednesday 100,000 miners can desert the pits on notices already handed in.

A hopeful feature of the crisis is the absence of incitement to violence on the part of the leaders of the men. No objections have been raised to the employers securing the necessary labor to keep the pits open during the strike. Even in South Wales, where the controversy has been the bitterest, this arrangement has been made and the South Wales' Miners' Federation issued an appeal last night to the men not to go to the colliery premises and to abstain from doing damage in event of a strike.

Unless the owners agree to concede a minimum wage, on which the miners of all sections are inflexible, a national strike would seem inevitable, but there is undoubtedly an optimistic feeling abroad that the Government may succeed in persuading the owners to yield for a few months at least. It is believed in some quarters that the Government has undertaken to reimburse them, if yielding on this important point results in any loss, but it is all a matter of surmise.

The Liberal morning papers anticipate a speedy settlement and an avoidance of a coal strike. The Chronicle believes that the trouble will be settled by Friday. The Daily News hints that unless the owners consent to the principle of a minimum wage the Government will quickly pass a minimum wage bill through Parliament.

Facts About Motherhood

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at the time of child-birth, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when the strain is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

It isn't as though the experience came upon them unawares. They have ample time in which to prepare, but they, for the most part, trust to chance and pay the penalty.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy, and strong.

Any woman who would like special advice in regard to this matter is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. Her letter will be held in strict confidence.

The Last Chance

It Led to Proof of True Friendship

By SARAH MARIA GRANT

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

A dirty looking Mexican had brought the roughly scrawled note to the Lone Bull ranch. It was at the edge of the evening, and the extended absence of light hearted Harry Barry had been a matter of comment among his comrades. His two weeks' leave of absence had been stretched to three, and, although work was dull at this season, his silence caused a vague disquietude among the older men.

The note was addressed to Gabriel, and he unfolded it with the careful deliberation of one who seldom receives an epistle. He held the torn sheet of paper close to the lamp and scanned the words with sharp eyes that narrowed to mere pin points of light when he had concluded.

"It's from him," he said, with a curt nod toward Harry Barry's empty chair.

They scented trouble in the tone of his voice. Gabriel was not given to emotion, but he had grown attached to Harry Barry and loved him as a son.

"What's happened?" demanded Jim Lewis.

For answer Gabriel tossed the note across the table, and Jim seized it eagerly and read aloud:

Come to the three cottonwoods and bring the boys to celebrate. It's the last chance. H. B.

Hardened though they were, the faces of the four blanched as the meaning of the words smote them strongly. The three tall cottonwoods that stood near Satan's Gulch marked a spot that was recognised throughout the adjacent cattle country as a place where the swift justice of the plains was meted out to offenders.

Without a word the four arose and reached for their hats. In the same grim silence they strode out of the bunk house, forgetful of the Mexican who crouched in the veranda as they passed.

They were three miles on their way toward Satan's Gulch when the Crane broke the silence. "What became of the greaser?" he asked suddenly.

"I forgot him," admitted Gabriel. "Did anybody pay him for the letter?"

"You paid him yourself, Gabe. I saw you flip him four bits," remarked Jim Lewis.

They all grew silent once more, thinking perhaps of the merry evenings spent under the star dusted sky or in the shelter of the bunk house with Harry Barry, the pivotal center about which good humor swung.

"And he wouldn't do that unless he was pushed to wrangle. Harry, he wasn't one to force gun play," added Jim Lewis seriously.

"If Harry did drop his man it would be in a fair fight, and there wouldn't be no cause to"— The Crane's pause was significant.

They rode on across the shriveled grasses and down dry water courses, heading always for the southeast and yet ever dreading to glimpse the gaunt outline of the cottonwoods against the sky. A young moon slipped down the western spaces, and after awhile there was no light save that of the stars, and in the soft radiance they moved on their way to take advantage of their last chance to say farewell to Harry Barry.

It was Gabriel's eyes that first saw the black cottonwoods, and he halted his horse with a sudden jerk and stopped the progress of the other men.

"I got something to say," he muttered hoarsely. "We all know that what's going to happen in the morning can't be stopped just because Harry is our friend. Them of us that breaks the law, whether intentional or otherwise, has to pay the price, and Harry's got to take his medicine. But we'll all stand by him till"—

They nodded silently, but there was not one of them, Gabriel included, who did not register a mental vow to attempt to free Harry Barry before the dawn broke.

Almost within the shadow of the trees the four halted their horses and peered into the gloom. Jim Lewis slipped from his saddle and cautiously reconnoitered. Presently he came back and spoke breathlessly.

Leading his own horse and followed by the others, Jim Lewis cautiously led the way into the deeper shadows where Harry Barry was sleeping. They were somewhat puzzled at the absence of his captors, but Satan's Gulch presented many rocks and crannies that might be preferred to the star canopied sky as sleeping quarters, and probably the condemned man was bound and helpless.

Presently they discerned the outline of a picketed horse and not far away a dark bundle on the ground that breathed heavily.

"The young devil," groaned Gabriel to himself—"sleeping like that tonight!"

In spite of the silent vow that had been registered a half hour before Harry Barry's friends moved as by one accord to accomplish a set purpose.

Quietly enough one unpicketed the horse White Star and, mounting his own beast, led the other. Another pulled a blanket from his saddle, and the other two assisted in tossing it over Harry Barry's head and bodily carrying that bundle of muffled threats and wriggling muscles to Gabriel's mount, where he was laid across the saddle in front of the lean ranchman, and in less time than it takes to relate the incident they were away, riding like a streak for the state line.

The animated form of their captive only added speed to the flight of Gabriel's horse. Familiar expressions, some of them profanely strong, assured them that they had made no mistake in capturing the right man. It required all of Gabriel's iron strength to hold the angry captive in place.

The mysterious change that heralds the dawn found Gabriel, Jim Lewis, the Crane and Tim Lewis riding through a narrow defile whose farther end marked the line of another state. Harry Barry, shaken into a more comfortable posture, but his head and shoulders still enveloped in the blanket, was permitted to ride White Star, while his friends with voices lowered during their infrequent converse managed to conceal their identity from him.

When they were safely on another territory they paused and gathered into a semicircle about the prisoner. The blanket was withdrawn from Harry Barry's indignant countenance, and he split the morning air with a whoop of disgust when he viewed the faces of his friends in the wan daylight. Worn and haggard they were, but each pair of faithful eyes viewed him with brotherly love.

"What in the blankety-blank-blank is the matter with you gazaboes?" he bellowed wrathfully. "Is this what you call a joke to carry a feller thirty miles away from the first streak of luck he's ever had? I wish I'd kept it to myself!" He looked around at their crestfallen faces, his own anger abating in the light of concern he read in the eyes fixed on him.

"We're your friends, Harry," boomed Gabriel solemnly. "What we've done this night has been agin the law, as we all know it, but I don't believe one mother's son of us would have done it for anybody but you. Seems like I couldn't bear not to hear you laugh no more." The rough fellow drew his sleeve across his brow, and for an instant his troubled and betraying eyes were hidden.

The others nodded assent. "Not for nobody but you, Harry," added the Crane crustily.

Harry Barry stared at their woebegone faces with bewildered eyes. He looked little like a condemned man—a man who had faced death but a few short hours before—a man who had escaped certain hanging from one of the three cottonwoods at Satan's Gulch.

"What's the rampage?" he demanded at length. "You got my note all right?"

"That's why we came, and—what's happened that you call the limb of a cottonwood the first streak of luck you ever had?" demanded Gabriel sternly. "There wasn't no gal in the case?"

Harry Barry stared. "Nary gal," he managed to say after awhile, "but what's the limb of a cottonwood tree got to do with me?"

Silently Gabriel passed over the note that the Mexican had delivered, and the others stared curiously as the young man read it.

"Where's the rest of it?" he demanded.

"Rest of it?" they echoed.

"The first part. It's been torn off."

"That's the way it was handed to me," said Gabriel.

"I'll bet the greasy toad tore some of it off to make a cigarette," sputtered Harry Barry. Then, turning toward them, he said without a trace of humor in his pleasant voice: "This part, boys, sounds mighty desperate, but when I tell you what was in the part that the greaser tore off you'll understand. The whole note said: 'Hurray, I've struck silver at Satan's Gulch after all! Come to the three cottonwoods and bring the boys to celebrate. It's the Last Chance.' And, boys, the name of the new mine is 'Last Chance.'"

His careless young face grew very tender as the four yelled themselves hoarse with delight. They joked one another about the mistake they had made, and as they turned about and rode back over the trail into their own state they discussed, with much laughter, the pains they had taken to bring Harry Barry away from his streak of luck. Harry Barry's favorite theme for months had been his belief that silver ore would be found at Satan's Gulch, and he had utilized his three weeks' vacation to prospect that region thoroughly, with the best of success.

Harry Barry himself was the only serious one in the party bound for the cottonwoods. At last, when they all drew rein under the trees and had examined the notice of his claim that was posted, there they waited for him to speak.

He looked around at their tired faces and read the satisfaction in their eyes. There came to him then the full knowledge of what friendship means between men.

"Friends," he said gently, "I understand now why you rode down to the three cottonwoods, and you must have believed some in me to do what you did. This ain't going to be a big mine—there ain't a fortune in it—but, no matter what size it is, there's five partners in it, and it's name is Friendship. You fellers lay down and sleep while I get some breakfast."

Before they obeyed him there was a brief instant while hands gripped hands, and then the tension was removed, and they were on the old footing once more, save for the strong foundation that the night's work had laid for their future friendship.

A POWERFUL AND EFFECTIVE CURE

For Catarrh, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Asthma.

Diseases of the breathing organs are, as you know, excited by germs so minute that only the microscope can reveal them; they are lodged in the tissues, develop there, and cause all the trouble. That is how consumption starts.

If the cause of the disease can be carried by air, why not the remedy? This conclusion lies at the root of the Catarrhozone treatment. The instrument through which you breathe fragrant, healing Catarrhozone splits up into minute particles this invaluable healing and curative agent, thereby enabling the air to carry it to the remotest ramifications of the breathing organs, and diffuses itself over their entire surfaces.

CATARRHOZONE ALWAYS CURES.

It would be absolutely impossible to breathe through a Catarrhozone inhaler without carrying this liquid to the remotest parts of the breathing apparatus. Upon healthy tissue it has no action, but upon diseased tissue and upon the micro-organisms which infect diseased tissues its action is so wonderfully curative that the disease is completely abolished. Then the tissue heals.

EARLY TREATMENT IS WISE.

Catarrhozone is an ideal remedy for diseases of the throat, lungs, and nasal passages. If you have catarrh, or bronchitis, or asthma, all are equally curable by Catarrhozone. These diseases are all modifications of an inflammatory condition of the lining membranes of the throat and nasal passages. Under these conditions we call it catarrh. When it extends to the bronchial tubes, we call it bronchitis. The condition is the same, the causes which produce the diseases are identical, and the remedy, Catarrhozone, acts equally promptly and efficiently upon the different forms of this disease. Your case is curable. Get Catarrhozone to-day; two months' treatment (guaranteed) price $1; small size 50c. Sold by all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

Dancing in Washington's Days.

It was a dancing age. None was too old or too dignified to join in the pastime. We have it on the authority of General Greene that on one occasion Washington danced for three hours without once sitting down. Patrick Henry would close the doors of his office to betake himself to dancing or fiddling, and Jefferson dearly loved to "rosin" his bow for a merry jig. The story is told of him that once when away from home he received news of the burning of his father's house. "Did you save any of my books?" he asked of the slave who brought him the tidings. "No, massa," answered the negro, "but we saved the fiddle."—Maud Wilder Goodwin in "The Colonial Cavalier."

Ten Out of Five.

It was in an ideal seacoast town of Maine, to which they had fled for a lazy two weeks, that they found him, one of those "natives" with a large stock of undeveloped wit.

They were out gunning with the native as their guide. A flock of five birds flew over. Raising his gun, he took aim and fired. All five fell to the earth, and they were loud in their praises of his skill.

"That ain't nothin'!" said he contemptuously. "If I'd had my other gun along I'd 'a' done better than that."—Metropolitan Magazine.

Arrows and Big Guns.

In the days of mailed knights and battleaxes there was safety at a distance of 400 yards. That was about as far as the best archers could shoot an arrow. Neade, a famous archer under Charles I., states that the ordinary range of the bow was between 320 and 400 yards, though it is on record that one man was shot a distance of 463 yards with the wind. Compared with this is the latest naval gun with a range of fifteen miles.

Better Than He Thought.

The boy whose business it was to answer the telephone rushed into the room of the senior partner.

"Just got a message saying that your house was on fire," he said.

"Dear me!" returned the senior partner in a bewildered sort of way. "I knew my wife was pretty hot about something when I left home this morning, but I didn't think it was so bad as to set the house on fire!"

Greatly Changed.

"Have you seen Miss Beanpole since she inherited a fortune?"

"Yes. She is greatly changed."

"How?"

"Well, she used to be frightfully skinny."

"And now she's divinely slender."—Toledo Blade.

YOUR GRAY HAIRS QUICKLY VANISH

A Harmless Remedy, Made From Garden Sage, Restores Colour to Gray Hair

A feeling of sadness accompanies the discovery of the first gray hairs, which, unfortunately, are looked upon as heralds of advancing age. Gray hairs, however, are not always an indication of advancing age, for many people have gray hairs quite early in life. Of course, it is unnatural, and indicates that there is something wrong with the individual and that Nature needs assistance in correcting the trouble. The same is true of hair that is constantly falling out and becoming thinner every day. If everything is right with Nature, the hair, even in comparatively elderly people, should be long, thick and glossy, without even a streak of gray.

The ideal assistant to Nature in restoring and preserving the hair is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a clean and wholesome dressing for daily use. It not only removes dandruff, but strengthens weak, thin and falling hair and promotes its growth. A few applications will restore faded or gray hair to its natural colour.

Get a bottle to-day, and let it do for you what it has done for thousands of others.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.—Special agents, Wyrne Drug Co.

Suffered With Nerve Trouble For Two Years.

IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE FOR HIM TO SLEEP.

Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be sound while the nervous system alone may be diseased, therefore it is necessary for anyone suffering from any nervous trouble to procure a remedy which will at once quieten the nerves and build up the system.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will do this for you, providing you give them a fair trial.

Mr. Chas. W. Wood, Montreal, Que., writes:—"For two years I had suffered with nerve trouble, and it was impossible for me to sleep. It did not matter what time I went to bed, in the morning I was even worse than the night before. I consulted a doctor, and he gave me a tonic to take a half hour before going to bed. It was all right for a time, but the old trouble returned with greater force than before. One of the boys, who works with me, gave me half a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took them and I got such satisfaction that I got another box, and before I finished it I could enjoy sleep from 10 p.m. until 6 a.m., and now feel good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

REMARKABLE TRIP OF A SCIENTIST

R. W. Williamson Tells of His Observations of the People in British New Guinea

Mr. R. W. Williamson, fellow of the British Anthropological Institute, who has returned from a scientific expedition through hitherto unexplored parts of British New Guinea, has given an account of his journey to the institution which, by reason of the thrilling personal experiences of the narrator and the remarkable conditions prevailing among the Mafulu people, the most retrograde tribe on the island, surpasses in interest most trips of the kind undertaken in these modern days, most of the world's race secrets have been revealed.

Accompanied only by a Cingalese servant and two of the most civilized natives of Papua, he spent nearly five months in the country.

After a long and perilous tramp through almost impassable bush and undergrowth, infested by most venomous reptiles and wild beasts, the party who had been attacked by leopards and other denizens of the forest, reached the Mafulu Mountains.

"By this time," says Mr. Williamson, "my legs were covered with sores from bites of animals and tears of the scrub. There is, I am sure, subtle poison in the atmosphere, and every step hurt me.

"It was between 4,000 and 5,000 feet up the mountains that we came upon the Mafulus, a small people entirely naked save for a strip of bark worn around the loins and under the legs.

"Their skin is a dark, sooty brown color, hair a grizzly, frizzy brown, and across their faces are weird splashes of color, chiefly bright red.

"Here in these wild out of the world regions I found two French Jesuit priests. I cannot express my immense admiration for these two men who lived there quite alone and unprotected.

"The Mafulus, I discovered, though they are cannibals, are not actually head hunters. They only eat human flesh when the victim is killed in battle or private vendetta; but then the actual slayer is not permitted to assist at the feast.

"At the big feasts pig flesh is largely eaten. One village of about 100 houses killed 120 pigs for their meal.

"The 'religion' of the Mafulus is simply primitive fear of ghosts and spirits. They have not reached the stage of idolatry.

"They believe, for instance, that the fig tree and certain trailing plants are spirit haunted.

"A Jesuit priest who wanted to build a hut was warned by the Mafulus not to cut through one of these trailing plants. He laughed at their fears and cut it through.

"Strangely enough he was taken very ill the next day and had to be removed to the coast. And the natives were only strengthened in their superstitious fears.

"Marrige is a very simple process. A boy sees a girl he wants and goes to her house. A price is arranged for her, some pigs or a tomahawk, and the girl's parents accompany the boy back to his home.

"Then they all sit outside the house and the wedding is over.

"Mafulus bury their dead under the ground, except the chiefs, who are put into boxes above the ground or placed in the branches of the fig tree."

AN EARL'S ADVENTURES

Ranfurly has had an Adventurous Career.

The Earl of Ranfurly, who recently celebrated his fifty-fifth birthday, has had an adventurous and interesting life. Governor of New Zealand from 1897 to 1904, he was one of the most popular men that colony ever had, and his term of office was prolonged by the unanimous wish of the people. He holds tracts of land in Australia, where he spent some years at fruit-growing. He is a keen yachtsman, and in his collegiate days used to keep a steam yacht, in which he always travelled from Cambridge to London by way of the Ouse, the Wash, and the East Coast. He has had quite a fair share of narrow escapes. On one occasion, when he was playing polo, he was nearly killed by some marksman practising at a neighbouring range; another time he was knocked down by a couple of runaway horses, and had a third escape when he had to jump from the windows of Government House, Wellington, when a fire occurred there.

Are your hands chapped, cracked or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place, which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the frost-damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night, Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, end the smarting, and will heal quickly.

Mrs. Yellen, of Portland, says: "My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I did so they would smart and burn as if I had scalded them. I seemed quite unable to get relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and it succeeded when all else had failed. It closed the big cracks, gave me ease, soothed the inflammation, and in a very short time healed my hands."

Zam-Buk also cures chapping, cracks, winter eczema, piles, ulcers, festering sores, sore breasts and backs, abscesses, pimples, ring-worm, etc., cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, sprains. Of all druggists and stores, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Price 50c a box.

QUEER WEDDING EQUIPAGES

Auxiliary Horses and Even Fire Engines Sometimes Form Turnout.

Uniqueness in wedding conveyances is a little difficult to attain, but probably a certain young lady in Surrey, the daughter of a well-known local butcher, came as near to its attainment as anybody we have heard of lately. The carriage in which the lady was taken to church was driven by a stalwart butcher, and two other knights of the cleaver stood behind as footmen. But this was by no means all, for the lady was escorted from her carriage to the church and down the aisle by a procession of butchers' boys, looking spic and span in white overalls and aprons.

A fire-engine makes a very smart turnout at a wedding. There is nothing dull or commonplace about a fire-engine. It is always bright and up to the mark, and ready for action. Evidently this line of thought occurred to a happy couple in Devonshire some time ago, for the five bridesmaids who were to support the bride at her nuptials rode to the church on the local fire-engine, and it was one of the best-attended weddings in the annals of the parish.

A circus equestrienne had a very unique wedding in a Continental town some time ago. The man who drives the team of forty horses was the bridegroom, and he drove his own bride to church behind his forty steeds, the bride herself being seated, dressed in all her splendid robes, on the top of the triumphal car. Whether their married life has been as triumphant as their wedding procession history does not relate, but we may hope so.

Six artillery horses, driven by non-commissioned officers in uniform, formed a bridal team at a Brighton wedding, and a very smart turn-out it was. It was not so commodious, however, as the gaily-decorated tram-car, with white-gloved driver and conductor, which was the chosen vehicle at another lady's wedding in a Midland town. The bride, the bridegroom, their prospective fathers and mothers, and all the relatives and guests rode in their best attire both inside and upon the outside of the car, and the whole made a very brave show indeed.

AN INTERESTING RELIC.

An interesting relic has been presented to the Sergeants' Mess of the Royal Grenadiers. It is a Union Jack that flew in Ladysmith during the siege, and was the last flag to be taken down before the relief of the city. This flag was hoisted on the flag-pole of the Sergeants' Mess, and its tattered edges speak eloquently of the battles which it has seen.

Wise Men and Women Know that most of the sicknesses of life come from inactive bowels and from unhealthy condition of the organs of digestion. YOUR FUNNY FACE

Queer Facts Regarding the Features, Including Blind Places.

Have you ever heard of "the blind spot," and wondered what exactly it is?

It is very simple. At the back of the eye there is a sensative screen on which the picture of everything falls. This screen is called the retina, and it is linked up with the brain by a slender thread known as the optic nerve. The spot where the artery of this nerve joins the retina is not sensitive at all, so when one's gaze is directed at an object in such a position that its picture falls exactly on this spot, one cannot see that object at all.

That is why a batsman sometimes loses sight of an approaching ball. Let us cross the "blind spot," and a "blind swipe" is the only possible stroke.

Why are your eyeballs white? The reason, doctors say, is that the blood-vessels there are so extremely tiny that they can only take the white corpuscles of the blood, and not the coarser red ones.

Have you ever noticed two tiny holes at the "nose" end of each eye? Probably not, for they are tiny. They pinholes. But if you look at your eye carefully in a mirror you will find them. They are tear ducts, or tubes.

Your tears start behind your eyebrows, at the narrow end of the eye. They pass out below the eyelids, and the blinking of the eyelids carries them towards the other end of the eye, where the ducts, or overflow pipes, collect, and carry them down into your nose. That is why you are apt to blow your nose when you cry.

A flow of tears is going on all the time to lubricate the eyeball. It is only when you are under some powerful emotion that they get past the oily edging of the eyelid and brim over.

Have you ever studied facial expressions? Some people have practised impassivity, so that their faces betray little or nothing. Yet there is, according to anatomists, one part of the face which can never hide what feels. Anger or annoyed surprise can always be recognized by the observer who knows. Between the eyebrows there is a small group of muscles named by Darwin the "grief muscles." The man who hears bad or surprising news cannot prevent them twitching and contracting.

Most people would say that the two sides of the face are exactly alike. They aren't, as every photographer knows. Usually the left is the better looking. The eyes seldom match exactly, nor do the cheeks.

The nose is the most changeable of features. It seldom stays in quite the same shape all through life.

That snubness of nose, by the way, which is so much commoner among women and young children than among men, is due to the fact that women and babies have always led more sheltered lives, with less exposure to cold air. Cold air has developed the long nostril among men, a long nostril being necessary in cold countries, in order that the air may be warmed before reaching the lungs.

Your nose is much narrower than the negro's. He needs those tremendously broad nostrils to get sufficient air in tropical lands, where the air is thinner and less concentrated than it is in England. Warm air is always thinner than cold.

None of the details have yet been fixed, and it is at present not known whether the aged monarch will go first to Berlin or to London. It is expected that, when M. PREHISTORIC MONSTERS in JUNGLES of the AMAZON

LONG before the scientists began to discover indisputable evidence in fossil remains of reptilian monsters there were stories of strange gigantic animals in the far interiors of Central Africa, South America and even in the Indian jungle. Amyas Leigh, in his early explorations from the vast Matto Grosso district of Argentina and Bolivia to the upper tributaries of the Orinoco, sets down many instances of the reports of huge amphibious animals brought to him. Von Humboldt heard of them also.

Scientists are more willing to credit the statement that some surviving forms of the ancient dinosaurs are to be found in the gigantic tropical swamps east of the Andes, because the conditions of heat, vegetation, &c., are to-day nearly what they might have been in prehistoric periods.

Major George W. Fawcett, F. R. G. S., who traversed the southern section of the Amazonas region to give a scientific report of the great district of Acre and the map the boundary for the Brazilian government, describes many new fish and animals that he discovered, and heard often of the gigantic saurians that the Indians had seen further north. Colonel Julius G. Tucker, late United States Consul General at Martinique, penetrated further into the Caqueta country than any white man had ever done before and was assured by the highest dignitaries of the Caqueta tribes that terrible amphibious reptiles were to be found further south.

Charles Johnson Post, American engineer, artist and writer, who crossed the continent at its widest point some years ago, heard the same stories, saw some very remarkable signs and is a firm believer that gigantic animals of some kind exist there. Adriano Portales, collecting agent of the Itapu Trading Company, wrote an article for a Rio Janeiro newspaper five years ago saying that natives had shown him the head of a dead monster which they had found.

The following article is by an unscientific man, who, as he says, can merely relate what he saw. It is the most definite and circumstantial account as yet made public. Franz Herrmann Schmidt is an employe of the Hamburg-American Company, with headquarters at Manaos. While seemingly incredible, what he has to tell may in a few years be a matter of common knowledge

BY FRANZ HERRMANN SCHMIDT.

SO many of my friends in Brasil have besought me to make public the account I am about to write, and so many others in the United States and in Germany have laughed at the story when I told it to them, that I have hesitated for a long time about mentioning it again. It is not pleasant to be called a liar good humoredly, even when one has no means of proving that he is not, but knows that he is telling the truth. If boa constrictors as thick as trees and over one hundred feet long are common and are admitted to exist, I do not see why the stay at home public should not believe that what I saw in the same country is really there.

Therefore I want to remark at the outset that the man who does not believe what I have to say can go up the Amazon, and, with enough patience, see the same things; or if he does not care for the hardship he can find plenty of proof that many other men besides myself have had proofs brought to them. It is as well to add that when the wildernesses of Amazonas, Acre and Matto Grosso are opened up there will be many a surprise awaiting the college professors and others.

On October 3, 1907, Captain Rudolph Pfieng, who was well known as a sailor and trader, and myself were in Bogota, Colombia, seeking a number of concessions in the Orinoco country, but political conditions being very unquiet we failed to get them, and on the date mentioned determined to set out at once to penetrate the interior and descend some river on the other side of the watershed to the head of navigation on some branch of the Amazon. En route we hoped to find some high bars rich in gold, perhaps some fine new rubber areas or new forests of wild cacao; also both of us were anxious to keep our late presence and our mission in Colombia a secret. Had we gone out by the coastwise route the fact would have been common gossip.

From Bogota, with a party of Indian porters, we crossed the mountains to Tomeque, then on to San Martin, the country growing wilder and wilder. At Concepcion de Aramo we were compelled to organize a new party, but were fortunate to get twelve men who had been rubber gatherers and had been out of the regions inhabited by their own tribes. A little travel does a very great deal to broaden a primitive Indian, quite the same as it does an over civilized white man

For the arduous journey before us no finer set of men could be found. Any one of them could travel all day with two hundred pounds on his shoulders, supported by a cloth or hide band around his head; all could handle a machete in clearing a path with a skill and tirelessness that can be found only among the Indians of the tropical forests.

The Party's Equipment.

The second week we passed for days through wild cacao forests, with tens of millions of dollars of the crop going to waste all around us. We husbanded our food supply carefully till we got to the Ariari River, leaving our packed provisions untouched almost, while we lived on monkeys, the great gray lizards with their delicate pink flesh and all kinds and varieties of green things gathered by the Indians. One plant, which they called meuha, something like an artichoke, made the very finest mock cream tomato soup I have ever tasted. We made the main portion of a number of meals from it. The shooting of monkeys for food was by no means an easy task. We had two rifles each, a .30-30 Marlier, a light Marlin repeater and two heavy Remingtons, good for game, defence or all around purposes. It was these latter which we used in the swamps, as I shall relate.

When we reached the Ariari we chose a fine high, dry cliff for a camp and tarried long enough to pick a tree that would make a dugout canoe large enough to carry the fourteen of us and what we were packing. We had been disappointed in our search for gold. The gravel of the streams indicated a little, but there were abundant signs of old workings conducted by the Indians, and they had removed, doubtless, vast quantities in other generations. In the days when they would trade a leaf basket full of gold dust to a Spaniard for a rebajo cloth they must have got much of the grains, nuggets and dust in the San Martino country.

When we moved on we descended the Ariari and, meeting a rubber prospector's party, learned that the San Maderia and Mamore Railway project being pushed through by Percival Farquahar and some other American millionnaires was doing very nicely, so we thought we would get in the back of the new country which it would tap and see if there was anything on which we would care to try to get concessions in Rio Janeiro, so we ascended the Guayabero to the junction with the Ubia and struck south through the great gap there to the Macaya, crossing the watershed. It looks like a very out of the way course, but it was the quickest and easiest travelling, following the zigzagging watercourses, shooting rapids when descending and carrying around them when going up.

The overland journey from the Guayabero was the worst piece of work I have ever attempted, and I thought that I knew about all there was to know concerning fighting one's way through a country so thickly grown with trees that nearly every one is grown into every other one; where thousands of trees have been engulfed and smothered by the gigantic creepers spread over them; where one can travel for hours and never set foot on real soil unless on the banks of some stream or in some gully gash in the earth. It was necessary to use the knife almost constantly and some careful steering by compass was required to prevent travelling indirectly, owing to the numerous detours made necessary by spots that were absolutely impenetrable or where there were swamps that could be crossed only by going through the tops of the trees that grew out of them.

The Forests and the Snakes.

Many times we did this, and if a man lost his footing he would plunge down through the green into water that we could not see. Once in a while we would find a stretch where the supersoil was unproductive of undergrowth for some unexplained reason, but the great trees flourished. I remember one forest, mostly of trees like eucalyptus, where we advanced for hours winding in and out among the trunks, so closely set that there were many apertures through which a man could barely pass, and in choosing the path the lead man was careful always to select openings that would admit the broadest of the packs. The undergrowth in these places where the sun never shines is wholly of moss and fungi so deep that one sinks half way to the knee at every step.

I have since thought of these jungles and realized that in their recesses [illegible] might hide almost anything from a lost city to a mountain of gold already minted. A friend of mine who took a hardwood lumbering contract - number of years ago failed financially, because in the tract, which lay in country not nearly as dense as that which we traversed, he found the forests so dense that he had to fell on an average of seven trees to get one salable trunk to the ground.

Much of the foregoing sort of country characterized all the way to the Solimoes, where travelling became easier, and on by Tabatinga to the Journa. Water travel rested us for our second plunge into the forests, and the second plunge we would not have taken if it had not been for the things told us at Manaos, all of them clustering along the water courses and all as like as peas, so that I could see no reason for tribal distinctions at all. By taking the direct route to the south they assured us that we would find a wonderful bracao and rubber country, but there were great swamps inhabited by animals of such size that the boa constrictors we had seen would be a plaything for them.

At least twenty Indians were encountered who had at various times seen this huge animal of animals. Penaing and I questioned the stupid fellows minutely and were puzzled to find that while they agreed pretty well as to description, actions, &c.,

there was a wide divergence as to size and as to spots in which the creatures had been encountered. At least two hundred miles apart some of these must be, yet all lay in the general southerly direction.

Land of Extravagant Vegetation.

At this point I want to say that I know nothing of natural science or anything of the names of the animals and I do not believe that Pfieng did either, though he pretended to. We simply made up our minds that we would bag one if we could and have a good look at it; perhaps it was some new kind of gigantic alligator or some huge variety of water snake. At least it would be good sport. We had three guides from the waterside who remained with us sixteen days of travel quite as difficult as that which I have described.

The twelfth day we descended into a long valley with a spot about three miles wide and nine or ten miles long in the centre that showed many spaces of open water a hundred yards wide or more. It was a shallow lake literally choked with vegetation. Following the stream down we found that near the head of the lake the influx was augmented by some huge gushing hot springs with a sickening odor and a worse taste. Even in a land of extravagant vegetation, that around the head of the lakes was the most extraordinary I have ever seen, and I believe that the water from the springs had something to do with it.

The valley was like any other of many we had crossed, and we should merely have detoured the swamp if Pfieng, surveying it with his glasses, had not noticed in two or three spots on the shores of the lakes some huge swathes or crushed tracks such as the Indians had mentioned. We could not inspect these from solid ground.

The only way we could get at them was from the water, so we cut a tree, made a rude dugout, shaped up some paddles and the second day set it afloat in the open water at the head of the lake. One thing we noticed at once. There was not an alligator, iguana or even a large water snake to be seen anywhere. This in itself was queer. The swamps were full of floating islands where a tree or a big branch had fallen in, gathered a lot of water plants around it and gradually formed a structure on which even small trees grew.

We had to steer in and out among these, often cutting a path for the dugout through masses of entwining plants on the top of the water. One of the Indians leaning over the bow would keep the machete swinging as we drove the dugout slowly forward with the paddles. At last we got into a pool of open water from which one of the swaths led shoreward, and we put the boat right up into it.

There was no question but what it had been made by some enormous body being dragged from the water through the plants and mud until solid ground was reached, when a great circular wallow in a sandy spot was made. On the plants nearby were marks of waves two feet above mean level on the average and great flaglike stocks as thick as my leg were broken off short in the track and the tops mashed into the mud, while the movement of the body had carried quantities of the soft ooze from below the water and spread it like plaster on the crushed plants.

A very large elephant or hippopotamus could have made a similar track. In making the return journey to the water practically another course had been chosen, the point of entrance being some hundred feet to the east, and a little shelving bank there having been crushed in with the small trees that grew on it, in a way that showed that many tons of weight must have rested on it. The creature that had been able to make marks like these in the course of a peaceful progress must be a terrible thing if aroused to anger.

The Indians in the dugout grew more and more frightened, and I confess that I began to watch the water and listen for movements along the shore or among the islands with feelings slightly more tinged with anxiety than I had felt before I saw these evidences.

Leaving this spot, we proceeded slowly along and soon came to an island which was evidently a favorite sunning spot, as the plants were crushed down all over it and it was plastered with mud dredged up from the bottom. It took much time to get around any and it was very late in the day before we entered one bayou about a half mile wide to examine some smaller spots on the farther shore. Here we found three spots where some amphibious animal had left the water and returned to it. One was very large as the other two only about half the size.

Plainly there was more than one such creature in the lake. Another thing which we had not observed previously was that vast quantities of fronds, leaves green leaves and broad stretches of flag growth had been ripped off. I have seen spots in which a herd of elephants has fed, and these looked very similar. One tree had a smear of mud on it fully fourteen feet from the ground.

Encounter with Bullet Proof Monster.

Now we hastened back, following the same track we had cut, and twice we stopped paddling to listen as both Pfieng and I were sure that we heard heavy splashing behind the islands to the east. The Indians were for leaving at once, and in their talks among themselves that evening it was easy to see that they were discussing the matter of remaining longer in such a dangerous region. They were badly frightened. We mounted a guard that night for the first time in weeks, Pfieng and I taking turns with an Indian each. I believe that our men would have deserted us if we had both slept.

After breakfast we set out again in the dugout, taking our heavy calibre Remingtons with us and a good supply of ammunition. Taking the southern shore we traversed the stretch that seemed to be most affected by the waters from the hot springs, and shortly before noon began to find more wallows as the ground along shore grew firmer. At last we came to one large one which had been used for leaving and entering the water, or else the animal was still on shore. We approached very carefully and a thrill shot through me as I saw that the mud on the weeds and water plants was still dripping. We were close to our quarry.

With every precaution, the paddles making no noise at all, we advanced to the water line. To have left the boat would have meant going in the mud to our waists, perhaps, and yet we could see nothing but green stuff from where we were. We argued the question in a whisper and Pfieng had just announced his determination to follow the track inland if it was the very last act of his life, when a troop of monkeys was heard approaching, gathering some great blue-black berries from small trees that grew in the mud. We had just made them out when there was a sudden outcry among them, a large dark something half hidden among the branches shot up among them and there was a great commotion.

One of the excited Indians began to paddle the boat away from the shore, and before we could stop him we were one hundred feet from the waterline. Now we could see nothing and the Indians absolutely refused to put in again, while neither Pfieng nor myself cared to lay down our rifles to paddle. There was a great waving of plants and a sound like heavy slaps of a great paddle mingled with the cries of some of the monkeys moving rapidly away from the lake. One or two that were hurt or held fast were shrieking close at hand, then their cries ceased. For a full ten minutes there was silence, then the green growth began to stir again, and coming back to the lake we beheld the frightful monster that I shall now describe.

The head appeared over bushes ten feet tall. It was about the size of a beer keg and was shaped like that of a tapir, as if the snout was used for pulling things or taking hold of them. The eyes were small and dull and set in like those of an alligator. Despite the half dried mud we could see that the neck, which was very snakelike, only thicker in proportion, was rough knotted like an alligator's sides rather than his back.

Evidently the animal saw nothing odd in us, if he noticed us, and advanced till he was not more than one hundred and fifty feet away. We could see part of the body, which I should judge to have been eight or nine feet thick at the shoulders, if that word may be used, since there were no fore legs, only some great, heavy clawed flippers. The surface was like that of the neck. For a wonder the Indians did not bolt, but they seemed fascinated.

As far as I was concerned, I would have waited a little longer, but Pfieng threw up his rifle and let drive at the head. I am sure that he struck between the eyes and that the bullet must have struck something bony, horny or very tough, for it cut twigs from a tree higher up and further on after it glanced. I shot as Pfieng shot again and aimed for the base of the neck.

The animal had remained perfectly still till now. It dropped its nose to the spot at which I had aimed and seemed to bite at it, but there was no blood or any sign of real hurt. As quickly as we could fire we pumped seven shots into it, and I believe all struck. They seemed to annoy the creature but not to work any injury. Suddenly it plunged forward in a silly, clumsy fashion. The Indians nearly upset the dugout getting away, and both Pfieng and I missed the sight as it entered the water. I was very anxious to see its hind legs, if it had any. I looked again only in time to see the last of it leave the land—a heavy blunt tail with rough horny lumps. The head was visible still, though the body was hidden by the splash. From this instant's opportunity I should say that the creature was thirty-five feet long, with at least twelve of this devoted to head and neck.

The Flight.

In three seconds there was nothing to be seen except the waves of the muddy water, the movements of the waterside growth and a monkey with its hind parts useless hauling himself up a tree top. As the Indians paddled frantically away I put a bullet through the poor thing to let it out of its misery. We had not gone a hundred yards before Pfieng called to me and pointed to the right.

Above the water an eighth of a mile away appeared the head and neck of the monster. It must have dived and gone right under us. After a few seconds' gaze it began to swim toward us, and as our bullets seemed to have no effect we took to flight in earnest. Losing sight of it behind an island, we did not pick it up again and were just as well pleased.

Since it was apparent that our Remingtons, heavy enough to drop a lion or an elephant in its tracks, were no defence at all against such animals as we had seen, and from the tracks we had reason to suppose there were larger ones in the region, the wisest thing for us to do was to be content, move on as soon as possible, and return with a rapid fire gun or something like that. Also it would have been impossible to get the Indians into the dugout again even with a gun muzzle at their heads.

When we struck the Madeira we encountered a bunch of the white men on the railway project. They were mostly young engineers and were Canadians who had not been out long. When we told what we had seen they were very polite about it, but it did not take us long to find out that they thought we were liars or had been crazy from fever or were trying to chaff like them.

That was the last of the disagreeable experiences I have had, and when Pfieng and I separated at Para we agreed to forget the whole thing and say no more about it. He has since died, succumbing to fever March 4, 1909, in Iquitos. As I said on beginning this story, I tell it just as it happened, and anybody who reads it may think what he pleases about it.

I should say that there [illegible] to locate the region and so have settled the matter out of curiosity as I can. It is about five degrees thirty minutes south and seventy degrees five minutes west, and can be most easily reached by ascending the Solimoes River.

THE GREAT WORK OF THE SALVATION ARMY

Written for the Examiner by Roy Gilray

"The world is my parish," the dying words of John Wesley, have to be somewhat modified to meet the modern situation. They were true until about the time of the foundation of the Salvation Army, when the Church had moved up a few notches in the social scale, and neglected the work which this splendid organization has taken up. While the Methodist Church is proud of its lusty offspring, yet it is a pathetic reminder of the way in which the churches generally have failed to find a channel and a use for the evangelistic forces within their own bounds.

After thirty years of struggle, not unmixed with persecution, the Salvation Army has convinced cabinets, kings, presidents, mayors, councils and prison authorities throughout the world that they are on the side of commonsense and of law and order, that they are experts in practical sociology.

In England, where class distinction is more pronounced than it is here—even here some people turn up their nose at the Army—it was considered very "bad form" to be associated with the Army, but General Booth had too vivid a sense of millions of people falling down a slippery slope, ending in a precipice, to care whether it was "bad form" or "no form" at all. The Salvation Army lives and works beyond the reach of universities and their supposed refining powers. It trains more human beings to be gentle and manly than all the professors of deportment. The great aim of the Army is to reach a man through the heart. It imparts hope to the man whose failure in the battle of life is due to his own character and conduct. It is simply to introduce suffering humanity to the Christ, and to proclaim in language intelligible to the masses the offer of the Bread of Life.

To say they are successful is a mild way of putting it. It has been stated on good authority that if the Army were to disband in London, England, an immediate addition of 7,000 policemen would be essential to the safety of the persons and property of the comfortable classes.

Following the example of Christ, who fed the multitude before he preached to them, the Salvation Army appeals to hungry, starving people by relieving their distress, not only in the hope of saving their souls, but because they suffer.

Salvationists, as a rule, give one the impression of people whose lives, though always strenuous and sometimes near to martyrdom, are satisfying, joyful and complete.

There is nothing of that offensive type of holiness in these people that exults in the contrast between the sins of others and their own spotless condition. The charity they teach they feel; and feeling, practice. One seldom meets the theologian in Salvation circles. Salvationists engage in no scholastic disputes; shun controversy; never wrangle about creeds, nor contest the ground of other men's faith.

One outstanding feature of the Salvation Army is that they actually make money go farther than other philanthropic agencies working in the same field. No other body in the world commands the gratuitous services of so many self-denying workers who strive to make a dollar do the work of two. The Salvation Army is mainly supported by the poor for the poorest. It has been said that the Salvation Army is the only body that satisfies all the main conditions essential to success either for emigration or for colonisation.

Before sending anyone to the colonies it puts all applicants through a test at testing stations of its own to weed out the undesirables, and as far as possible to acquaint the rest with the conditions as they exist in the new country. When General Booth pressed the button of his "Darkest England" scheme an Emigration Department sprang into existence in a night. In five years nearly 50,000 souls have been selected and transferred from the Old Country to Britain across the seas. In the year 1910 the Salvation Army offered, for the first time, to insure emigrants under its flag not only against loss of luggage, but against sickness, accident and unemployment. Only a business undertaking on a great scale, confident of its methods, could undertake so daring a step as this.

Canadians, sometimes, expect too much from British immigrants. It is not everybody who can be a communicant of a church, a teetotaller, truthful, strong as Sandow, hardy as Buffalo Bill, jack of all trades and master of each, humble, reticent and willing to work at anything for anything.

* * *

The work of the Army at Hadleigh, in Essex, is a revelation. Alcohol and drugs are conquered by a combination of spiritual, mental and physical exercises, which are based on knowledge of human nature and Salvationist faith in the power of the Cross. When a man has done his work well for some months, has risen from grade to grade, satisfied his superiors, the machinery of the Army is used in many cases to give him a start under the British flag across the seas. It is impossible to explain the success of Hadleigh except on the theory that for the making of men, character, mind and muscle are required, and the greatest of these is character. Hadleigh is a hospital for the cure of diseased character.

Hadleigh estate consists of over 3,000 acres, which, originally, was low lying pasture and saltings protected from the inundations of the Thames by a sea wall. It was a grief to its former owners, and of no use to anyone. Farmers, cottagers, and residents resented the plan of General Booth, as they thought, to spill the scum of London on the Essex clay and marshlands.

To-day all is changed. Cattle, sheep, pigs, horses and poultry abound. The fruit farm consists of 14,000 trees, and in addition there are large acreages of strawberries and gooseberries. The year's crop of fruit consists of, amongst others, 45,000 lbs. of strawberries, 2,500 bushels of plums, 36 tons of gooseberries, and 2,500 bushels of apples.

* * *

The Salvation Army works through the penitentform, for the starving, the underfed, the drunkard, the pauper, the unemployed, the homeless, the criminal, the daughter of shame, the slum dweller, the sick, the would-be suicide, the soldier, the sailor, the emigrant, the colonist, the life-boat man, the fisherman, and the deaf and dumb. How many of our modern churches have a programme like that?

One never hears the Salvation Army praised for its emotional or rhetorical ability, but in nearly every country of the world officers of the Army have won the confidence of the powers-that-be, because they do efficiently, and cheaply, work that is difficult and disagreeable, and which, but for them, would be either left undone, or done ill and at great cost.

Another place where the Army is doing good work is at Hanbury Street "Elevator," so called because it elevates the men that are taken in. While it is a carpenter shop, yet its primary object is to be a hospital and a school for the unemployed cast upon the "rocks" of the street. When a man enters he is a patient seeking and requiring treatment in an industrial hospital. Weak and hungry, he is fed. Homeless, he is comfortably housed. Hunted from pillar to post, he gains time to rest, not among officials, rivals and critics, but among friends who require him to work, however, as one means of cure.

In the past the Salvation Army has kept out of politics, but whether it will always succeed is not easy to determine; but, in any event, the existence of a great body, in our midst, of spiritualized, simple, compassionate, and common-sense people, must always tell for the stability of our Anglo-Saxon homes, as well as exert benign influence on the peace of the world, on public opinion, on the acceptance of the gospel of work as essential to well-doing, and, above all, on the reality of the difference between right and wrong.

As the Salvation Army makes its appeal to the poorer or "submerged" classes, it is not surprising to find that it is doing a large work in India, where there is probably a greater number of that description than anywhere in the world.

The Salvation Army is reaching the heart of India. This success is due to its direct methods, to its emphasis on the fact of salvation, to the earnestness, humility and native simplicity of its teachers. They have preached the gospel in its simplest form, they have gained the confidence of the lowest classes (not without a struggle, however), by adopting their garb, living with them, attracting these childlike folk by their singing and beating of drums, leading them to Christian life by the straightforward recital of the Christ-story. It is among the masses in India that the most successful missionary work can be done. If Christianity ever does prevail in India, it must come from below.

The Government of India has settled one of its most vexing problems by placing several of the outlaw tribes in settlements under the care of the Salvation Army. The Government provides the territory and brings the "criminal tribes" into it, and the Salvationists are responsible for their regeneration; and so far, according to official statements, the results have been most satisfactory. Formerly, the Government had tried to subdue these tribes by forcible means, even relenting once in a while by providing them with land, cattle and grain in the hope that they would settle down and become law-abiding Indians. Instead they killed the cattle, ate the meat, sold the hides, and ate the grain, and started out once more to plunder. The Salvation Army, by kindness and love, coupled with industry, have turned these settlements into models of law and order. One Government official stated publicly that by going for the "inside" (heart of the Dom) instead of the "outhide" (punishment) the Salvation Army had done more in two years than the Government, with all the forces of law and order at its disposal, had been able to do in twenty-five years.

The extraordinary results obtained by the Army in this redemptive work lies in kindness and kindness alone. These criminal tribes are not only willing to enter these settlements but they are everywhere clamouring for admittance. It is said that on one occasion an army of several hundreds of these people were on the march to the settlement, the wives carrying babies, the husbands carrying young children, and the older children carrying the family possessions—marching by night, and hiding in the jungle by day, for fear the police might intercept them and drive them back. The Government failed with force; the Salvation Army succeeded with kindness. As General Booth very appropriately remarks: "You cannot make a man clean by washing his shirt."

One writer, who has made a careful study of the "uplift" of India, asserts that the work of the Salvation Army presents a most valuable hint for other missionary workers; that while the religion of Jesus has exercised a vast and miraculous effect on the peoples of India, yet this influence would have been vaster, more miraculous and direct if Christianity had been presented by a united and rejoicing Christianity; more about salvation and less about damnation. One serious defect in missionary work everywhere is the denominational rivalry, with the consequent differing forms of worship. The non-Christian people either fail to recognize the essential spirit of Christianity, differing from their own ceremonial worship, or those of them brought up in the more simple faiths of the Orient find it actually distasteful.

The great personality behind this great awakening is a man whose Indian name is Fakir Singh, known to the Army as Commissioner Booth Tucker, who, until middle life, was Mr. Tucker, of the Indian Civil Service, and a nephew of the famous author, Miss Tucker, known to readers the world over as "A. L. O. E." Born of pious parents he was brought up in the midst of evangelicalism. A great reader of tracts and religious works (for who can live in India without being religious in some form or other?), the civil servant felt yearning within his heart for greater service than sitting as a great Sahib administering justice, faithfully performing the duties of his office, and incidentally teaching the heathen from his lofty place the story of Christ. Happening on a little publication of the Salvation Army, and while reading its message, he exclaimed, "Here is the true light."

Without loss of time he applied for leave of absence and sailed for England. Arranging a conference with General Booth, he presented himself for service in India. The General received him cautiously, fearing the enthusiasm might die out when he came to realise the hard life into which he sought to enter. After a few days consideration Mr. Tucker called again. "I have retired from the Civil Service," he announced. "I am now penniless; you must take me in, there is no one else to whom I can go."

To win India for Christ was the master-thought of this Fakir (holy man), who had sacrificed place and pension for his religion. He decided to adopt the native dress, to follow native customs, and in everything to bring the mission of the Salvation Army into as close a correspondence with the traditions, habits and manners of India as the nature of Christianity would allow.

The success of the Salvation Army in India must not be ascribed only to the genius of Fakir Singh. His marriage to a daughter of General Booth carried into the mission field of India one of the most able children of a unique family, and the influence of Emma Booth in the affairs of the Salvation Army in India is felt to this day.

The personality of General Booth has also been a vast influence in this crusade. His visits to India have been occasions of extraordinary enthusiasm. It is also his plan of employing women as missionaries which has had such an awakening effect upon the peoples of India, particularly the poorer classes, who are so amenable to sympathy and gentleness.

The secret of the Salvation Army in India is the same in America, England and most of the other countries where it has organized itself, namely, tremendous organization carried forward on a tide of sweeping enthusiasm inspired by unquestioning faith in the Bible and unfailing love for humanity.

The Gifts Of The Twins

A Short Story

By ALTER LEON SAWYER.

"Plenty of playmates for them here at the Outlook," said Mr. Teaney, cheerfully. "No fear of their running away from a crowded hotel, is there, Clara?" Mrs. Tenney smiled and sighed. She did not like to dash her husband's hopes, but she had more experience of the ingenuity of the twins.

"Perhaps they might take a notion to run away with it," she rejoined.

Meanwhile, having just landed on the big piazza and cast a critical glance about him, Master Phil Tenney had already perceived a chance for amusement, and was preparing to clamber down the steps to regain the lawn.

"I fink I'd like to play wiv vat little boy over vere," he announced, as he descended. And Miss Cora Tenney, his twin, endorsed the sentiment, while she imitated the action. 'I fink I would, too," she said. The parents raised no objection. So far from that, Mr. Tenney looked after them fondly an dproudly.

"You watch," he said. "They'll make friends in just a minute. It'll be the same with the rest of the children here, and in less than two days all the grown folks in the hotel will be feeding candy and fruit to those youngsters of ours, and taking 'em driving and petting them in every way. Never were such children to get around people, I believe."

Once more Mrs. Tenney sighed. This time it may have been a sigh of relief. It was a comfort to know that, whatever the twins might do, at any rate they were miles away from "the Swamp."

The social instinct was very strongly developed in Phil and Cora, and since in their own city neighbourhood there were few children of their own age, they sought companionship in any and every quarter, even the most unsavoury. Two days before they had slipped away from home in the morning, and only returned to their distracted mother at nightfall—staggering under a burden of weariness and dirt, but bearing spoil from their expedition in the form of a dead pigeon, for which they had exchanged a silk scarf and a handkerchief. Thereupon Mrs. Tenney, cutting short her preparations, hastened to be resort at which she had planned to spend part of the summer.

Probably, she thought, it would do no harm to get ahead of time, for Phil had a slight cough and the doctor said it would improve in mountain air. She told herself, too, that in a family hotel where there were many children, the twins could satisfy their craving for society without taking such risks as they ran when they made surreptitious visits to the swamp and other city jungles. And in the first few days the mother realized her hopes, and saw her husband's prophecy confirmed. Phil's cough seemed easier. He and his sister made friends with everybody. Everybody helped take care of them, too, and even contested for the privilege.

When the young people promoted a picnic, "borrowing the twins" was the first thing to be arranged, and the twins were liberally rewarded for lending the charms of their presence. After three or four days Cora developed symptoms of a cold, and her sneezes and snuffles and watery eyes lessened somewhat her attractiveness as a plaything. But Phil flourished, and grew in favour, and mothers and grandmothers seemed as fond of him as were the children and unmarried youth.

"The lad has great gifts, great gifts," declared Grandma Abbott, who, in spite of a ponderous manner, was a sincere and warm-hearted old lady. "If he were mine I would dedicate him to the Church and expect him to become a bishop. Would you not like to be a bishop, Philip?" she added.

Phil looked at her and gravely weighed the question. "I fink, if you please, I'd ravver be a coal man drive a cart," he replied at length.

"Eh? Oh, yes, I understand." Although disconcerted, Grandma Abbott stood by her guns. "He has great gifts," she repeated. She said that so frequently that, half in earnest, the other guests took it up, applying it to Phil whether he chanced to be singing Annie Laurie or playing "catch," or exhibiting his accomplishments as a speller, when he spelled every word with the same letters—"c-a-t." The guests admitted that Cora also had great gifts—although it was true that when following her brother's lead she would assert that "I can stand on my head, too," she always collapsed in confusion and tears.

Mr. Tenney, coming up for Sunday, and hearing of the general admission of his children's genius, took it as a matter of course. "Well, we knew it long ago," he said. "But what makes 'em seem so dumpish to-night?"

"Cora complained of being cold, so I put her to bed early," Mrs. Tenney answered. "I think there's nothing the matter with Phil, except that he's tired. His cough——" The mother stopped, started and clasped her hands. From the next room there sounded the familiar cough—this time however, with the addition of an unmistakable whoop. Mr. Tenney rose and walked forward. Phil was awake and smiling.

"Hello, old man," the father said. "What makes you cough that way?"

"Vat's how Johnny Ward coughs," Phil explained, not without satisfaction. Apparently Johnny Ward was something of a leader and hero. "He had ve pigeon, you know," Phil added.

"One of those horrid children they met when they ran away to the Swamp," Mrs. Tenney whispered. But her husband, having had the experience that befalls a boy who is one of a large family accustomed to "catch things," was already on his way to the other crib. He peered at Cora's forehead, lifted her sleeve, and glanced at a chubby arm. "Measles, I reckon," he muttered. The voice was low, but Cora overheard.

"I fink Nellie McEntee has a measles, too," she murmured sleepily.

"The Swamp again!" It was Mrs. Tenney's tragic comment. "But now, what are we to do?" she asked. "You'll have to go down and talk to the manager, John." And bravely, if not joyously, Mr. Tenney went. Yet the manager was very nice about it.

"Such things will happen," he said with a rueful smile, "and since you're here you may as well stay. Probably the mischief has already been done."

So the gifted twins went into quarantine, whither, in the course of the next few weeks, they were followed by many guests. As the manager forecasted, the mischief had been done; it was too late to flee from contagion, and quite a number who had escaped the common diseases of childhood now took their choice of the two. With most of the patients and their nurses the spirit of philosophy prevailed. Two or three made slurring remarks about "that woman's selfish carelessness in bringing those children there," but people in general realized that Mrs. Tenney was an innocent offender, and governed themselves accordingly. On their account she had small cause for uneasiness—although she did shed tears when she heard that Grandma Abbott had begun to whoop.

"Everybody — almost everybody—has been sweet," the mother summed up thoughtfully, as the family stood awaiting the carriage on the morning fixed for their departure. "And yet," she added with sudden energy, "I've often felt like running away—just as Phil and Cora do—and I never want to see the place again."

"What's the idea of that?" inquired Mr. Tenney, with the proverbial density of a mere man.

"Why, people will never forget," his wife explained. "If I should come here years from now, there'd be somebody to say, 'that's the woman who brought the sick children and infected the house.' I know I'd remember it if anybody else had done it."

Mr. Tenney, perceiving the uselessness of consolation, attempted none. Grandma Abbott had just appeared at a distant window, and he lifted his hat. Then, suddenly, as Phil and Cora waved their hands to her, he turned aside and chuckled. "Grandma said that these were children of great gifts," he muttered. "She was right. So they were. When one of 'em didn't give the whooping-cough, the other stood ready to give the measles."

But although the mother—who had borne most of the burden, as mothers do—perceived that that was a joke, she could not smile at it quite so whole-heartedly as Mr. Tenney thought the merit of the jokes demanded.

She Had a Bad Cold, So He Recommended

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Mrs. James Warren, Edmonton, Alta., writes:—"Just a few words in favor of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A short time ago I contracted a bad cold, and tried several remedies, but had no good results. I asked my druggist to give me some good cough medicine he could recommend, so he told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and I can safely say I have never tried anything like it. The first dose gave me relief, and I was completely cured of my cough before I had finished one bottle. It is the best cough remedy I have ever tried, and I can recommend it to everyone."

It is a remedy without an equal for coughs, colds, bronchitis, and all affection of the throat or lungs.

IT WAS STONE IN THE BLADDER

GIN PILLS PASSED IT

"Five years ago, I was taken down with what the doctors called Inflammation of the Bladder—intense pains in the back and loins, and difficulty in urinating, and the attacks, which became more frequent, amounted to unbearable agony. I became so weak that I could not walk across the floor.

My wife read in the papers about GIN PILLS and sent for a box. From the very first, I felt that GIN PILLS were doing me good. The pain was relieved at once, and the attacks were less frequent.

In six weeks, the Stone in the Bladder came away. When I recall how I suffered and how now I am healthy and able to work, I cannot express myself strongly enough when I speak of what GIN PILLS have done for me". JOHN HERMAN, Hamilton, Ont.

A COMING BOOM IN WHEAT

UNTOUCHED POSSIBILITIES IN THE CANADIAN NORTHWEST

Not Much More Than a Fourth of the Arable Land Now Yielding—Soil Right, Weather Propitious, and More Population Coming All the Time—The Day of 500,000,000 Bushels in Sight—How Boston May Share in the Prosperity.

By E. W. Thompson.

The continent of America has need of a new institution. Though this is a long felt want, and too likely to remain so, it has never been named, described, nor accurately realized. Vague aspirations toward it have been indicated by occasional lamentation that a modern Messiah, termed "The Fool-killer," does not arrive. If he did ,there would be vastly less slaughter than is predicted by the demand, and some who urge it might perish. They have not understood that the people do not lack sense so much as accurate information, imparted authoritatively by commissioners perfectly acquainted with all important business of public interest, and absolutely free from pecuniary longings. Messrs. Andrew Carnegie, J. J. Hill and John Rockefeller, if they could be inoculated beyond doubt withchanging altruism, and refreshed from The Fountain of Youth, without lessening their knowledge of business in general, would seem fit for places on the board. The duties of that commission should be to observe The Situation, declare what ought to be done, tell why, and show what cannot but happen if their counsel should be ignored. It is true that editors, professors, politicians, clerics, magazine writers and even newspaper correspondents sedulously engage in this grand work. They would be authoritative if they agreed—but do they? From that multitude of counsellors comes too little wisdom to the people. They lack leisure to winnow the wheat from the chaff, the Wise and the Righteous from the Foolish and the Greedy. What they need is guidance from a numerous commission of Just Men made Perfect Morally and Intellectually. Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Bryan are but two, though they often sound like a host, and in some matters of importance they appear not one.

THE PREAMBLE APPLIED

The above specification of what's needed comes from the astonishing spectacle of some Massachusetts people lamenting that the Grand Trunk Railway seeks a Boston terminal while some Canadian Maritime folk lament the same thing. The latter allege that they will be outraged unless they be allowed to monopolize Grand Trunk traffic, while the former declare that its arrival would be blasting. What both sets seem oblivious to is a truth that Mr. J. J. Hill has frequently stated, viz., that there will certainly be a general traffic blockade of the more northerly main railways and ports of the Republic and the Dominion unless a vast sum—he estimated it at $500,000,000 two years ago—be expended as soon as possible on new railways and on improvements of the old. What Mr. Hill does not know about transportation is not knowledge. He took into consideration the rapidity of development on western lands, and the swiftness with which present population must double. In effect he signified that every existing railway system will soon be offered more traffic than it can handle; that every northerly port will be crammed beyond its capacity for exports and imports; that St. John and Halifax can have no good reason to fear division of Grand Trunk Pacific freights to Boston and Providence, since there will be more than enough to create glut all around: that New England ports must need all the railways they can induce to reach them, or else forego sharing in the certainly coming big trade for whose accommodation they should be preparing in every possible way. Instead of the ports and railway companies angrily obstructing one another, like so many dogs each eager to crowd others from the trough, they ought rather to promote one another's extension, lest all alike be affected as the three great Canadian railways now are. They cannot handle the traffic which is offered. Millions of bushels of snow covered grain lie in course of wetting and rotting on the prairies. Canadian farmers, dealers, manufacturers, importers, are cursing the companies. American border-state farmers fear to be neglected and made almost as badly off as their neighbors if Mr. Hill's roads help to lessen the Canadian glut.

It cannot be relieved before vast losses all around shall have occurred. The plain truth is that there is not in both Norths enough tracks, cars, locomotives, trainmen to serve the business. Production and population have got far ahead of transporation facilities. This situation threatens to be far worse before it can be bettered. When the betterments become sufficient, than Boston, Providence, Salem, Halifax, St. John, Montreal, Quebec, will all alike have more than they are now ready for. Or if they do not hasten to get ready 'pari passu with the Western and main lines, then the glut will be transferred from West to East In these circumstances any port which shall refuse opportunity to obtain more railway connections will have passed a unique self-denying ordnance —one refusing immediate competition and future trade.

WEST CANADA'S PROSPECTS

To say nothing of the rapidity of agricultural and other developmepat in the northern tier of American States, let the future traffic of East-West lines be estimated from statistics of Canada's three provinces — Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta. Their prairies area is 200,000 square miles. The districts fit for profitable farming measure 171,000,000 acres. There are a few more than one million people in occupation. Last year they cultivated about 12,000,000 acres, or say, one-fifteenth of the good arable land. They then produced over 170,000,000 bushels of wheat. Immigration to Canada is about 400,000 a year, and likely to increase if railways be swiftly supplied. A crop of 500,000,000 bushels of grain in that country within seven years is not unlikely. Such a yield would keep all the existing and projected 'spouts' seaward busy all the year round. The long haul of empties back westward would infallibly reduce lower rates in that direction, equivalent to knocking off a large percentage of the Canadian tariff on United States manufactures, to say nothing of cheap rates for west-bound traffic between New England and the United States West, via Canadian roads and their American connections. Consider the lessons which recent years have read to New England and especially Boston, concerning the old foolishness of underrating Canadian trade, calling our West an Arctic region, predicting that agriculture and people will yet be frozen out of it, and resting lazily confident that no good can be permanently gained by striving to get profit thence. In view of that past and this present it would seem incredible that some New Englanders oppose Grand Trunk service to their ports? These obstructives curiously allege that the G.T.R. is not well managed or well equipped. That tale might have passed twelve years ago. Your present correspondent, who travels considerably in the Republic and the Dominion, can testify that very extensive portions of the Grand Trunk furnish as comfortable and as regular trains, on as good a road bed, as the best between Boston and New York, or New York and Washington. Mr. Hayes, even before he became G.T.R. president, had gone minutely over the whole system and initiated reforms which now are generally completed.

THE BLESSED COLD

As to the severity of West Canadian winters being a permanent bar to great prosperity and large population, the opinion which I shared twenty years ago, has not been dissipated, but there is large reason to believe the cold winters and cool nights in summer are likely to be reckoned an asset of the region. Why Because the climate implies health and strength for the people, vigour, enterprise and the fondness for locality which these blessings create and perpetuate. Ottawa and adjacent regions have had for three months the equivalent of Western winter. No thaw since early in November. Clear, strict, steady cold, often far below zero. What effect? There are now 154 trained nurses out of employment in this small city. That has been the case of about as many for six weeks. Never was Ottawa more healthy, and this despite the city water being less pure than of old. When thaw comes we shall perhaps have as many influenzas as Boston and New York, but the long period of immunity from every kind of sickness must have built up physical powers of resistance and endurance. Again, all manner of wholesome, jolly winter sports have engaged the young and the middle-aged. Why suppose that people will not increase, multiply, rejoice forever in a country whose fertility bestows wealth as its climate health? The most prolific folk of the continent are those of the Canadian West. Statistics prove that they beat even French Canadians in breeding. Dr. Magloire, the Sage of Torelore, who was recently in Saskatchewan and Alberta, declares those provinces constitute a great sanatorium. He entertains but one fear concerning the future. It is that the old will there give up the immemorial human custom of dying, so that in the course of a few hundred years, there won't be any room there for the young. But the doctor looks far ahead for trouble.—Boston Transcript.

No Need of It.

One day Mark Twain was being shaved by a very talkative barber and was forced to listen to many of his anecdotes.

The barber had to strop his razor, and when he was ready, brush in hand, to commence again, he asked.

"Shall I go over it again?"

"No, thanks," drawled Mark. "It's hardly necessary. I think I can remember every word."—Everybody's.

Applying the Cure.

A hard drinker was informed by his doctor that he could be cured if every time he felt that he must have a drink he would immediately take something to eat instead.

The man followed the advice and was cured, but the habit of asking for food had become so fixed with him that he was once nearly locked up as a lunatic. He was stopping at a hotel, and, hearing a great commotion in the room next to his, he peered over the transom to see what the matter was. He saw, and rushed madly down to the office and shouted to the clerk: "The man in 153 has shot himself! Ham and egg sandwich, please!"—The World To-day.

Her Rule with Husbands.

Miss Kate Riverton Byles, one of the Suffragist leaders of Colorado, said at a recent Suffragist dinner in Cripple Creek:

"Opponents of woman's suffrage would have you believe that a vote turns a woman into a monster. Yet, when a young man, arriving at the age of 21, gets the vote, does he, or does he not, become a monster?

"But to hear the anti-suffragists talk you'd think that every voting woman was like that lady, rich in her own right, to whom her husband said:

"'My suspicions are at last confirmed We part for ever from this moment!'

"But the guilty lady retorted haughtily:

"'Not at all, sir. Not at all. It's my invariable rule to require a month's notice from every husband!'"—Los Angeles Times.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 24.—Business in grain over the cable continues very quiet, there being no improvement in the demand from foreign buyers. The local trade in oats is fairly active at firm prices, but the demand for other lines of coarse grains was quiet. There was some demand from foreign buyers for winter wheat flour and Leith did 25 tr. for 40 per cents, which is 4d to 5d per sack out of line. In spring wheat grades business is quiet for export, but the local and country demand is good. A fair trade is passing in rolled oats. Demand for butter is good. Eggs firm and if it was not for the American stock coming forward prices would be much higher, as receipts of Canadian are very light. Dressed hogs in good demand at an advance of 25c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Feb. 24.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 56 carloads, comprising 563 cattle, 313 hogs, 419 sheep and lambs, 12 calves and 5 horses.

Butchers.

Best heavy steers, $6.05 to $6.87½; prime butchers, $6.85 to $6.80; loads of good, $6 to $6.25; medium, $5.50 to $5.75; common, $5 to $5.25; inferior, $4.50 to $5; cows, $3 to $5.35; bulls, $4 to $5.60.

Milkers and Springers.

The market for milkers and springers was unchanged at $40 to $72 each, but only one brought the latter figure.

Veal Calves.

Few veal calves were on sale, and the market was steady at $6 to $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, $4 to $5; rams and culls, $3 to $4; lambs, $6 to $7.35, with selected lots at $7.50.

Hogs.

W. J. Johnston quoted $6.75 for selects, fed and watered at the market, and $6.50 to drovers for hogs, f.o.b., cars, at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb. 24.—At the Montreal stock yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Feb. 24 were 1050 cattle, 175 sheep and lambs, 1700 hogs, and 275 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 600 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 650 hogs, and 75 calves.

The gathering of buyers was fairly large, including some from Quebec, and considering that the Lenten season is now in full force, there was a good demand, but as the quality of the stock offered did not suit buyers in all cases, they limited their purchases. Good quality steers sold at $7 and full loads of steers and heifers, weighing 900 pounds each brought $6.10 to $6.35 per 100 pounds. Medium bulls were offered at from $4.50 to $5.50 per 100 pounds.

The supply of hogs was very short, and consequently a stronger feeling developed, prices advancing 15c to 25c per 100 pounds. The demand was good and sales of selected lots were made at $7.00 to $7.65 and in some cases as high as $8.75 was realized.

Sheep and lambs were quiet, the supply being limited. The demand for calves was good, and prices ruled higher on account of the small offerings.

Export cattle, bulls, $7 to $7.25; butchers' cattle, medium, $6.50 to $6.60; butchers' cattle, common, $5.90 to $6; canners, $2.75 to $3.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.25 to $5.75; butchers' cattle, medium, $4.75 to $4.75; butchers' cattle, bulls, $5.00 to $5.50; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $90; milkers, common and medium, each, $50 to $65; springers, $50 to $65; sheep, ewes, $4.50 to $4.75; bucks and culls, $3.75 to $4.25; lambs, $6.60 to $7; hogs, f.o.b., $7.00 to $7.05; calves, $4 to $10.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

Roosevelt Finds Ontario Too Radical For Him.

Boston, Feb. 27.—Standing in the assembly chamber of the Massachusetts capital yesterday, Theodore Roosevelt explained and emphasized his project for the recall of judicial decisions. Col. Roosevelt struck out boldly at those who have criticised his plan.

"Our system of government is a compound failure," he said, "unless the people are to be trusted to govern themselves."

In discussing his plea for a recall of the decisions of the courts, Col. Roosevelt after pointing out that sovereignty belonged to the people alone, not to the Legislature, the executive or the judiciary, said:

"In the last resort the people after due deliberation are to be and must be the masters and their representatives their servants. I am not advocating the recall of judges, I am advocating a measure which, if adopted, will prevent the necessity of the recall of judges."

"My proposal applies only to the legislative acts which the courts declare unconstitutional. I refer specifically to laws passed in the collective interests of the whole community. If such a law is declared unconstitutional by the court, I ask that the people be given the right, if they choose, to exercise that right themselves to pass final judgment upon the proposition.

"To listen to the arguments of certain worthy individuals, you would think that the purpose was to substitute the gusty passion of a mob for the decision of a court. Just across the St. Lawrence and great lakes from the State of New York lies the great commonwealth of Ontario, part of Canada, a commonwealth with essentially, precisely the same kind of government as New York, precisely the same problems to face in that commonwealth as in every commonwealth of Australia and Canada, as in Great Britain, as in Germany, as in France, as in practically all other great civilized nations. In that commonwealth the court has no power whatever to declare a legislative act unconstitutional.

"Now, I do not want to go as far as that. I think it is better that we should give the courts equal power with the Legislature, but I want to keep the people as the judge between them, when they differ as to whether a given law is within the power and the right of the people to pass."

Boundaries Resolution.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—Premier Borden gave notice of a resolution late last night to extend the boundaries of the Province of Quebec by taking in the whole of the hinterland, in accordance with the resolution proposed in 1908. The resolution provides for the adding to that province of the whole district of Ungava, composing about 480,000 square miles.

The Ontario boundaries, according to the resolution, will be the same as those proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and agreed to by Parliament in 1908. The new boundary line will start from the northeast corner of Manitoba and round to the eastern end of Island Lake and in latitude 53° 20" and longitude 93° 40". Thence northeasterly in a straight line to a point where the 89th meridian of west longitude intersects the shore of Hudson. Manitoba thus gets both ports, Port Nelson and Fort Churchill.

Ontario's shore line on Hudson Bay, according to the terms of the resolution, will only extend to within 50 miles from Port Nelson.

Japan Creeping Ahead.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Japan by 1916 will have wrested the position of third naval power from the United States, and this country will have difficulty in maintaining itself in fourth place unless it builds two battleships a year.

Secretary Meyer declared this to be a fact in his testimony before the House naval affairs committee. The Secretary urged greater liberality by Congress in dealing with the naval establishment.

The committee is pledged to economy, and although appropriations for battleships have not been acted upon, many members are inclined not to support the Democratic caucus resolution against a two-battleship program. The suggestion for a wireless, however, is not likely, to be entertained.

Cities Escape Expense.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—"In Ontario one-half of the total assessment, or $500,000,000, is on cities alone which maintain their few miles of road; the other half, $500,000,000, is on the towns, villages and townships, which have to maintain 50,000 miles of roadways. Thus it may readily be seen that it is only fair that the cities, as well as the Governments, should help in the good roads movement."

These statements were made yesterday morning by Major T. L. Kennedy of Dixie, Peel County, at the opening of the tenth annual convention of the Ontario Good Roads Association in the York county building on Adelaide street. About one hundred and sixty delegates are registered.

IN TRACK OF BLIZZARD.

Yesterday's Storm Felt All Over Ontario.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—The people of many places in Ontario in their struggles against the blizzard of yesterday are wondering if it is a return of last week's tornado.

Locally the storm caused much discomfort on the streets and interfered greatly with the railway traffic.

The blizzard from the southwestern part of the States had its origin in the same place as the storm of last week. The first disturbance was noticed in Utah and gradually gained force and spread to Texas, and thence to Oklahoma, where ten lives are reported lost and twenty-five persons injured. Indiana and Illinois also got a goodly share of the snow and high winds.

Southern Ontario, extending from Lake Michigan to Quebec, is under the rage of the storm which is prophesied to last until to-day, turning into sleet and rain in many localities and passing off the upper lakes.

In the west the weather is extremely cold, being 16 below at Winnipeg. Alberta and Saskatchewan are only moderately cold as also are the Maritime Provinces. The wind was going at the rate of 48 miles an hour yesterday.

Kingston Again Blockaded.

Kingston, Feb. 27.—The Bay of Quinte trains were running yesterday for the first time since last Wednesday on account of the big storms. Last night another big storm set in and it looks as if the line will be blocked again. The street car service was put out of business again.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The roof of the Goderich Wheel Rigs works was blown off during yesterday's storm.

W. M. Dack, registrar for Bruce and former representative of the Centre riding in the Legislature, died at Walkerton yesterday.

Twelve street cars were wrecked or burned in riots at Kingston, Jamaica. The company, which is a Canadian one, has imposed increased fares.

The Russian Emperor has confirmed the new Admiralty regulation under which a commander is compelled to destroy his warship instead of surrendering it to the enemy.

William Dwight, 177 Munro street, Toronto, was instantly killed last night on the east side of the Don when his horse backed over the bank and fell on its unfortunate driver.

C. A. Nodmarcu, an engineer engaged erecting the new waterworks system at Welland by the Canadian Bovine Co., Toronto, was instantly killed by a Michigan Central train early yesterday morning, near the depot there.

Justice Charbonneau's decision has apparently nipped in the bud several incipient suits similar to that of Hebert. Two lawyers announced yesterday that they had advised clients not to proceed with suits, in view of the Hebert judgment.

Brain Weights.

The average weight of a man's brain is five ounces, but it varies largely in different individuals. Usually it is about one-thirtieth of the body's weight. In quadrupeds the relative weight is remarkably less than it is in human beings. It is one-one hundred and seventieth in dogs, one-four hundred and fiftieth in horses, one-seven hundred and fiftieth in sheep and one-eight hundredth in the ox, thus indicating a direct relation between weight of brain and intelligence, the animals named being ranged in the order of their mental capacity and docility.

Afraid them they'd all.

STRIKING CONTRAST OF RIGHT AND WRONG METHODS OF HANDLING MILK

A Prominent Feature of the Provincial Board of Health's Exhibit at Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall—To Awaken Interest in Public Health.

A GENERAL INVITATION

Articles have appeared of late in these columns dealing with the question of pure milk supplies and an opportunity will be given to-night to those interested in the question to obtain a better knowledge of conditions as they should be and as they are in far too many cases. In the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall a demonstration will be given of the work that is being carried on by the Provincial Board of Health.

The entire demonstration may be said to be an exposition of what may be done to improve the general health of the public and what steps should be taken to accomplish it. Part of the evening's programme will be a moving picture display, one subject showing how the ordinary house fly carries disease, another dealing with the milk question and a third with the work of the red cross society. The films treating with these questions will require about an hour to be shown and are said to be not only instructive, but decidedly entertaining. They will particularly appeal to those citizens who are interested in the public health.

Each of the three films tells a different story and several of them have been shown in moving picture houses. The film on the fly shows it in its embryo form and gives actual pictures of its disease carrying methods.

The pure milk film is made particularly interesting by the human interest involved. A young farmer and his wife are living with his father, whose methods about the farm show no trace of modernity. The son becomes dissatisfied with the home conditions and finally moves to the city where shortly after his arrival they find it necessary to make sure of the quality of the milk supply for their baby. The young man arranges to secure milk from his father and not long after the child becomes ill with some disease which they trace to the milk, in the securing of which they had exercised particular care. The old farmer is so worried by the illness of his grandchild, and by the new knowledge that has been forcibly brought home to him, that he begins a radical change in the manner of handling milk on the farm. The film emphasizes the value of safeguarding the purity of a milk supply.

Much "Scenery" Carried.

The exhibits before being unpacked are probably more numerous than the pieces carried by the Madame Sherry & Co. There is one setting of a house with two rooms, one of which is properly ventilated and in the others the windows are closed. The striking manner in which the value of ventilation is emphasized can be most appreciated by an inspection of the exhibits.

There are many other displays, all dealing with important considerations in providing for the general health of the public. Photos of sanatoria in all parts of the wor and the prevention of the contagion of tuberculosis is one of the chief aims of the exhibition. It was the principal object at the outset, but the ground covered is enlarging. This exhibit will remain in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, on the top floor, until Thursday night. This evening it will be quite informal and no admission fee is charged. It is felt that everyone can learn something from the displays and apparently the purpose of the exhibition is to awaken the public mind to the importance of fighting diseases by educating the people in methods of prevention and the value of cleanliness and sanitary methods. A general invitation is extended to the men and women of Peterborough to visit the exhibition during the next three days.

Mr. E. H. Jones of the Toronto Board of Health, is in charge of the exhibition.

CANADIANS ON BOARD.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

BELFAST, IRELAND, Feb. 27. — The White Star steamer Olympic, eastward bound, struck a submerged wreck in the Atlantic Ocean early this morning, and is now limping into this port for repairs and examination to see if she can continue her journey to England. It is feared the damage is serious. She sailed from New York on Wednesday last with an unusually large number of first and second class passengers, including Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, and a number of Canadians. The gigantic liner struck the wreck at good speed and shivered from stern to stem as if it were a rock. The passengers dressed hastily and many rushed on deck, but were reassured by the officers, and there was no panic. The Olympic has only recently come out of the drydock after a collision with the Battleship Hawke.

MORE INCONVENIENCE CAUSED BY STORM

The city experienced a share today of the storm which, originating in the South Western States, is passing via Toronto to the Northwest. Through the night the storm raged in the vicinity of Toronto and tied up the traffic in a similar manner to the storm of last week, though perhaps not so severely.

Both the local railway systems are more or less affected by the disturbance. It is said to be very bad in the east and consequently trains from the east are in some cases late. However, the lines are open on both railways and traffic is not seriously affected. The G.T.R. Port Hope train due at 9 o'clock last night, was two hours late, while the flyer did not arrive until 4 o'clock this morning. The delay of the latter was occasioned by a wait for a connection from one of the northern branches, where, in some spot, a snow-bound freight train had delayed the connection.

A snow plough passed through this morning from Port Hope and another from Belleville.

Mr. Peter Tully, who has been a resident of the Township of for about eight years, sold out and left for his old home seven miles west of Peterborough this morning. Mr. Tully, during his stay in the township, was well thought of by neighbours and friends in general. This being his only reason for returning to the place of his birth. He was accompanied by several brother farmers who assisted in hauling his household effects to Peterborough.—Lindsay Warder.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP OF STREET RAILWAYS

Ald. Gordon Presents Information of What Fort William and Port Arthur Have Done in This Regard.—Figures Showing Last Year's Receipts.

THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT

Alderman Gordon, who has been working along the line of municipal ownership of the Street Railway, in the event of the city expropriating any of the various power plants under the new bill to be presented to the Legislature, has some very interesting figures of the Port Arthur and Fort William Electric Railway.

Mr. Gordon points out that the Twin Cities are very proud of this enterprise, and the person going into Port Arthur or Fort William is first made acquainted with this railway, by the citizens, as one of the most successful plants in America, and the result is that Port Arthur, Port William and Calgary have indicated more sound business sense than perhaps any other of the cities in Canada.

The management of the Port Arthur and Fort William Electric Railway, of course, has been first class. The officials placed in charge of this municipal enterprise are sound business men, well acquainted with this line of work and with the co-operation of the citizens, the result has surpassed all expectations. The result of the building of this railway has been the development of both cities in sections which would otherwise not have been as rapidly developed, and a largely increased area of assessment has been furnished to both municipalities for the reduction of the burden of taxation.

The consensus of opinion in both cities is that the road has given better service to the public and that the cities are receiving more financial benefit than if it were owned by the best company in existence; and both cities have their own plant for all time to come; and as the development of the cities at the gateway of the west increases, the traffic of the railway likewise increases, and these two cities reap the great benefit of the foresight and good judgment of the men who brought forth this scheme of municipal ownership of the Street Railway of Port Arthur and Fort William.

Ald. Gordon is of the opinion that Peterborough should consider the question of taking over a railway which has only recently become paying and which will double its earnings in each decade, as Peterborough has doubled its population almost within the last ten years.

For 1911 the following figures are given for the Port Arthur and Fort William Railway and he states that so far this year the 1912 earnings are far in excess of those of 1911.

Receipts For 1911.

Passenger fares	$159,477.60
Baggage earnings	3,394.73
Freight earnings	6,594.51
Advertising privileges	709.00
Power sold	192.50
Scrap sold	84.07
Mail contract with the government	360.00
Arthur Street branch line	6,466.46
Interest on savings balance known as the rest account	2,374.89
	$173,976.75

Expenditure For 1911.

Arthur Street branch line	$ 5,286.66
Maintenance of ways and structures	18,321.22
Maintenance of equipment	21,989.57
Conducting transportation	41,013.20
Power purchased	40,286.02
General expenses	3,099.55
Reserve for accidents	6,941.94
	$137,469.67
Net gain	36,507.08
	$173,976.75

Giving a net gain of $36,507.08 for the two cities or, in other words, earning a dividend of almost 10 p.c. on the money expended for 1911 after setting aside for accidents practically $7000.00 which is used only in case of litigation or accidents, and which goes into the reserve if not required to pay estimated cost for settling for accidents.

The interest on the savings balance of this railway amounts to $2374.89, which would indicate that the reserve on the savings balance amounts to almost $70,000.00.

If this enterprise were run by a corporation and earned the dividends above mentioned, the stock would go on the market at nearly $1000.00 a share and then that would give almost 5 p.c. upon the $1000.00 market value of the stock.

With the Aubrey Street Railway making a profit of $100,000.00 in 1911 to reduce the taxation of the ratepayers and the Port Arthur Street Railway making a profit of $36,507.08, it looks as there any question but that Peterborough would be the gainer by taking over the Street Railway? While it is in its infancy, and before the franchise becomes of more considerable value.

Mr. Gordon feels that the Retail Merchants Association and the Board of Trade might give this subject more attention.

Peterborough Trains to Toronto Were Consolidated and Did Not Get In Until 1:30

LINE WAS BLOCKED

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, FEB. 27.—That troublesome Midland division of the Grand Trunk, which branches off the main line at Scarboro and goes to Peterborough is again giving its owners trouble. Since midnight the line has been choked with snow that has blown and packed into numerous cuts along the single track route. The train that left Toronto at 7.50 this morning was held up at Scarboro Jct. till the snow plough that was sent from Blackwater came through. It arrived at twelve o'clock, clearing the line for two Peterborough-Lindsay trains that were creeping along behind. Those two train were consolidated and got to Toronto at 1.30.

Many of the passengers on the eastbound train that was held up at Scarboro came back to the city rather than remain on the train.

SLOW PROGRESS.

The Public School inspectorship of Toronto will probably remain a long time vacant. Dr. Merchant is "slated" to succeed Mr. J. L. Hughes but as Dr. Merchant has necessarily to conclude his investigation into bilingual schools before he enters upon the impecunorate, it will be a long time before he is free. According to the progress he seems to have made so far, it will be next winter before he is ready with his report. The absence of his report was pleaded by Sir James Whitney as an excuse for his statement that there was no such thing as a bilingual school. It does not seem as if there would be any bilingual legislation this session, though the subject was a burning one at the recent provincial elections.

A BREACH OF FAITH.

The presidental contest situation in the United States is taking on something of South Renfrew bye-election conditions. Roosevelt said in November, 1904, that "under no circumstances would he be a candidate for, or accept another nomination" for the Presidency. Now, in open disregard of this undertaking, he is openly fishing for the nomination in competition with Mr. W. H. Taft. When we cannot take public men at their word; when they forfeit all right to be trusted, their claim to consideration becomes greatly weakened. As to Canada, as our neighbours would say, "it's no funeral of ours". But everybody is concerned in keeping public life and public men at a high standard of honour. The men who deliberately broke the agreement arrived at, in respect of South Renfrew, will never be trusted again, and will always have a stain on their honour.

THE GOOD ROADS BOOM.

The Conservative journals are inclined to be unfair in summarising and characterizing parliamentary doings. The Mail and Empire used a "splash" headline— "Federal Good Rods Bill Attacked by Opposition." This is entirely misleading. A reading of the text shows that the Liberals did not "attack" the bill, but criticised it in a friendly way. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's "attack" consisted in an amendment, providing that the Federal aid to good roads should be distributed to the province in the same way as the provincial subsidies —on the basis of population. This raises a debatable question with many points in favour of Sir Wilfrid's proposal, especially the point that such a distribution will prevent the federal fund from being politically exploited—made the machinery of party aggrandisement. We should get the full advantage of any Federal fund and we should provide in the legislation regulating its distribution, against a single dollar being diverted or employed in the interests of party propagandism. While referring to the matter of good roads, it may be pointed out that a Federal grant to good roads does not relieve the provinces of a dollar of responsibility. Good roads are properly the charge of the provincial governments and the municipalities, and it is plain that there cannot be too much expenditure of money. Money expended upon providing good roads cannot be wasted, if fairly and intelligently expended, because there will be always lack and need of good roads. Quebec province, regarded by Ontario with something like patronage, has devoted ten millions to the construction of trunk lines of public highways of the highest quality. Ontario might well set apart ten millions instead of one million for good rads, and bear a half or two thirds, or the whole of the cost, instead of one-third. Good roads are more important to the farmer and also the city dweller than any other public utility—more important than railways and canals. President Kennedy, at the good roads convention, with a few strokes, drew a fine picture of the benefits of good roads. He said:

"What Ontario wants, especially the farmer, is a Provincial system of main highways reaching from county town to county town. This would enable the man living in Bellevill, or Peterborough to go to Barrie, Orangeville, Owen Sound, Goderich, Simcoe, or any other county town by direct Provincial road.

"Such a system would comprise nearly 2,500 miles and every county in Ontario, including Prince Edward, would have a share. This road would be essentially a farmer's road, would encourage and educate the counties to counties road system and to better township roads, so that every farmer in Ontario could get to their market town by good township roads, better county roads and then onto the excellent Provincial road which would be built."

Mr. Kennedy is right, as far as he goes; but there should not only be Provincial trunk lines, built with Provincial money—the money of the whole people—but it seems that in the best interests of the county the government might also build county road systems and leave the municipalities to spend their means and energy in improving the roads connecting the farmers with the county system and through that with the Provincial system. A good roads boom would be a great boon.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The British Government contemplates becoming a strike-breaker. It is said that in the event of a national strike of coal miners, the Government will take over and work the coal mines and thus prevent what would be a national disaster—a failure in coal supply.

If Ontario is about to receive a considerable addition of territory on the north, including a port on Hudson's Bay ,the Liberal party, says the Brantford Expositor, is to be thanked for it. Sir John Macdonald, when Premier of Canada, made persistent efforts to prevent the extension of the boundaries of this province on the west and north, and even sought to give Manitoba territory which the members of the boundary commission afterwards decided to belong to this province. The substantial gain which was then made has made it possible for Ontario to get a still larger slice of territory.

A TOUCH OF NATURE.

(Hamilton Herald.)

The speech of Allan Studholme which wound up the debate on the speech from the throne was a rather vitriolic one. The member for East Hamilton was far more acrid in his allusions to the premier and to the Hon. J. S. Hendrie than he is wont to be. But is this surprising? After all, Mr. Studholme is very human, and there was a whole lot of human nature in his speech of yesterday. No wonder that he is sore at the government, especially at the head of the government. He cannot forget that Sir James Whitney came into East Hamilton for the express purpose of preventing his re-election. He remembers that the Conservative leaders determined that the only Labour representative in the legislature must be beaten at all costs, and rejected with scorn the proposal that, so far as the party organizations were concerned, Studholme should be unopposed in the east and Hendrie returned by acclamation in the west. No wonder he has "nursed his wrath to keep it warm."

NATIONALISTS' ULTIMATUM

Ill-assorted Coalition Wriggles Uneasily

OTTAWA, FEB. 26.—The situation with regard to the threatened split among the supporters of the coalition Government over the Manitoba school issue remains practically unchanged to-night, Premier Borden was to have moved the resolution providing for the extension of the Manitoba boundaries to-morrow, but it is doubtful if this will be done for a few days yet, pending the result of the present efforts to reach a compromise. Moreover, Mr. Borden has been confined to his house for the last two days with a cold, and this may also serve as an excuse for delaying matters.

The only new development was the arrival of Archbishop Bruchesi and his secretary, Canon Gauthier, who are, of course, supporting the Nationalist demands for the incorporation in the boundary extension bill of a clause guaranteeing separate schools to Roman Catholics in the territory to be annexed to Manitoba.

Mr. Bourassa himself has not yet appeared on the scene, but is conducting negotiations over the long-distance telephone from Montreal and through his lieutenant, Armand Lavergne, who has been very diligent on the job here.

The Government press has sought to offset the seriousness and significance of the situation as stated in these despatches yesterday by making much of the fact that The Globe was in error in specifically stating that Mr. Bourassa was himself in Ottawa. The statement that Mr. Bourassa was here was made in good faith. Your correspondent was informed from two sources deemed reliable that the "master" himself arrived from Montreal yesterday afternoon, to which place he had come from Quebec to consult his followers.

It is known that he and his fellow-Nationalists have presented what is practically an ultimatum to the Government; that if their demands are not acceded to their support can be no longer relied upon. The Government needs and desires this support, and although a split must come sooner or later, the Ministry does not yet feel that it is far enough out of the woods to take a bold stand at present and break with the allies to whom it practically owes its present tenure of power. Compromise and delay are still the ruling principles of the Government's policy.

Aftermath Of South Renfrew Bye-Election

Mr. H. F. Gadsby, in the Toronto Star, draws this pen-picture introducing some chiar'oscuro and side-light effects in relation to the South Renfrew bye-election:

"George Graham's win in South Renfrew gives the debate in the House a blithe spirit, the Opposition cheerfulness and added courage, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier a brisk Lieutenant and a dear friend to sit by his side. Now that the empty chair is filled Room 89 sees every hope blossoming.

George Graham will help a lot, but the moral effect will help more. Taking cause and effect together the Grits are well satisfied. Their summing up is that all Canada was looking at the election in South Renfrew and wondering whether common decency would be vindicated, and now that it is vidicated it gives them renewed confidence in human nature, and their prospects in general. Whatever way they look at it they can see nothing in it but a wallop for the Government.

'As one stalwart put it: 'I didn't think Laurier could be so cruel as to give an infant Government a crack like that before it was able to walk".

But that was a prejudiced opinion. The remark of one Tory sessional messenger to another looks like a more reliable source of speculation. 'Well,' he said, 'the bottom seems to be dropping out of the basket pretty soon." And the groundlings generally know for the simple reason that they are near the ground.

Also what a Cabinet Minister replied when he was asked why he did not speak in South Renfrew may not be far from gospel. He said: "You bet I didn't stick my nose in there. I knew what was coming."

Weather Changes in Ottawa.

Ottawa is the quickest town in Canada to note changes in the political weather. So many of the citizens depend on the Government for a living that they are always looking for signs in the sky. When its a cold day for the Government, the civil service has chilblains, and when it's a rainy day its corns hurt or its rheumatism bothers. The civil service experienced all these symptoms Thursday night. As a rule, when the Government changes the civil service crawls into the hole and draws the hole in after it, particularly if the Government is of a hostile stripe. Racks and thumbscrews wouldn't drag a word out of them. Consequently Room 89 considers it very significant that there was an unusually large number of outspoken Grits in the Russell House rotunda and around the newspaper bulletins when the returns were coming in.

Perhaps the South Renfrew election looks larger in Ottawa than it does in other parts of Canada—perhaps not. At any rate it was natural enough, with the House in session and a political campaign going on within thirty miles of the capital, that both sides should take a feverish interest. That the campaign was crucial and that George Graham wasn't getting a square deal.

No Lack of Trying.

If the Government didn't win it wasn't for lack of trying. If the Liberals did win it was because they tried just as hard, but had better luck and a cleaner cause. The Western Liberal members threw themselves into George Graham's campaign with vim. Among those present were Turriff, Martin, Neeley, Molloy, Champagne and MacNutt. The weather was bitter cold and the roads waist high in snow, but the coonskin brigade ate up the South Renfrew winter and asked for more. Rodolphe Lemieux, and Jacques Bureau, and Dr. Beland, and Boivin, and Devlin showed where Quebec stood in this affair of honour; Macdonald, Carvell, Kyle, Carroll, and Sinclair seconded the motion for the Maritime Provinces; and Murphy, Ross, MacMillan, Pardee, and Proulx said aye for Ontario. Even the Senate was stirred to anger, and Senator Rats spoke twice, proving himself as good on the stump as ever. To cap all, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, risking the danger to his prestige that defeat would mean, made a progress through the whole constituency, and was welcomed in a way that gave the enemy heart failure.

Sir James Whitney's Government also took a look in for Dr. Maloney. Howard Ferguson did a lot of speaking. Herbert Lennox cut loose once or twice. The Hon. W. H. Hearst was billed to speak, but McGarry played fair, and put a stopper on that.

A SUDDEN BEREAVEMENT.

HARD WINTER ON CHARITY DEPARTMENT

There is very little decline in the number of calls made upon the relief department of the city. Relief Officer Miller says that conditions in connection with charity work are in a normal state at present, and with the passing of the present strenuous month, a relief is anticipated. The winter has so far proved to be a hard one on the poor people and the funds of the charity department were taxed to the utmost at times. Fuel and provisions were the principal commodities rquired, while in many cases clothing and even medical attention were supplied.

Eggs At $1.00 Each

Eggs at $1.00 each should be considered a good price even in these days of extremely firm and high markets for food stuffs, but it was actually paid for a small consignment received by a local man to-day. Mr. Geo. McClelland, Lock street south, had expressed to him one dozen 'Buff Orpington eggs, for which he paid the sum of $12.00. Naturally, at this price, they are too valuable for mere eating purposes. They are prize eggs, having been laid by blue ribbon winners and will be used for setting purposes. This is just another example of what Peterborough poultry fanciers are doing to raise the standard of their fowl.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

PRESTON ARE CHAMPIONS FOR THE SECOND TIME

PRESTON, FEB. 26.— Preston defeated Midland in a whirlwind game to-night by 6 to 4. Etherington started the game with a rush through Midland's defence to the goal where the puck was lost. For five minutes the puck never went out of Midland's territory and in six minutes of play Walker for Preston scored the first goal.

For seven minutes more the puck was kept in Midland's territory and the Preston boys were outplaying their rivals at every stage of the game. At fifteen minutes of play Midland made a grand dash through Preston's defence and shot their first goal. The puck was again carried into Midland's territory, but Midland carried through and, after a hard fight in front of Preston's goal, made their second score on an easy stab by Chase. With two minutes to play Preston scored their second goal and the tally at half time was 2 all. For the first minute of the second half Midland kept the puck close to the danger point in Preston's field, but the good work of Etherington and Barnhardt saved the day. From then on Preston had things ahead and at no stage of the game was in danger of losing. Rahn with his head in bandages from injuries received at Midland, played the entire game. His work was wonderful on the ice considering his condition.

At seven minutes of play in the second half Gould, Midland's captain, went off on account of his lame knee and Walker went off to even up. By this time Preston had scored two more points on fine team work. At nine minutes of play Midland made her third on a three-man combination with two Preston men on the fence. Midland played like tigers to score again, but could not pass Bowan, who got the puck on a long shot and made the spectacular play of the game, carrying the puck through the entire field for Preston's fifth. One minute later with five men playing, Preston scored the last goal. The play continued with from four to six men on a side until at five minutes Midland scored her fourth.

From then on the battle was terrific. Every man, with the possible exception of Etherington of the home team, played on pure nerve and excitement. Bernhardt was knocked out at one minute and two Midland men went down and were hardly able to rise. Bowman of the home team dropped as the bell rang for final time, with the score Midland 4, Preston 6. Preston had five shots at goal to Midland's one, but the Midland goal man was almost invulnerable. The teams:

SEMI-CENTENNIAL OF KEENE CURLING CLUB ON TUESDAY

Mr. A. St. A. Smith of Keene was in the city to-day in connection with the semi-centennial celebration of the Keene Curling Club, which will be held next Tuesday. The Peterborough, Hastings, Norwood, Lakefield and other district clubs have been invited to participate and a big time is expected in the Otonabee capital next week. Suitable prizes will be awarded, and every arrangement is made for a celebration worthy of the occasion.

BANKERS BEATEN

The Dominion-Montreal Bank team journeyed to Lakefield last night for an exhibition game with the Cementville Trent Valley Seven, the Lakefield aggregation winning a well played battle by six goals to two. At half time the score was tied with 2 goals each but the Trent Valley Leaguers had all the better of the second half, the visitors being badly handicapped by the small ice surface. The bank team lined up as follows:

Goal—Patterson.
Point—Fitzgerald.
Cover—Tobin.
Rover—Elliott.
Centre—Cook.
Right wing—Grant.

Son Of Mr. Ed. Webb Orillia's Mascot

The little son of Mr. Edward Webb formerly of Peterborough and now of Orillia, made quite a hit in Toronto, as mascot of the Orillia Junior hockey team. The Toronto Star refers to him as follows:

At the opening of the game "Billey," the Toronto Canoe Club bull terrier mascot, resplendent in his brilliant red blanket, led the little Paddlers upon the ice and there was a delighted cheer, but it wasn't a marker for the uproar that went up at half-time, when the Orillianns put their mascot, Master Ansley Webb, a cute little four-year-old lad, clad in a complete hockey uniform, over the fence. He strolled across the ice to the penalty box, unleased by the mighty cheers of the crowd, and was introduced to Riley.

The T. C. C. boys immediately presented the little gaffer with the husky dog—"if he could take him across the ice." Ansley was certainly game enough to try. Riley upset him on his back, first crack, but the boy scrambled to his feet, chased the dog caught him by the collar, and hauled him half way across the ice. The crowd shrieked with delight as the little Orillia lad tugged away at the powerful white dog. Riley dug his toes into the ice and slid on all fours but the boy dragged him to mid ice before the animal's superior strength prevailed, and he returned to his stand in the penalty box. The Orillia mascot is a son of Ted Webb, the well-known contractor, and one of the staunchest supporters of the team and the team is certainly proud of the little chap.

Local Bonspiel Formally Opened

The local bonspiel was formally but quietly ushered into existence last night by four of the competing rinks, who in order to take advantage of the excellent brand of weather offered by the weather man decided to open the bonspiel a day ahead of the scheduled time. Preparations for this event have been in order for several weeks, and judging by the spirit of enthusiasm that prevails among the curling fraternity, this should prove to be one of the best events ever pulled off on the local ice. A handsome quota of prizes are being offered and one has only to survey the handsome collection of silverware in order to define the reason for the spirit of activity that is manifesting itself in the curling camps.

Skips H. F. Foot and J. H. Ferguson sprung a surprise in "broom and stone" circles when they defeated Skips T. F. Matthews and Dr. Wightman in the first round of the Primary event last night, thereby qualifying for entry in the second round.

The contest in which Skips T. F. Matthews and H. Foot figured was especially interesting and it was only by several well played shots towards the end that enabled Skip Foot to emerge from the game with three shots to the good. Dr. Wightman was not so fortunate as his fallen brother in arms; he went down to defeat by 7 point. However this does not debar him from the running; they are still eligible for the Consolation event.

H. J. McCannon	J. Langley
W. S. Dodds	L. Dobbin
S. J. Stubbs	W. A. Gallagher
T. F. Matthews, sk. 8	F. F. Foot, sk. 11
J. Maynard	M. Comstock
Rev. J. R. Webb	A. S. Trew
D. E. Esson	E. H. D. Hall

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

There will be an important meeting of the executive of the Mercantile Hockey League at the Y.M.C.A. tomorrow night at 7.30 o'clock. A full attendance of members is expected as the schedule will be revived and other important business transacted.

Sporting Editor Examiner:

Will you kindly settle this pool on the Midland-Preston game last night. A has Preston 7 to 5; B Preston 5 to 3 and C Preston 7 to 3. Which wins? Fan.

Answer—The correct score was 6 to 4 in favour of Preston and the correct percentage is therefore .600. A's score gives a percentage of .583, B's of 6.25 and C's of .700. A therefore wins.—Sporting Editor.

The Lock Works and Clerks met in a Mercantile League game at Brock Street Rink last night, and although the Lock Works made it close, as usual, they met with their customary fate. The score was 2 to 1 in favour of the clerk s, with the half-time figures reading 1-1. As the score indicated it was a hard fight all through the piece with the checking close throughout. Capt. Heard of the Lock Works, had a chance to tie up the game when he got clear through a few minutes before the end, but he "fooled" the shot. Leo Derocher refereed the game satisfactorily.

MARMORA WINS.

MARMORA, FEB. 26—In the Trent Valley Hockey League game played here to-night between Stirling and Marmora, Marmora won by a score of 3 to 1. The game was very fast, considering the heavy snowfall. The line-up:

Referee—F. H. Sproule, Toronto.

An all-star ladies' team of the P.O.I. met the regulation team of the same institution in a bloodless conflict at Brock street rink last night. The game was a notable one in many respects and was full of thrilling aspects. The regulation aggregation hung the tin can on the all-star septette by a 9-1 score. Miss F. McNamara's sensational stick-handling was a feature and was, in a large measure, responsible for the small tally registered by the All Star opponents. Miss Cressman also proved to be a useful adjunct to the team, in spite of the fact that she had considerable difficulty in maintaining her equilibrium. Miss Alice Logan, Miss Grady and Miss Mabel Patterson did very effective work for the Regulation team, in which they figured.

Mr. G. A. Ferguson, the only man whose presence in the Brock street arena was sanctioned by the suffragette hockeyists, handled the whistle to the entire satisfaction of all concerned.

The following is the line-up.

Goal
Miss M. Sanderson — Miss E. Mowat
Point
Miss F. Scott — Miss Mable Brown
Cover-Point
Miss F. McNamara — Miss Alice Logan
Rover
Miss A. Adams — Miss M. Grady
Centre
Miss L. Grady — Miss Mabel Patterson
Left Wing
Miss J. Cressman — Miss T. Taylor
Right Wing
Miss L. Park — Miss B. McNamara
Referee—Mr. G. A. Ferguson.

To the Sporting Editor,—

RE BRASS vs. CONTROLLER DEPARTMENTS

A CHALLENGE

Would you be kind enough to allow us, the Controller Dept., to reply to the write up inserted in your valuable paper yesterday. We graciously submit to their cheating of our praise, but would also prefer a little more of the old adage, "Truth is stranger than fiction."

Will they kindly inform the public that this was their match and not ours.

They wanted to add another to their long list of laurels but because they met their superiors they are not sports enough to take their apparent defeat like the Bear Cats.

In forcing this match on the Controllers, who incidentally never had a team, they found that their "superior stamina" did not stand for much—they apparently bit off more than th could chew.

Probably they would have liked to have beaten us about 9 to 0, but no, the "brazen" or better still, the bold and scientific defence of the Bear Cats was and never will be, too much for the Swanks. Now that we know what we can do and in order to take the starch out of them, we hereby challenge them to play again at an early date for an oyster or chicken supper.

CONTROLLER DEPT. C.G.E.

The Lakefield junior hockey club hereby challenge any junior hockey club to a game, or a series of games for the possession of the City League Challenge Cup, under the age of seventeen. Address communications to Melleville Pammett, Lakefield, Ont.

BIG LEAGUE MANAGERS FOR 1912.

American League—Chicago, James J. Callahan; Philadelphia, Connie Mack; Detroit, Hughey Jennings; Cleveland, Harry Davis; Boston, J. Garland Stahl; New York, Harry Wolverton; Washington, Clark Griffith; St. Louis, Bobby Wallace.

National League — Chicago, Frank L. Chance; New York, John J. McGraw; Pittsburg, Fred Clarke; Philadelphia, Charles Dooin; Cincinnati, Hank O'Day; St. Louis, Roger Bresnahan; Brooklyn, William Dahlen; Boston, Johnny Kling.

"Chaucer" Elliott, manager of the St. Thomas Canadian League team, has signed W. G. N'Shaw of Kane, Pa., right-hand pitcher, recommended by Pitcher Caldwell of the New York Americans. Elliott has booked the Cuban Stars for exhibition games.

FISHING CONTEST SCHEME

During the summer of 1911 Field and Stream, one of the popular Sportsman's magazines, introduced a prize fishing contest scheme to their readers offering valuable prizes for the biggest fish caught in any part of America. Three of the leading prizes were won by fish taken from Canadian summer resorts reached by the Grand Trunk Railway System. The first Grand Prize was given for a Lake Trout weighing 28 pounds, caught in Lake Temagami, Ontario. The first Grand Prize for a Black Spotted Salmon Trout was awarded to an angler who caught his fish in Algonquin National Park, the fish weighing 12 pounds. The ladies' Grand Prize was awarded to a fair angler for a small mouth Black Bass, weighing 6 pounds 4 oz., caught in the Georgian Bay.

SPORTING TALK

Napoleon Lajoie turned baseball philosopher the other day and discussed some of the difficulties of a baseball magnate. Nap has never been a baseball magnate, but from his long experience as manager and player, he knows whereof he speaks just the same.

"Lots of people thought Barney Dreyfuss was crazy when he paid $22,500 for Marty O'Toole last fall," remarked Lajoie. "I don't know whether Barney paid that much in cash or not, but if Marty comes through for Pittsburg it was money well spent. If I were a club owner and had a pitcher offered me that I absolutely knew would be a star in the big league, I don't think I would hesitate at paying $20,000. It would be money well spent, but I doubt if many club owners will agree with me.

"But they spend the money just the same in the effort without getting the star pitcher. When I came to Cleveland Somers and Kilfoyl had Addie Joss. He had cost them nothing and he proved to be one of the best pitchers and ball players the game ever knew. But after they got Joss they invested a good deal more than $20,000 in pitchers, without getting another man the equal of Joss, until Gregg was bought. See my argument?

Pitchers Cost Fortunes.

"The average club owner will think nothing of paying anywhere from $2,000 to $3,000 apiece for pitching recruits whom he hopes will make good. Nine times out of ten the money is thrown away, while the tenth time he may get only a fair pitcher. My contention is that if the opportunity is presented a club owner should not hesitate about paying the price for a star. He'll not only save money by not having to buy so many second raters, but he will also make it up at the gate.

"Go back through your memory. In ten years Cleveland has had two real star pitchers—Joss and Gregg. Chicago has had Ed. Walsh, and Walsh has been the one man to keep the White Sox out of the cellar. St. Louis has not had any. New York had Chesbro and later on Russell Ford. Philadelphia had Waddell, Plank, Bender, and Coombs. Washington has had only one—Walter Johnson, while Joe Wood is the only one developed by Boston, although O'Brien looks as if he might be another one. Cy Young and Bill Dineen were extra stars at Boston, but they were stars before they joined our league.

Vean Gregg a Star.

"I agree with Addie Joss when he said that pitching was the biggest part of the game. If I had had Vean Gregg to work along with Addie back in 1908 we would have played the Cubs for the world's pennant, but one star pitcher rarely wins a pennant, especially if that star is a man who needs at least three days in between his games.

"Yes, sir, star pitchers are mighty scarce. You can go out and get the outfielders who can throw, bat and run the bases; you can get the infielders who can field with a lot of speed and hit fairly well, but you have got to go some to dig up two great pitchers in two or three seasons, to say nothing of in one year. No use talking, but Philadelphia was lucky when it grabbed Alexander and Chalmers the same season and got them cheap at that.

"You say that the clubs owning the star pitchers would not sell. Perhaps not, but if some of the magnates were to lump together the money they throw away in buying pitchers promiscuously and were to offer it for one star pitcher, the magnate owning that pitcher would do a lot of thinking before he turned down the offer."

TIT-BITS

AN ADVENTUROUS VOYAGE

An adventurous voyage, which recalls the days of Kingsley's heroes, is about to be commenced from Bideford, in Devon, by a 33-ton ketch, the Seal, which is to be sailed 6,000 miles to Durban. Remarkable as this adventure will be in itself, it is additionally so by reason of the fact that the Seal is probably the oldest vessel to be found in Lloyd's Register, having already completed over a century of service, mostly in the coasting trade in and around the British Isles. The ketch has been previously known as the Purveyor. In 1810 she was built at Southampton as a Government barge, and on being sold out of service has been variously owned at Bude and Bideford, and as long as seafaring men can remember has been trading on the North Devon and Cornish coasts. Her biggest trial was in the great blizzard over twenty years ago, well remembered in the West Coast districts of the Old Land, when so many coasting vessels foundered. The Purveyor was blown from the Bristol Channel out into the Atlantic, where she rode out the gale, and many days later, battered but triumphant, returned to her port. Ever since that day she had nailed to her sternpost as a mascot a rusty horseshoe—with points up "to keep in the luck," as Devonians express it—and her new owner will carry the same mascot with him on his long voyage.

Captain Reinertsen, a quiet-spoken, capable-looking sailor, with the clear eye of the man who has spent his life on the sea, will navigate the boat, with a fellow-countryman as mate, and has shipped a crew of three Bideford sailors. Captain Reinertsen intends, after fitting the Seal out with tanks at Durban for her new trade, to sail to the Crozet Islands, some 1,300 miles S.E. of Durban, where he has a permit from the French Government for seal-hunting. The islands are uninhabited, of volcanic origin, and in their neighbourhood heavy gales blow almost constantly. Here eared seals, known as "sea elephants," abound, and the hunter shoots them with an elephant rifle and explosive bullets. The oil is extracted on the islands, a process taking a fortnight. The product is a valuable one, but, as may be imagined, the undertaking is hazardous in the extreme, and many vessels have been lost in the trade. Captain Reinertsen hopes to reach Durban in eighty days, but is provisioning for about six months.

NEW METHODS OF PROPELLING SHIPS.

The coming trials of the several large oil-engined vessels nearing completion, both in Britain and other countries, will go far to determine whether the internal combustion engine using fuel oil can be regarded as being so reliable as the steam engine for ocean-going ships. In Britain the Clyde-built oil-engine driven Jutlandia should soon be ready, while the Selandia, which has been constructed at Copenhagen, is about to make a move. Both the Jutlandia and Selandia have been built to the order of the East Asiatic Company, of Copenhagen. Again, the Transatlantic liner, building at Hamburg, is practically completed. This 9,000-ton ship will be driven by twin oil engines each of 1,500 h.p. Another notable vessel soon to be ready is the large bulk oil-carrier which has been built by Messrs. Krupp at Kiel. The dimensions of this ship are: Length 525ft., breadth 69ft. 3in., depth 41ft. 3in., and a deadweight capacity of 15,000 tons. The propelling power consists of two sets of single-acting two-cycle Diesel engines, driving twin screws. The combined horse-power, aggregating 3,600, is expected to give a sea speed of 10 knots.

Electric propulsion is to be tried on the U.S. collier Jupiter, which is being constructed at the Navy Yard, Mare Island, California. The Jupiter is a twin-screw vessel, displacing 19,360 tons, and will have a speed of 14 knots. It is proposed to install one turbo-generator, running at a maximum speed of about 2,000 revolutions per minute, and delivering current, with a potential of 2,200 volts, to induction motors, one on each propeller shaft. The power from the turbine will be transmitted to the propeller shafts electrically, with a speed reduction in ratio of 18 to 1. The efficiency of transmission is expected to be about 91 per cent.

MARVEL IN ANIMAL MEMORY.

Memory handed down through 30 generations is one of the perplexing facts of science. The beaver flourished along French rivers until killed off for its fur, but is now known only in about a dozen villages on the Rhone near Avignon. For three centuries these villages have had no trees to cut down for dams. The animals were compelled to adopt a new mode of life and have burrowed in the banks, shaping mud with their tails as usual. Recently some of them were taken by a Polish count to forests on his estates. Very strangely, they resumed the habits dropped three centuries before they were born, and at once began cutting trees and building dams.

AN OLD TIME WINDOW PANE.

Sewell W. Smith of Showhegan has in his possession a square of glass that was hand made, that came from the first house ever built in Showhegan. This house is now standing on the River Road and was formerly the residence of Joseph Weston, one of the first settlers. It was built in 1768 and is now owned by Mrs. Etta S. Merrill. Mr. Smith helped repair the house 45 years ago and saved the square of glass at that time. This pane is nearly a quarter of an inch thick in some parts and is very uneven.—Lewiston Journal.

Devils on Horseback.

Wipe, bone, and remove the heads from small sardines, flavour each with cayenne pepper and salt, and put a tiny piece of butter on each. Wrap each in a thin slice of bacon and lay this on a piece of hot buttered toast, and bake for six or eight minutes till the bacon is cooked; serve at once. Anchovies are excellent treated thus, or the remains of some cold, cooked, dried haddock can be flaked and mixed with a little butter, and well seasoned, and used as a filling for the bacon.

READS EXAMINER ON VERANDAH

The people who are prone to regard Western Canada as the storm-centre for blizzards and zero weather for the greater part of the year, will find food for thought in the following extract from a letter from Mr. J. E. Hodgson, formerly of the local Collegiate Institute, and now of Lethbridge, to the Examiner: "During the past seven years I have enjoyed your paper and it has certainly been refreshing to sit on the verandah during the past month enjoying the warm sun of sunny Southern Alberta, and reading of Peterborough, with roads blocked with snow and the thermometer 30 below the zero mark. During the past month I do not remember one day with the temperature at mid-day down to the freezing point. It has been running from 40 to 60 degrees at noon. When we came here on Nov. 1st, we had a week or two of winter weather, and later, during the Christmas holidays, another two weeks, but with those exceptions the weather has been exceptionally mild."

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

ONE of the prettiest touches I have ever seen in a guest room was in a new bride's home. In the folds of the big puff on her guest bed were tucked a dainty pair of negligee slippers. This little personal touch seemed to treble the charm of the whole room.

In another home, the house mother always keeps a few books and magazines on a little reading table by the guest's bed.

In still another home, if the guest be a close friend or relative and is to stay any length of time, the hostess makes a point of hunting up all the pictures she possesses of her guest's family and friends, and putting them on the visitor's dresser.

It is cordial, comfortable little touches like these, which give a guest room more distinction than any formal perfection possibly could.

A woman who shops a good deal, and being absent-minded, is continually mislaying her muff, bag, or umbrella, or losing one of her parcels, has hit upon this expedient for stopping the leak.

"It doesn't do me any good," she says, "to look over my bundles and see if I have them all. I'm sure to forget that way. So I count them, reckoning in my umbrella, bag and muff, and every time I make a move from one shop to another, or from one car to another I count them again. Then if the count tallies, I know I'm all right and don't have to try to remember what's in each bundle, and if I've got this or that."

To anyone else as absent-minded as she, if there be such unfortunate folks, the lady wishes to recommend her method.

I want to tell you about a unique and interesting wedding present, which a February bride received from her father. Although this gift was probably the least beautiful of all the articles which were displayed, there was a cluster of guests about it all the time at the wedding reception.

The gift was a small oak tool chest, about two feet by three and built to hang on the kitchen wall. It contained every tool which any household exigency could possibly call for — hammers, saws, screw drivers, awls and many other tools, with which I am not familiar, were there. Tacks, screws, and nails of all sizes were provided in little drawers at the bottom of the chest.

Surely, any young couple who have found themselves liberally provided with French clocks and cut glass dishes for every possible article of food, but without a hammer and screw driver with which to uncrate their goods and put down the carpets, will appreciate the value of such a gift.

Indeed, the lack of household tools is not confined to newly married folks. I know one couple who have been married six years and yet do not own a screw driver and have to borrow one when need of that article arises.

By the way, we have had linen showers, kitchen showers, stocking showers, bag showers and many other varieties which I can't recall just now. But I never did hear of a tool shower. Now why wouldn't that be an interesting and novel function for the girl who likes to do original things to give her engaged friend?

DICKENS' CHARACTERS CHARMINGLY PORTRAYED

Mr. William Sterling Battis Gave Remarkable Series of Interpretations of Well Known Roles.

AN ARTISTIC TREAT

Most delightfully appropriate to the centenary of Dickens was the entertainment given in the Conservatory of Music Hall last evening, by Mr. William Sterling Battis, the well known New York Dickens impersonator. For two hours the audience had the pleasure of seeing and hearing their favourite characters, portrayed with wonderful skill by Mr. Battis, who won instantaneous favour and had not the slightest difficulty in holding the attention of his hearers. "Uriah Heap," "Mr. Micawber" and "Old Peggoty" from "David Copperfield," "Captain Cuttle" from "Dombey and Son," "Mr. Peckniff" from "Martin Chuzzlewit," "Rogue Riderhood" from "Our Mutual Friend," "Sam. Weller" from "The Pickwick Papers," "Nellie's Grandfather" from "The Old Curiosity Shop," "Bill Sikes," from Oliver Twist," and "Sydney Carton" from "A Tale of two Cities"—these were some of the roles undertaken by Mr. Battis and his interpretations were uniformly good and effective. The impersonator added considerable interest to his work by "making up" for the different roles in full view of his audience, the quickness with which he adapted himself to the part in hand being frequently remarked. Mr. Battis combined a sympathetic understanding of the different characters with great histrionic ability, and his work throughout was most artistic and enjoyable. It is unfortunate that a larger audience was not present—the merit of the entertainment should have been sufficient to tax the accommodation of the hall. Those who were present consider themselves highly fortunate, and the stay-at-homes are the losers. The event was under the auspices of the choir of the George Street Methodist church.

BOUNDARY SETTLEMENT CAUSES CHUCKLING AT EXPENSE OF WHITNEY

OTTAWA, FEB. 27.—Is Ontario likely to agree to the arrangement of the Manitoba boundaries, which was announced last night by Right Hon. R. L. Borden? That is the question which politicians here are asking this morning. There is some chuckling going on at the expense of Sir James Whitney. The Ontario Premier has been very emphatic in his statements that Ontario's rights were to be well safeguarded, and this was generally taken to mean that he believed that his province was to get one of the Hudson Bay ports. Instead of this Manitoba gets them both, and Sir James is left to explain to his Legislature just wherein the safeguarding lay. However, there are many people who do not believe that the arrangement arrived at is permanent or even intended to be permanent. It is said in some quarters that boundaries, as announced, will be changed later and that the whole thing is only part of political plans, calculated to give the Government relief in a quarter where relief is needed. When the bill finally does come down to the debate stage, it is expected that the Opposition will move a six-months' hoist. Meanwhile the Nationalists are as busy as ever. There is no doubt that they are working every influence in their power and to the utmost of their power to compel the Government to give way in the matter of separate schools. Every day which passes before the debate begins, is weakening their chances of doing much damage.

TO RECOVER $80

An echo of the police court case last year in which Jos. Shearer was sentenced to six months in Central Prison for his share in the sales of flour, oats, etc., that he sold to farmers whilst in the employ of the Quaker Oats Co., without handing in the receipts, is an action against those parties who purchased them from the young man. Nearly all who bought from young Shearer have made a settlement with the company. One party, according to counsel for the company, has held out and it is understood that an action will be proceeded with against Mr. S. Garrett of Otonabee for the sum of $83.00, this being the amount, according to the information, of goods which he bought from young Shearer.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"THE PRIDE OF THE ARMY"

Another capacity audience attended the Grand last evening to witness the well staged three act drama, "The Pride of the Army" by the Ernie Marks Stock Company. The reception given the play by the large audience was a tribute to the excellence of the performance from a popular standpoint. The vaudeville specialists by such well known artists as De Luna and De Luna, Lila Gardner, and Frankie A. Brooks, made a tremendous hit with the audience. These performers are versatile with pleasing personalities and possess the happy faculty of producing artistic numbers that appeal to the popular fancy. The feature for to-night is a brand new four act drama entitled "The Girl and the Gambler." This play has been a strong drawing card wherever it has been shown and there is no reason to believe that its reception to-night will be any exception to the rule.

A MID-WINTER BUTTERFLY

This morning a common yellow butterfly, lively as possible, was brought to the Examiner office. While the family of Mr. James Gates, No. 4, Dunlop street, was sitting at breakfast, the butterfly, after flying briskly about the room, alighted on the table and was captured. The cocoon must have been suspended in some corner of the room and under the constant heat, prematurely released the butterfly which is ushered into this cold world under conditions that do not give much promise for a pleasant butterfly childhood.

POULTRY PRIZES

The success of Peterborough poultry fanciers is emphasized by the showing of prizes which will be shown in one of the windows of Lang and Maher. They are a collection of ribbons won by Mr. Wr. R. Grose and Mr. Jos. Kelly, at the Poultry Exhibitions at Ottawa and Gananoque. Of particular interest is the silver cup, presented by Senator Taylor at the Gananoque Show in the Black Wyandotte class and won by Mr. Grose. Probably no better testimonial of the high standard in the breeding of his Wyandottes could be obtained than the winning of this cup, for, at the Gananoque show, Mr. Grose's entries had to compete with some of the best bred fowl on the continent. Both Mr. Kelly and Mr. Grose made a splendid showing with their entries, and not only reflect credit upon themselves, but also in a large measure, upon the local association, which, during the past few years, has done so much to encourage the raising of the standard of fowl in this city.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Cure

This recipe makes 16 ounces of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually stops the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, croup, sore lungs, asthma, throat troubles, etc.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pinex is one of the oldest and best-known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guiaicol and all the other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this recipe have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

THE RED MILL

Local Singers Make a Hit in Their Duet Number

There was a surprising programme at the Red Mill Theatre last night and the cosy amusement place was crowded at every performance. The head-liners, Messrs. Asa Huycke and E. Pollard made a big hit in their duet. The two local boys are well-known as accomplished vocalists, and their voices blend most sweetly. Their offering last night was enthusiastically received. They will appear again to-night. Mr. Dyer's illustrated song "Oceana Roll" was most enjoyable; in fact the whole show was great, and no doubt the patrons will tell their friends of the clean and up-to-the-minute performance at the Red Mill.

Ice Traffic Rapidly Increasing

The ice cutting at the Little Lake is progressing rapidly, and the refrigerators and storage houses are being filled for cooling purposes. The ice for domestic use is being cut from the canal and will continue for some time to come. The quantity of ice used in Peterborough is increasing rapidly each year and the delivery of ice is reaching a business of considerable proportion, with corresponding difficulties. Although the housekeeper may complain of the cost of ice during the summer months, when the ice cutting, storage, delivery and collections are taken into consideration and the difficulties of handling are also considered, the ice vendor thinks the price reasonable.

CUTTER UPSET

And an Elderly Lady Was Precipitated in the Roadway.

While a lady from the country was driving up George street last evening, the cutter upset at the corner of George and Smith streets. As the horse was a quiet one, it did not attempt to run away, although a little scared. Some boys, chancing in the vicinity caught the horse, placed the lady in the cutter and started her on her way home. Outside a little shaking up to a person of advanced years, no harm resulted.

MERITS AND DEMERITS OF CHURCH UNION DISCUSSED BEFORE SLIM AUDIENCE

Knox Church the Scene of an Interesting Debate Last Evening—Clever Arguments Advanced by Both Sides—No Decision Given.

Speakers—For affirmative, Mr. R. F. Downey and Mr. H. B. Cowan. For negative, Mr. A. McKenzie and Mr. McLaren. Twenty minutes was allowed for each speaker:

The affirmative adopted the following resolution:

"That the time has now come when the three great denominations comprising the Presbyterians, Methodists and Congregationalists should unite in organic union".

With less than one hundred people in attendance, the question of church union was discussed by the above named speakers at Knox Presbyterian Church last evening. A singular feature of the meeting, which took the form of a debate, was the absence of a decision, at its conclusion, this action being determined upon prior to the opening of the meeting. To the people themselves devolved the proposition of forming their own opinions as to the respective merits of the arguments offered by the debaters.

Mr. R. F. Downey, as leader of the affirmative, opened fire with a battery of arguments supporting church union on the proposed basis. "This is an age of great progress," said the speaker. An age when people are aspiring to get the best results with the least expenditure of labour. Proposed church union dates back to 1899, when the Presbyterian assembly first made overtures to other Protestant denominations to bring about a system of church union. The main object of this movement was to prevent overlapping, especially in the mission fields. Overlapping has proved to be a great stumbling block in the way of converting the heathen, who is confronted with great complexity. Following this move on the part of the Presbyterians, the Methodists were the nex, to make overtures to other denominations, with a view to extending the work. Dr. Cavan, representing the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Carman, representing the Methodists, and Rev. E. Pegley, representing the Congregationalists, were the moving spirits in the church union project at that time. The great fundamental underlying principle of church union, is the principle of brotherly love. When we have one great unity of the denominations, we can carry the message of God in a grander and fuller way than we have hitherto been able to. That represents the policy and platform of church union. The ministers of the various denominations tell the same story, preach the same gospel: then why not unite. In the West they have already partially adopted church union. In many places one pastor ministers to both the Presbyterian and Methodist element of their circuits. Is the proposed basis of Church union practicable? We think it is. The policy of church union is to take the best points out of the constitutions of the churches incorporated in the project and adopt them, thereby building up a stronger and more uniform sectarian body.

Committee Avoided Obstacles.

Mr. A. Mackenzie monopolized the next twenty minutes of the meeting by a line of argument tending to show why church union should not be adopted at the present time. "It is not definite enough," declared the speaker. It is a sort of compromise between three churches. This more especially applies when we consider the rules that govern these churches as they now exist. There is nothing definite as to how we shall overcome these difficulties. Another objection is the way the committees, upon whom devolved the work of drafting up the proposed basis of church union, avoided these obstacles. We are told that the Committee showed brotherly love in the promulgation of the work. This is quite evident. They were all in favour of church union, and there was no reason why they should not show brotherly love. Another difficulty would be the transfer of church properties, which, as they stand now, do not belong to the individual congregations, but to the Church of Canada, which the individual churches represent as a whole. Then there is the endowments such as that of McGill University. The provisions governing these endowments do not coincide with the basis of church union. The individual democracy of the church would also be endangered. It also opens a way, whereby a minister of any faith might enter the church, as long as he was able to show that he was teaching the Word of God.

A Sin to Keep Divided.

"The object of church union is to promote the Word of God," said Mr. Cowan, who wielded the cudgel for the affirmative. It also tends to promote love; if we fail in love, we fail in everything. The Children's Aid Sciety, the associated charities, and various other institutions are instances of where the churches work together in unity, outside of the pulpit. Why not introduce union on a larger scale. It is nothing less than a sin to keep divided, as we are. One Presbyterian minister in Peterborough County drives twenty-six miles every Sunday, in order to minister to his flock, and in doing so, he passes over the territory of a Methodist minister. Church union would eliminate these conditions. Recently the Y. M. C. A. sought to organise a couple of branches in Peterborough County. One place in particular they had the assistance of the two churches in the community, and their endeavours were partially successful, until one of the denominations believing that the other was outdoing them and seeking to divert their adherents, dropped out. This is a circumstance which could not exist under church union. Speaking of the endowments as referred to by the negative side. If we could show that we were in earnest about church union, we could, no doubt, prevail upon the Dominion Government to create legislation to overcome those legal difficulties. As regards ministers of other denominations entering the church, there is no need for alarm from that quarter, the committee having already formulated rules, calling for the examination of ministers, before their entry into the church.

Mr. McLaren, last speaker on the negative side disapproved of church union on the grounds that the liberties gained and the principles established by the blood of our forefathers were being sacrificed. Christ never prayed for this uniformity, nor never spoke of organisation, so long as the people whom he ministered unto, heard the Shepherd's voice and followed it. The essence of Protestantism is to encourage independent thought. The proposed basis of church union would only reduce the denominational factions by two. The different denominations are doing good work, in the old way, and the stories we hear of confusion among them are only a myth. The different denominations have done more for Canada than any one denomination could hope to do, because they have appealed to the people from their own individual line of thought. As far as overlapping in foreign mission fields is concerned this has been overcome by federation.

In accordance with the recognized rules of debate, the leader of the affirmative was given five minues in which to reply to the arguments advanced by the negative.

"The logical conclusion of this is, let work being done by each individual denomination," said Mr. Downey. "The logical conclusion of this is, let us have more denominations. The question is are we doing the work in the best way. The negative's idea is one of separation; our idea is one of unity. The church is most free when united in the bonds of unity."

Several musical selections, including a solo by Miss Sanderson, were rendered prior to the commencement of the debate. Rev. Mr. Keith was master of ceremonies.

A LUXURIANT GROWTH OF HAIR

Does Not Follow Neglect of the Scalp

Aside from combing it when they think necessary many people give no attention whatever to their hair. Then when the hair begins to fall out it never occurs to them that their trouble is the result of personal carelessness.

An occasional application of Newbro's Herpicide will not only prevent loss of hair but permits a luxuriant growth.

Herpicide kills the germ that causes dandruff and to this germ most hair losses are attributed. It keeps the scalp clean and free from dirt, allowing the hair to grow unhampered by accumulation of dandruff.

Newbro's Herpicide is sold by all druggists and its manufacturers have such confidence in its germ destroying power that they authorize all druggists to guarantee the one dollar size bottles to do as claimed or money refunded.

THE DANCE PROGRAMME.

Nordica Says Things About the Lack of Variety at Dances.

"Any effort to escape from the horrible monotony and the idiotic twirling of the waltz and two step is a relief," declares Lillian Nordica, apropos of the Turkey Trot, etc. "I think the young people of the present day are wonderfully deficient in intelligence when they make up a dance entirely of waltzes and two steps.

"It doesn't take much brains or grace to dance a waltz, and to spend four or five hours turning round and round without variation might be an interesting occupation for a squirrel in a cage, or a monkey at the zoo, but it is hardly worthy of creatures who are supposed to possess souls.

"When I used to attend dances we had many amusing and interesting figures. There were Virginia reels, quadrilles, caprices, polkas and fancy dances, and an evening at a dance had some variety to it."

PARK STREET NOTICES.

The pulpit of the Park Street Baptist Church will be occupied by Rev. G. F. Hulbert of Norwood, next Sunday. The Men's Helping Hand Bible Class will journey up to Knox to hear Mr. Dobbin give an address, and pay back the fraternal visit of the Men's Class of Knox Church. Rev. W. C. Riddiford will preach anniversary services at Norwood next Sunday, and give his lecture on "Some useful commodities in life's battle," on Monday evening.

"URGENCY AND OPPORTUNITY"

Rev. Canon Gould, M.A., Addresses Members of Conference

The three-days' Conference was continued last evening in St. John's school room by a study class, when "The Reproach of Islam" was discussed. Following this a short service was held in the church, when the Rev. Canon Gould, D.D., was the preacher. The subject chosen for his address was "Urgency and Opportunity" and in the course of his address he said:

"Opportunities are not only of great value, but they are of great urgency, for if they are not snapped up they are lost.

"We are living in a critical time. Last week I had the pleasure of listening to the President of Harvard College and I was struck with his concluding words. He said 'We cannot tell why God has locked up the Gospel for all these centuries within the Germanic races, but we know it must be for some great purpose.'

"We must remember as we look out over the great world to-day that this race has to traverse in a short space of decades all that we have attained during these long centuries!

"We look down the pages of history and see traces of great movements, and we say: Oh! that I had lived in those days, then I should have found the mission worth making. Then life would have been worth living. The most critical period in the race of man is not in the decade which is a turning point in human history! Behold, now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation!

"I spoke yesterday of the great conjunction of circumstances that form our great Dominion, which has so much to do with the future, but there is only one point which I would express to-night:

"As we watch the great advance of men and women, would that we could give ourselves time to think and realize what we have to give to this great Canadian race of the future. Remember the morality and ethics of a country is in the store and in the home. What are we doing to place this Church forement in that advance. The kind of Christian faith that will appeal more to the Canadian people is the type and order which we possess. If we can realize that we have the nation in our hands and we can make an impress, and others will worship in our places, then the monotony of life will be elevated to a lofty purpose. What better thing can a man do than give heart and money to this great purpose. The point I would emphasize this evening is 'We are responsible.'"

At the afternoon session considerable interest was aroused in the instructions given at the conference. Mr. R. W. Allin began the studies on the "Dominion of Canada" after which the school-room was crowded with children for the lantern pictures showing the work among the Esquimaux.

Before he evening service was opened Rev. Canon Davidson welcomed the people of the different churches to St. John's and also expressed the gratitude of Peterborough people to the outside speakers, who had come to the city for the conference.

Mr. Rose, he Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary movement, is here co-operating with the other speakers.

A CAR THAT DID THE "GOOD SAMARITAN" ACT

When the Blizzard Ties Up Traffic, the Schacht Motor Car Comes to the Rescue

The Toronto News of last Saturday, says:

"A most interesting and to the uninitiated an apparently impossible feat of haulage, by the modern motor car, was witnessed on Yonge street during the blizzard between 8 and 9 p.m. on Tuesday last. A heavy seven-passenger touring car met with some slight accident while being unloaded from the railway trucks at the Toronto terminal, and it was decided to tow the car to its garage in the city. Snow had been falling heavily, drifts were piled up and street cars stalled, when the tow car hooked on to help its injured brother. Backing through drifts that buried the flying axles clear over the hood, the little roadster settled to its work. Tow rope after tow rope snapped until a heavy chain had to be requisitioned and an almost unbreakable connection made between the two cars. Onlookers advised horses, but were laughed to scorn by the crew in charge, and with a solid connection between, their confidence was upheld, for shortly after the two cars disappeared in the whirling flakes well on their way home.

"On inquiry, our representative was informed that both cars were products of the Schacht Canadian factory at Hamilton, Ont., that the touring car weighed in the neighbourhood of 3,000 pounds, while the diminutive car that did the work was one of the company's 1911 standard two-seated roadsters, used by the Toronto branch as a work car, and a work car it surely was."

Local interest is given to this incident by the fact that Mr. G. K. Rackham, of the Ontario Coal Co., Limited, has taken the agency for the Schacht Motor Car Co., of Canada, Limited. Parties contemplating the purchase of a commercial motor or pleasure car will get full information about this "car with the good disposition" from Mr. Rackham.

REWARD OFFERED

As will be noticed from an advertisement in another column, an effort is being made to discover the identity of the party or parties who set fire to the Lillierap-Tate saw mill at Lakefield on the 23rd of last month. It will be remembered that the building was completely destroyed. It is considered certain that the fire was of incendiary origin and the Sigmon Company Limited and the Canadian Fire Underwriters Association are uniting to give a reward of $500 to the person who supplies information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the guilty parties.

The town of Paisley, Scotland, is the world's chief centre for the making of thread, and the firm of J. & P. Coats is known in every land. It has mills elsewhere, but the home factories are at Paisley. They cover one hundred acres of ground, contain 500,000 spindles, and give employment to 10,000 men and women.

BOARD OF TRADE

A meeting of the Board of Trade is called for Thursday evening, Feb. 29, in the Council chamber, when the following questions will be presented for consideration: Municipal By-laws, Permanent Roadway, Pavements, Garbage Collection and Hotel Accommodation. These are all questions that have been up before the City Council and the citizens have followed them more or less closely. Many consider them of importance and the officers of the Board hope that there will be a large attendance of members and citizens interested in these public questions. The meeting is general and will be open at eight o'clock. A good live Board of Trade is generally considered a valuable adjunct to the Council and the present questions before the city should have awakened the interest of those ratepayers who have the best interests of Peterborough at heart. This meeting will offer many opportunities for discussion.

LIKE PERFECT QUARTETTE

NEW YORK, N. Y., FEB. 28. — "They sang like one perfect quartette, magnified a hundred fold" is part of the criticism in the New York Herald this morning, regarding the Mendelssohn Choir of Toronto. All the papers unite in praising this Canadian choir as the greatest choral organization ever heard in New York. They sing here again to-night and then go on to Boston, which is even more critical in music matters than Gotham.

BIG GAME ARRANGED FOR FRIDAY NIGHT

Combination of Intermediate Defence and Junior Forwards Will Play the Intermediate Forwards and Junior Defence—Should be Tit-bit of the Season.

The management of the Peterborough Hockey Club has arranged a game for Friday night that should prove to be one of the most interesting contests of the season and that will undoubtedly attract a big crowd of fans. This will be a game between a combination of the intermediate defence and junior forwards against the intermediate forwards and junior defence and should provide about as hard a battle as has been seen here this winter. The question of games with outside teams has been under discussion, but as the top-liners are not available it is not considered advisable to bring second-rate senior teams here, and Friday night's game should prove much more satisfactory from every point of view. A game between the juniors and intermediates has been discussed and may be arranged later on. The combination selected for Friday night, however, gives two well-balanced teams and it is no easy task to dope a winner. Mr. E. Wasson will referee the bout. A nominal admission fee of 15c to any part of the rink will be charged and a big bunch of fans will be on hand.

The opposing teams will be known as the Mutts and Jeffs. The line-up will be as follows:

Mutts		Jeffs.

DID WHITNEY'S OBSTINACY COST ONTARIO A PORT?

Examiner Special.

TORONTO, FEB. 28.— The general opinion here is that Ontario has been very ungenerously treated in the matter of the boundary settlement. For some weeks the province has been buoyed up by the statement of Sir James Whitney that Ontario would have a port on the Hudson Bay. It is understood here that Ontario would have fared better had Whitney overcome his well known obstinancy and yielded to the advice of his colleagues in the Ontario Cabinet and consented to the ceding of part of far away Rainy River district to Manitoba. This district has been indifferently governed for years owing to its inaccessibility to the capital city of the province and it would have been a big grey elephant off Ontario's hands had it gone over to Manitoba. It is stated here that Whitney could have had a rearrangement of the boundary whereby Port Nelson would have come to Ontario entirely in exchange for Rainy River, but he persisted in a "what we have we'll hold policy." The Hamilton Times says Ontario's claims are ignored, Mr. Borden being a consenting party to ignore them, he either "selling out" to placate Roblin or feeling that it is quite safe to treat Ontario's sleutening premier with contempt.

DAIRY MEETINGS TO BE HELD IN THE NEAR FUTURE

Owing to the rapid growth of the Cow Testing movement in this district, and the desire for further information along this line, it is expected that two or three meetings will be held at central points shortly. It is expected that Mr. Jos. Burgess, Supervisor of Cow Testing for Ontario, will attend these meetings. Other dairy meetings to be held in Peterborough shortly will be the convention of the Peterborough Cheese and Butter Makers' Association, and the annual meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board. Peterborough is rapidly becoming one of the great dairy centres of the Province.

EXAMINER'S NEW SERIAL BEGINS ON SATURDAY

The Examiner has great pleasure in announcing that a new serial story will commence in the Saturday issue of this paper and every confidence is felt that in the new offering, readers of the Examiner will find one of the best serials ever offered by a Peterborough newspaper. "Initials Only" is the title and the authoress is Anna Katherine Green, whose fascinating mystery yarns, "The Leavenworth Case," "The Filigree Ball" and "The House of the Whispering Pines" have made her name a household one. It will be remembered that the last named story was published by the Examiner as a serial and made a pronounced hit.

A lovely and lovable girl, seated in the writing room of a fashionable hotel, one evening, suddenly drops dead. When she is picked up an odd and tiny wound is discovered, which has pierced her heart. And yet, she could not have been stabbed, for none but her friends were near, and no one, at the time of the tragedy, was close enough to touch her. She could not have been shot: for no report was heard and there is no bullet.

Starting with this baffling situation the author weaves one of her remarkable stories of a cunning criminal, a strange crime and a clue by which the reader, going hand in hand with the detective, traces the mystery through devious and perplexing and elusive channels to the astonishing explanation. "Initials Only" is the author of the "House of the Whispering Pines" as her book.

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, FEB. 28.—Le Temps, of Ottawa, La Presse of Montreal, le Soliel of Quebec, and other French Canadian papers, are editorially very much wrought up about the fact that the school question is ignored in the boundaries settlement bill, and are out to-day with warm editorials, calling on the French Canadian and Roman Catholic members of Parliament to see to it that the rights of the minority in Manitoba be preserved in the new district to be annexed.

THE JURY DISAGREES

Mrs. J. J. Breen Will Not Get Divorce at Present

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, N.Y., FEB. 28.—Mrs. Ethel Crocker Breen, daughter of the old-time Tammany boss, will not get her divorce from her horseman husband, John J. Breen of Peterborough, Ont., at present. The Jury reported to-day that it was unable to agree. Mrs. Breen will try again.

OFFERS $20 NOW

Opportunity for Mr. Burnham to Assist the Children's Aid Society

A few days ago I made an offer of $10 to the Children's Aid Society if J. H. Burnham, M.P., would say over his signature that he did not send or cause to be sent to The Morning Times certain material marked "from our Ottawa correspondent," in which Richard Sheehy, Patrick Carroll and others were ridiculed. This special report stated that the petition these men signed regarding the Peterborough post office caused great consternation in the Ottawa Cabinet, etc. I now offer $20 if Mr. J. H. Burnham will say over his signature that he had nothing to do with it, and that he was not the person who made fun of his own constituents; and if Mr. Burnham is innocent in this regard, here is a good chance for him to strengthen by the considerable sum of $20, the society in which he claims to have so great an interest.

DEEPEN THE WELLAND.

A leaflet has been issued urging the construction of the Georgian Bay canal in preference to deepening the Welland canal. This is not in the public interests. With the glut of transportation consequent upon the increased wheat production of the west, those avenues of outlet which promise most speedy enlargement of transportation conveniences, should be first undertaken. In this view, the deepening of the Welland canal and the completion of the Trent canal claim first consideration. The deepening of the Welland and the enlargement and deepening of the St. Lawrence canals must come first. The Georgian Bay canal has many of the advantages its champions claim for it, chief of which are that the canal represents an independent, land-locked route, entirely through purely Canadian waters. This is not bad reasoning, but we must face the situation and provide the added transportation that is most speedily available.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

In another column will be found the first of a series of articles to be contributed to the Examiner by Miss Adeline Roberts, on the subject of woman suffrage. Miss Roberts writes reasonably on the subject, and makes it interesting to those who seek truth and ensue justice.

The Examiner has long stood for the abstract right of women to equal franchise privileges with men. As a rule women are as intelligent as men and have a greater interest in legislation that affects the interest of the home, which, taken collectively, is the basis and strength of the state. Women are more emotional than men, more swayed by their impulses and feelings, but not by any means to a greater proportionate extent than men are influenced in the exercise of their political duties by a glass of whiskey or a dollar or two. Take an electorate of, say, five thousand each, of men and women, and it is safe to say that among the men there would be found an infinitely larger ratio of ne'er-do-well, ignorant, besotted, unprincipled, venal men, utterly unfit to be entrusted with a ballot, than there would be of indifferent, ignorant and otherwise disqualified women voters. With the franchise confined to men the venality and corruption of election contests wherever constitutional government is supposed to prevail, have come to such a pass as to invest representative institutions with something of the farcial. Whether with the franchise entrusted to women there would be an improvement, is a debatable question, with the benefit of any doubt going to the ladies.

BE "IN THE SWIM."

The Public School Board of Vancouver has decided to add teaching of the art of swimming to the Public school list of studies. An instructor in swimming has been engaged. There is a good deal to be said in defence of this innovation, and it would not be a bad thing to consider the advisability of adding the teaching of swimming to the curriculum of our Public schools or Collegiate Institute. Situated as Peterborough is, surrounded by the most extended area of water summering places, we may almost be described as an aquatic people, especially in summer, when a large proportion of our population, young and old, live upon the water. While drowning accidents happen often to persons knowing how to swim, these are the results of carelessness or recklessness, and do not minimize the life protecting nature of a knowledge of swimming. Peterborough is the home of the canoe, as well as the centre of a vast stretch of canoeing waters. But with all its attractions and conveniences, the canoe is a dangerous craft, especially for those who cannot swim. This is true to such a degree that it is not unreasonable to demand that as a rule, no person should venture into a canoe who does not know how to swim. A swimming tank would not be a very expensive addition to the equipment of Public school buildings. But if their presence would teach the art of swimming to all the school, the cost would be well incurred. The expense of one funeral of a victim of drowning, would offset a large proportion of the cost of a tank, and of learning the life-saving art of swimming, not to speak of the saving of sorrow and broken hearts in the homes bereaved by drowning accidents.

THE BOUNDARY SACRIFICE.

Ontario, according to the political enemies of Liberalism might reasonably have expected to be done out of a port in Hudson Bay by the Laurier government, but they had every confidence that when a real government like the Borden government, got into power at Ottawa, that Ontario would get justice in the form of one of the only two good ports on the west or south coasts of Hudson Bay. But Ontario, truly "loil" Ontario which furnishes Mr. Borden with the big end of his parliamentary majority, is "turned down" as ruthlessly as if it sent a Grit majority to Ottawa. In the extension of the boundaries of Manitoba north, the Borden government goes out of its way geographically, so that, Ont. Ontario Hon a port. If the present eastern boundaries of Manitoba had been produced due north, both Port Churchill and Port Nelson would have been in Ontario territory. But the eastern boundary was so deflected in Manitoba's interests as to give that province both ports and also a big length of shore line south of these ports. The Montreal Herald points out that Ontario "really expected something better from the party now in power at Ottawa. It means that if the Temiskaming Railway is extended to Hudson Bay and is to have an ocean port as its terminal it must be carried through a portion of the territory of Manitoba. This was what the Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier proposed but did not insist upon, preferring, as it found it could not satisfy everybody, to let the two provinces settle the matter for themselves. The Roblin-Rogers Government made an election cry out of the complaint that the Liberal Government at Ottawa gave Ontario too much. The Whitney Government made it the burden of an election fight that it gave Ontario too little. In one of his politest and most amiable epistles the Ontario Premier wrote the Dominion Government asking that Ontario should be made joint owner of Fort Churchill, but this it was found would lead to complications, and then he agreed to take Port Nelson. Now it is understood he is pressing for—nothing—being unwilling to embarrass his friends at Ottawa or to offend his friends in Winnipeg. But perhaps one of the most significant facts in connection with the new situation is that Mr. Roblin will take, and take gladly, from Mr. Borden, what he refused with a masterly display of vituperative rhetoric to take from Sir Wilfrid Laurier."

What will Sir James do now? Is he going to fight for Ontario's rights, or protest against this sacrifice? Instead of protecting Ontario, it seems that he is willing to humiliate Ontario by accepting charity from Manitoba. The Toronto News tells us that "Manitoba is generous to Ontario; Premier Roblin promises right of way for T. & N. O. R. access to port, and exemption from taxation." Will Sir James take this humiliating dose without at least a wry face and without brandishing a few lurid adjectives?

Half the pupils attending the Montreal city schools are pronounced to be in an unhealthy state. Science and school boards are ages behind, in dealing with such an easy looking problem as ventilation of school buildings.

WESTERN WHEAT PRODUCTION.

The grain-producing capabilities of the Northwest Provinces are inconceivably great. With only one-twentieth of its area adapted o wheat growing under cultivation, Saskatchewan claims to be the greatest wheat-producing province or state on the North American continent; and it submits the figures to establish its claim. The provincial figures of the Saskatchewan grain crop for 1911 are as follows:

	Total yield Bushels	Average per acre
Wheat	88,796,888	18.5
Oats	80,646,270	48.0
Barley	6,880,884	28.
Flax	10,377,701	11.13

The total value to the farmer of this handsome crop was $103,110,948. In addition to this remarkable total for grain products must be added the value of he hay, potatoes, roots and other crops raised during the year. These items approximated in value five million dollars, bringing the grand total value of the crops raised by the farmers of Saskatchewan for the year to $108,110,948, and this in a year when the average price realised for wheat and oats was the lowest recorded in a decade. Contrasted with the wheat producing states of he American Union, Saskatchewan stands out supreme. The figures for the former have not yet been promulgated by the Washington authorities, but it is assured that the returns from Minnesota, Kansas and the Dakotas will be considerably less than those of the previous harvest. In 1910 the three leading American wheat producing states raised he following crop:

	Bushels
Minnesota	94,080,000
Kansas	92,088,000
Dakota	46,720,000

The 1911 crop will be less, thus emphasising the achievement of the Canadian Province.

SOUTH RENFREW'S MAJORITIES

Some of the Conservative newspapers affect to see in the reduction of the Liberal majority in South Renfrew on Thursday last some ray of comfort against the "knock-down blow" as described by Hon. G. E. Foster. It is true that the Liberal majority was reduced, but the vote was smaller and owing to the storm hundreds of voters were kept at home But it is important to remember that the only man who obtained any thing like the majority of Mr. T. A. Low in September last was Mr. Low himself.

The record of the constituency proves this:

1878—W. Bannerman, C. 294
1879—R. Campbell, L. 154
1887—R. Campbell, L. 66
1891—J. Ferguson, C. 444
1896—J. Ferguson, C. 423
1900—A. A. Wright, L. 368
1904—A. A. Wright, L. 168
1908—T. A. Low, L. 680
1911—T. A. Low, L. 619

The Federal Bye-elections in South Renfrew have resulted as follows:

1875—J. L. McDougall, L. 55
1887—John Ferguson, Ind. Con. 122

The two bye-elections mentioned provided a very much smaller majority than secured by Hon. G. P. Graham, while in the majority of the general elections the majority was not as great as polled last week. These figures, when taken in conjunction with the tremendous efforts put forth by the government to secure Mr. Graham's defeat but serve to emphasize the greatness of the victory secured.—Ottawa Free Press.

TREMBLING IN THE BALANCE.

(Toronto Star.)

Mr Bourassa and Mr. Lavergne are giving the Borden Government trouble about the Manitoba school system and the navy. Some years ago Mr. Bourassa was paintd in very dark colours by the Conservative artists. He was anti-British, he was disloyal, he was an emissary of Rome and a racial agitator. Mr. Tarte, according to the same artists, was another horrible example of a racial, clerical and anti-British agitator, until he left the Laurier Government. Then he was suddenly converted into a broad-minded statesman.

Mr. Bourassa had to wait somewhat later for his vindication. When it was discovered that he was working against Laurier and for Borden, his character was changed. Stress was laid upon his integrity and his high ideals. Mr. Lavergne, too, was a promising young fellow. After all, there were some mighty good points in the Nationalist programme.

The reputation of Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Lavergne is now trembling in the balance. They are giving Mr. Borden and his Nationalist colleagues and supporters some trouble. If Mr. Borden yields, or if Mr. Bourassa yields, the high reputation of Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Lavergne will be maintained in Conservative circles, but if they disagree, look out for some special reading in Conservative journals, some articles richly fruited with such words as ultramontain, and reactionary and nativist and separatist. Many things will be forgiven to them; but to disturb the hold of the Borden-Monk combination on office will not be forgiven.

SOUTH RENFREW ELECTION WAS AN INSPIRATION

To Members of the Opposition —Premier Said to Have Shown Weakness in Contesting the Constituency

HON. DR. REID THE "GOAT"

"H.F.G." writes as follows in the Toronto Star:

George Graham's win in South Renfrew gives the debate in the House a blithe spirit, the Opposition cheerfulness and added courage, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier a brisk lieutenant and a dear friend to sit by his side. Now that the empty chair is filled Room 69 sees every hope blossoming.

George Graham will help a lot, but the moral effect will help more. Taking cause and effect together the Grits are well satisfied. Their summing up is that all Canada was looking at the election in South Renfrew and wondering whether common decency would be vindicated ,and now that it is vindicated it gives them renewed confidence in human nature and their prospects in general. Whatever way they look at it they can see nothing in it but a wallop for the Government.

As one stalwart put it: "I didn't think Laurier could be so cruel as to give an infant Government a crack like that before it was able to walk."

But that was a prejudiced opinion. The remark of one Tory sessional messenger to another looks like a more reliable source of speculation. "Well," he said, "the bottom seems to be dropping out of the basket pretty soon." And the groundlings generally know for the simple reason that they are near he ground.

Also what a Cabinet Minister replied when he was asked why he did not speak in South Renfrew may not be far from gospel. He said: "You bet I didn't stick my nose in there. I knew what was coming."

Labourers in the Vineyard.

Both candidates had plenty of help. At one time and another there were five Cabinet Ministers in the riding and a dozen Conservative members of Parliament. Some of them, dumb enough in the House, found their voices in South Renfrew. Dr. Roche essayed to draw the National Transcontinental Railway herring across the scent. Pelletier pleaded with the French vote. The timid and piacatory Burrell did his best to madden the populace. Foster made some injudicious remarks about voting for a Brockville cast-off—himself the cast-off of four constituencies. Sometimes George Foster's good commonsense deserts him, and he talks like a man with a job ahead, or one who is looking back at political life over his shoulder. The Minister of Trade and Commerce also made the statement that "if you let Graham in you infuse the drop of poison that will destroy the Government." When the chortling Grits remind Foster of this statement—which they will surely do—he will probably say that it was a moment of weakness.

Dr. Reid camped a good part of the time in South Renfrew, talking and organizing, but more particularly organizing. The Doctor may be said to have done all the latest stunts in organizing, and then some. But the Hon. Frank Cochrane, his side-partner, sat tight in Ottawa and worked his think-tank.

No Lack of Trying.

If the Government didn't win it wasn't for lack of trying. If the Liberals did win it was because they tried just as hard, but had better luck and a cleaner cause. The Western Liberal members threw themselves into George Graham's campaign with vim. Among those present were Turriff, Martin, Neeley, Malloy, Champagne, and MacNutt. The weather was bitter cold and the roads waist high in snow, but the coonskin brigade ate up the South Renfrew winter and asked for more. Rodolphe Lemieux and Jacques Bureau, and Dr. Beland, and Boivin and Devlin showed where Quebec stood in this affair of honour; Macdonald, Carvell, Kyle, Carroll, and Sinclair seconded the motion for the Maritime Provinces; and Murphy, Ross, MacMillan, Pardee, and Pouix said aye for Ontario. Even the Senate was stirred to anger, and Senator Ratz spoke twice, proving himself as good on the stump as ever. To cap all, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, risking the danger to his prestige that defeat would mean, made a progress through the constituency ,and was welcomed in a way that gave the enemy heart failure.

Sir James Whitney's Government also took a look in for Dr. Maloney. Howard Ferguson did a lot of speaking. Herbert Lennox cut loose once or twice. The Hon. W. H. Hearst was billed to speak, but McGarry played fair, and put a stopper on that.

Who is the Goat?

Of course defeat is bad medicine, even to a Government with a majority of forty-five, and somebody has to be the goat. Strangely enough, Dr. Reid is getting it all. Cochrane goes scot free. Considering all the circumstances and chewing them over again, the opinion is expressed by his party friends that "Jack Reid made a bonehead play." Some queer rumours are afloat. One is that there is a Cabinet intrigue to oust Premier Borden because he was weak sister and allowed a hopeless riding to be contested. You don't need to believe all you hear, but just compare Premier Borden's weakness in opening the constituency and Bob Rogers' strength of mind in keeping his nose out of it.

Another rumour is that Andrew Broder will be administrator of the good roads fund, and the Government will open Dundas as an offset to South Renfrew as soon as they are quite sure that it will be an offset.

A LIBERAL OFFER

We Guarantee to Relieve Dyspepsia. If We Fail the Medicine Costs Nothing.

To unquestionably prove to the people that indigestion and dyspepsia can be permanently relieved and that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will bring about this result, we will furnish the medicine absolutely free if it fails to give satisfaction to any one using it.

The remarkable success of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is due to the high degree of scientific skill used in devising their formula as well as to the care exercised in the manufacture, whereby the well-known properties of Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin have been combined with Carminatives and other agents.

Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin are constantly employed and recognized by the entire medical profession as invaluable in the treatment of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The Pepsin used in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is carefully prepared so as to develop its greatest efficiency. Pepsin supplies to the digestive apparatus one of the most important elements of the digestive fluid. Without it the digestion and assimilation of food are impossible.

We are so certain of this that we urge you to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets on our own personal guarantee. Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

"MARVELOUS" CURES OF SKIN ERUPTION

Four Children Constantly Scratching. Nearly Torn Limbs Raw. Cured in a Month by Cuticura Soap and Ointment

"Two of my daughters and one of my sons were suffering from very bad humor, the doctor ordering my daughters to have all their hair cut off so as to prevent it from spreading all over their heads, and to get to the seat of the trouble in order to be able to put some ointment on to cure them. The humor started in small blotches which got larger and larger and then burst and spread all over their faces, and in some cases down their backs and bodies. The doctor said it was eczema, but they seemed to be daily getting worse. The sores formed into little pools of water, with matter, and formed like abscesses. Their bodies also became red and irritated, causing them to be constantly scratching themselves. This made the sores bleed, and the matter dried all over their heads, face, etc., so that they could not sleep at night to rest themselves as their hands, the irritation was so bad, to keep them from digging into the flesh, and at night they would scratch their limbs raw. The bedclothes would be literally covered with blood.

"The teachers would not let them attend school for fear of infection spreading among the other children, so I resolved to try the Cuticura Remedies, which I found to be the very thing. I got a cake of Cuticura Ointment for one penny, and the result is a marvelous cure. (Signed) George Arthur Wilkinson, 47, Fleswick St., Sheffield, England, Mr. Harper, Yorks., Aug. 4, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin will be sent free, on application to Potter D. & C. Corp., 45 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

Impossible To Assimilate The Orientals

TORONTO, Feb. 27.—Oriental occupation of the Pacific Coast, not by invasion, but by the slow process of immigration, was declared by H. H. Stevens, M.P. for Vancouver, in his address before the Canadian Club yesterday to be within the bounds of practicability and to have been, to a certain extent, already achieved.

Orientals of every description, Chinese and Japanese as well as Hindoos, the Vancouver member of the House of Commons argued, should be excluded for the welfare of Canada. The object of the Japanese was unquestionably to gain possession of the Pacific Coast. All down the coast now their colonies were scattered.

Should Allow Assimilation.

Conservation and immigration were the great problems of the Dominion Canada in its immigration policy should profit by the experience of the United States, he said. He quoted from the authoritative work on Immigration by Professor Jenks and W. Jenks, of Cornell University, and W. J. Loucks, chief examiner of the United States Tariff Commission. In this work is given the finding of the Immigration Commission appointed in 1907. This commission emphasized the principles that in framing immigration legislation, regard should be had to quality and quantity so that the process of assimilation would be made not too difficult, and to the fact that immigration should not be allowed to simply develop some industrial industry, but be made a factor in nation building.

Assimilation was the one great problem to be solved. In British Columbia one of every ten persons was an Oriental.

"I fully appreciate the good qualities of the Oriental," said Mr. Stevens, "and our objection to him is not that he is inferior as a man, but that his ideals, political, social, moral and intellectual are so entirely different from ours, that it is impossible to assimilate him."

Mr. Stevens described the three classes of Orientals—Chinese, Japanese, and Hindoos. Of the Chinese 95 per cent. were males, and 5 per cent. females. The Chinese engaged in house work, mill work, gardening and cannery work. In this respect he displaced a class of white labour. In the fisheries, for instance, the curing and packing of fish, done in Eastern Canada by women and boys, is done in British Columbia by the Oriental. This is because in British Columbia the control of the fishing industry is practically in the hands of the Japanese.

Gamblers and White Slavers.

The Chinese were inveterate gamblers and white slavers. Chinese coolies in Vancouver were slaves to syndicates of wealthier Chinese who hired them out and pocketed their wages.

The Japs invaded the logging industry and fishing industry. Whereas ten years ago, ten thousand white men were engaged in the fishing business, to-day there were ten thousand Japanese and no white men. This was a serious loss to the people of the Province. The object and aim of the Japanese was unquestionably to gain control of the Pacific Coast. All down the coast now were Japanese settlements and colonies. In the Hawaiian Islands were enough Japanese to form the nucleus of a strong army.

What the Hindoos Do.

The Hindoo is engaged largely in work about the big cities, excavations, gardening, etc. They did little or no farming, had shown no evidence whatever of pioneering proclivities. They herded together in large numbers in a room and one reason why Orientals ,including the Hindoo, were hired by logging and lumbering companies was that they did not object to sleeping on the floor in a crowd.

Mr. Stevens, in conclusion, pointed out that Canada being a most important part of the Empire, should maintain as far as possible the Anglo-Saxon traditions and ideals. Immigration should not be encouraged with a view simply to filling up the country, but to building up a nation that would be sympathetic with these high ideals.

VIOLATIONS OF FEDERAL LAW

It has come to the attention of the Bureau of Explosives, American Railway Association, that many of the users of explosives, and especially miners who are foreigners not conversant with the English language, or the requirements of the Federal law, are in the habit of including packages of explosives in their baggage checked in the usual way on a passenger train, and in packages of household furniture shipped by freight.

The Federal law strictly forbids a concealed shipment of explosives or the transportation of explosives on passenger trains, even when declared. Packages of explosives must be packed in their regular shipping containers properly marked and accompanied by shipping orders of the usual form. The penalty provided for violation of the Federal law is severe and may equal a fine not to exceed $2,000, with or without imprisonment, not to exceed 18 months.

Many of the violations described above have been reported, and in all such cases where the evidence was sufficient to warrant conviction prosecutions have been started. Guilty parties even when their action was due to ignorance have been fined and imprisoned; ignorance is no excuse for a violation of this kind.

As examples, it may be stated that miners and other parties have taken kegs of blasting powder, and even packages of dynamite mixed with blasting caps, all wrapped in loose paper packages, into the smoking cars of passenger trains. In other cases wash tubs and barrels supposed to contain only household goods have been found to contain loose powder and sticks of dynamite.

This is a matter that affects public safety, and this information should be used not only by parties to prevent their own parties from being in violation of the law, but each person should do all in his power to spread this information in the interests of public safety, and to prevent violations by all parties.

Public spirited citizens willing to assist in promoting the safety of the public in this respect, and possessing information or suggestions that would be valuable are requested to correspond with or call on Colonel S. W. Dunn, Chief Inspector, 30 Vesey St., New York City.

The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet

For Schools, Hotels, Banks and Private Residences

Heretofore it has been impossible to install a Sanitary System of inside closet without water works and sewage, and you will agree with us when we say that the present outdoor system of closets are not only very insanitary, but are at the same time one of the most fruitful sources of both moral and physical ills.

The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet is constructed principally for families and public bodies who live in a district where it is impossible to have waterworks and sewage. It can be placed in any part of a Residence, Store, School, Hotel, Bank, etc.

We have secured the Agency for this valuable Sanitary Closet, and invite investigation of its merits.

SUNDAY VISIT TO SALVATION ARMY

Written for Examiner by Roy Gilray

Last Sunday night we worshipped with the Salvation Army. So great was the contrast between this service and that at a church, we imagined we had been transported to another world. Everything was free and easy, human like, devoid of that veneer so characteristic of the tony church. There were no forty dollar hats to obstruct the view, no display of diamonds to dazzle the eyes.

The prevailing fashions in dress were a red waist and black skirt, hair done up without "rats" and surmounted by dark bonnets or plain hats trimmed with black and red. All women wore the same styles, so there were none looking around to see, or criticise what their neighbours had on. No wonder the husbands of these women look happy: (no worries over large millinery or dress-making bills). Even the women themselves wore pleasant smiles, since no one was green with envy because the woman next had on a better or more expensive outfit.

In fact there was none of that feeling of pretense, or desire for show; the only thing displayed was a tremendous earnestness from beginning to end for the salvation of souls. Again and again the appeal was made for sinners to seek repentence. I had often wondered why the Army kept dwelling so much on this part of the service, but it was indelibly impressed on me as I studied the magnitude of their work.

To whom can a human wreck go for comfort and consolation but to the outstretched arms of the Salvation Army. What would happen him if he sought shelter in a fashionable church? He would get the cold shoulder, particularly if his clothes were not cut to the latest styles, and perchance if he did run the gauntlet and tremblingly sit down in an upholstered seat, he would be approached by a fussy creation in rustling silks and, reminded, in none too pleasant tones, that he was sitting in HER pew and there was no room for strangers.

And then there was the band. What splendid music they provided with their beautiful silver instruments! As they rendered some of their special selections, the pieces were so high class, and the rendition so perfect that, to close your eyes, was but to imagine you were sitting in the great concourse of the Toronto Exhibition, listening to one of the famous bands that provide music during the Fair. These bandsmen receive no pay whatever for their services, not even the bandmaster, who, by the way, is an able leader.

By their splendid music, they add much to the brightness and attractiveness of our streets and to the pleasure of our citizens, and they should receive special recognition from our City Fathers. The Band is in receipt of a grant of $150, which is intended to cover ten concerts given in the City parks during the summer months, or at the rate of $15 per performance. The 57th Battalion Band receives a grant of $500 for about the same number of concerts, or $50 per concert.

Why such partiality?

Surely there is not such a difference in the quality of music rendered As a matter of fact we know there is not. Then, we think it is the duty of the City Council to retrieve the past and do their duty by the Army Band, and see that their allowance is materially increased. This money, we might say, does not go into the pockets of the men or Army; it is simply used as a general expense fund for the purpose of purchasing instruments, music and the up-keep of the band-room. At the present time they have considerably over $3000.00 invested in the very best silver-plated instruments procurable. There is an enrollment of thirty-four bandsmen.

The service was liberally sprinkled with music; in fact, I have often paid a quarter for a musical programme not half as good.

In short, if there is anyone who is tired of hearing fiction, weary of listening to scraps over whether Jonah swallowed the whale, or the whale swallowed Jonah, jaded with hair-splitting feats on theology; anyone whose soul has become enshrouded in the icicles of doubt, and whose heart longs for human sympathy, I would advise them to pay a visit to the Army Citadel on Simcoe street, where, at least, you will receive a hearty welcome, and your heart stirred as probably it was never moved before.

Another thing that impressed us was the fact that the Salvationists do not believe in race-suicide. Children, children, everywhere; they were almost as plentiful as the captivating music.

The choice of songs added greatly to the impressiveness of the service. No matter what thought was suggested, either by prayer or testimony, they seemed to have a hymn ready that just suited the suggestion. The service opened with "Rock of Ages," then a prayer that breathed faith in God, which was enlarged on by singing "My Faith Looks up to Thee." Another prayer spoke of closeness to God, followed by "Nearer My God to Thee," while another hinted at troubles, which brought forth "Jesus Knows All About Our Troubles".

Another feature that added interest to the occasion was the presence of Sergeant-Major and Mrs. Andrews of London, father and mother of Mrs. Merritt, both of whom addressed the meeting, adding their testimony to the sustaining power of Christ. Mr. and Mrs. Andrews came originally from Nottingham, England, the home of General Booth, where they were in the habit of attending cottage prayer-meetings, led by Mr. and Mrs. Booth. This was before the organization of the Salvation Army. Mr. Andrews referred to the great change that had come over him, having been reclaimed from a drunken, vicious life. Next Thursday night he will give a history of his life and the transformation after conversion.

Ensign Merritt, the officer in charge of the work at Peterborough, is a man of great earnestness, and is ably assisted in his good work by his estimable wife. Both have that longing for souls, which is so characteristic of Salvationists everywhere. Both Ensign and Mrs. Merritt are Canadian born, hailing from London, where he used to ply the printer's trade, but the yearning for souls became so great that he forsook the good wages of the printer for the uncertain remuneration of a Salvationist.

The Ensign gave a very practical talk which was received with close attention. In a few well-chosen remarks, devoid of emotion, lacking any strained flights of rhetoric, and in a business-like manner he sought to explain the truth as contained in Luke 17: 20-21, particularly the last clause, "The Kingdom of God is with in you." The cry of the human heart the world over is after God. The Pharisees, a most devout and religious sect, were looking for the kingdom of God. The rich young ruler was a strict observer of the commandments, yet he sought the kingdom of God. Even Nicodemus, another model man, came by night to Jesus to seek the kingdom.

The conception of Christ's kingdom was a mystery to them all. The Jews expected a temporal power set up which would overcome their enemies. Even the disciples were many times engaged in heated arguments over their jealousies as to who would be greatest in the kingdom to be formed. At the present time many are still looking for this kingdom, thinking it will take the form of a great nation which will conquer all its enemies, while others contemplate a great religious sect, and anyone outside its pale will be doomed; but the Ensign pointed out that nowhere in the Bible was there such a thought mentioned.

The kingdom of God will be an individual kingdom, enthroned in the hearts of men.

There is only one way to enter this kingdom; not by morality; not by religious observance, nor by being followers of any particular sect or creed —as good as these may be; Christ pointed the way when he spoke with Nicodemus, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God."

The seat of the kingdom is the human heart, the soul, the Holy Spirit in the heart of man. And a man must experience a change of heart, in other words, he must be born again.

We are all born in sin, ruled and controlled by the prince of the power of the air, commonly known as the devil. As long as we are in this condition we are outside the kingdom of God. Paul, in his letter to the Colossians, says: "Giving thanks unto the Father, who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son, in whom we have redemption through His blood, even the forgiveness of sin."

This redemption, this forgiveness, comes only through the personal appeal of the sinner. No one can do it for him. It is a personal matter between him and his God. Once the appeal is made and the sinner truly repents of his sins, having faith in Jesus Christ, he will receive power to refrain from that which is evil and do that which is right. He becomes a new creature, all things have passed away, all things have become new.

Then followed the invitation for sinners to seek repentance, the appeal being taken up by Mrs. Merritt who pled most earnestly with those who were weary of their sinful life, assuring them that Christ would help them, that He knew all their troubles and their failures, that though their sins were as scarlet He would make them as white as snow.

"There's mercy still for thee,
Poor, trembling soul;
He'll make you whole,
There's mercy still for thee."

COUGHED FIVE YEARS

Did you ever cough for five weeks —or five months? Then just think how distressing it must be to have a cough hang on for five years.

Mrs. M. Mann, of New York City knows something about this. She says: "A chronic cough that lasted for five years seemed almost impossible for me to get rid of. Various other remedies gave little if any relief, but before I had taken half a bottle of Vinol I noticed a great improvement as I no longer coughed at night.

"Now my bronchial trouble has quite disappeared and I feel sure that the credit for this is due to Vinol."

The reason cough syrups did Mrs. Mann no good is that they do not and cannot build up the body and enrich the blood. That is what you have to do to get rid of a stubborn bronchial cough, and Vinol will do it for you.

Vinol contains the curative, healing principles of fresh cod livers (without oil) and tonic iron. We guarantee it to be delicious in taste and to satisfy you with its medicinal effects. ANOTHER RESIDENT

Although the wind, in the country, was blowing a heavy gale, with many of the roads blocked, there was a good attendance at the sale of farm implements, etc., at the farm of Mr. J. J. Bennett, lot 5, Concession 9, North Monaghan. Considerable interest arose from the fact that Mr. W. J. Hancock was the auctioneer, and was making his first appearance in that particular district. Several of the farmers who were there stated that they were favourably impressed with the manner in which he handled the sale. The prices received were considered good Mr. Bennett, it is understood, is retiring from the farm, and will reside on Crescent street.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST

$125.00 FOR ONE FOWL.

W. R. Grose Placed This Price on Black Wyandotte Cock to Buyer From United States.

The value of breeding prize-winning poultry is best illustrated by the story of the price Mr. W. R. Grose put on his black Wyandottes. They have won numerous prizes and showed their class by winning the Taylor Cup at Gananoque. A poultry fancier from across the line has been very eager to secure one of these cocks or cockerels and the price mentioned to him by Mr. Grose was $125. It is not known whether this was accepted or not, but it is a fact that poultry fanciers are not sticklers for a few dollars, when a fowl they want is involved. Mr. Grose has quite a number of these Wyandottes, and it is said that one is about as good as any of the others. It is not known that $125 is a usual price for these fowl, and it is rather believed ordinarily they are much less than this figure.

NOT SLAVES TO FASHION.

Stories of a Slim Effect in Men's Garments Are Denied.

"All this talk in the sartorial articles about next season's fashions being for fat or lean men, is nonsense. There was a time when our well dressed men went to extreme because the makers of fashions in Europe indorsed certain styles. That time is past. Our men grow more independent every year, and the number who follow their own inclinations, regardless of the fashion plates, is increasing steadily. That is the reason why they are looked upon as the best dressed when they go abroad. The 'best trade' looks for individuality."—New York Tribune.

SOME EXPLANATION OF WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT

Written for the Examiner by Miss Adeline C. Roberts, of Young's Point

(By Adeline C. Roberts.)

In view of the increasing interest in the question of equal franchise, I shall endeavour to set forth here some of the aims and principles of this movement, for the [illegible] information of those readers w[illegible]ugh lack of correct knowledge, [illegible] indifferent to, or opposed to the subject. I propose, in this article, to show some arguments in favour of equal suffrage. In subsequent articles I shall deal: (1) with some of the arguments against it, as set forth by anti-suffragists; (2) with what has been accomplished by means of equal suffrage in those states and countries where it already obtains.

A large proportion of the women opposed to equal suffrage are so, simply because they have never thoughtfully and intelligently studied the question. Their knowledge of it is confined to a vague notion that suffragists are women who march in processions (led by Mrs. Pankhurst) who throw stones at windows and who clamour for seats in parliament. Those who entertain these ideas, need only to inform themselves correctly as to the real significance of the woman suffrage movement, and their own common sense, intelligence and reason will do the rest. There is plenty of excellent literature obtainable on the subjects, from small paper pamphlets to the complete history of woman suffrage in three volumes. Other women who do not believe in this much-needed reform are those who say: "I am perfectly contented, I don't want to vote; equal suffrage does not interest me." Surely such an attitude of indifference to a reform which would be of inestimable benefit to many thousands of their sex to the betterment of whose conditions equal franchise would be an open door, is an eminently selfish attitude!

It is a mistaken notion that the woman suffrage movement is a sort of social revolution, a war of women on men. It is not a social revolution, but a social evolution, a movement of enlightened man and women both, for the abolition of an unfair and unjust condition of things, a condition which deprives one half of the adult population perfectly as well qualified as the other half, of its rights of citizenship, simply because of its sex. Though men only are responsible for the present conditions under which women have to live, and work, yet women are held responsible for the results of those conditions, surely it is but simple justice that they should have something to say as to what those conditions shall be!

Yet, though women have to obey the laws they are allowed no voice, even in the making of such laws as directly affect their own interests.

The evils of unsanitary surroundings, adulterated foods, bad working conditions in factories, child labour, high rate of infant mortality, etc., etc., can only be remedied by legislation, and, so far, man-made laws, and man's government have singularly failed to create a condition even approaching individual and general welfare. For this reason larger and larger numbers of men and women are gradually beginning to realise that the wholesale exclusion of half the community from the duties and privileges of full citizenship is not only unjust, but also profoundly detrimental to the State.

Men and women should stand together on the same plane of rights, and privileges and duties, just as they are on the same plane of intellect and mental development. Women have great need of direct representation in legislation because they are complementary to men, and because men's and women's points of view are different. The mother element has too long been absent from the wider affairs of life. A mother's duty does not stop at her house-door There are many important matters directly affecting women's interests which will never be efficiently dealt with until the mothers of the nation have direct influence on legislation.

In conclusion, I should like to say something of the progress of the Woman Suffrage Movement in Ontario. Only a few years ago it was hardly thought respectable to mention woman suffrage in polite society; the subject was "tabooed" among all refined and educated people. But all that has changed within the last year, and the subject is now becoming one of almost universal interest.

In Toronto a new society (The Equal Franchise League) has just been formed, a monthly paper (The Ontario Woman) dealing with the movement, has been started, lectures on equal franchise are being given by prominent speakers—notably one last week by Miss Forbes Robertson, at which the Mayor occupied the chair—some of the city controllers advocate it in their speeches, and "drawing-room meetings" are being held in numbers of private residences.

A large delegation will, in a few days, wait on the Ontario Legislature, to ask for the passage of a bill giving women wider franchise. There seems every indication that, in Toronto at any rate, woman suffrage is rapidly gaining ground, and becoming a matter of vital interest.

Two Prices

That's What Tea and Coffee Drinkers Pay

The first is the money paid—comes out of the pocket.

The second (by far the greater) is the "draft" on the nervous system by caffeine, the tea and coffee drug.

It is not merely the "price," but the drug, caffeine, that makes tea and coffee drinking expensive—a nerve-racking burden!

There's genuine economy of money, and better health in the regular use of

POSTUM

Postum is made of clean, hard wheat—skilfully roasted and blended just like coffee, but without the drug, caffeine, which makes tea and coffee harmful to so many persons.

MINISTER'S TRIAL

Tea and Coffee Hit Him Hard Indeed.

A minister of the gospel writes about Postum: "I was for years a sufferer from headaches—sometimes so violent that, groaning in agony, I would pace the floor or garden holding my throbbing head for relief.

"I tried all sorts of remedies known to the allopathic and homeopathic schools. Sometimes I thought it was caused by the stomach or biliousness, and again I would suspect it was purely nervousness and treated myself accordingly, but nothing ever gave me permanent relief.

Having to appear before the public nearly every night, it was sometimes almost impossible for me to fulfill my engagements. Finally I came to suspect that the use of tea and coffee had something to do with my disorder and abruptly discontinued the use of both and took on Postum for a trial.

"From that happy hour I commenced to mend. Gradually I got better and better and now I do not have a headache once in 6 months and all my other troubles are gone too. I am now using Postum exclusively and want no better beverage.

"I know of others who have been benefitted by the use of Postum in place of coffee. A friend of mine here in Key West, a hardware merchant, suffered for years with stomach and other troubles while he was using coffee. Finally he quit and began using Postum and got well. He is devoted to Postum and when worn and weary with business cares takes a cup of it piping hot and in a short time feels rested and nourished.

"Some I know have become prejudiced against Postum because careless or ignorant cooks try to make it as they would coffee and will not allow it to boil full 15 minutes, but when they try it again, well boiled, it stays for it is as delicious and snappy as the mild, smooth, high-grade Java." THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

HOW much of all the discontent and unhappiness in the world comes to us, not on account of what we lack, but on account of what someone else has!

A certain bride-to-be who can only afford to furnish her living-room in oak, is just now the victim of that kind of discontent. This girl might be well satisfied with that beautifully grained but often unappreciated wood, if it were not that her most intimate friend, who has double her income, had mahogany in her living room when she was married. And because of that fact, the first girl cannot see any beauty in the oak furniture which is within her means, and will either spend more than she ought for mahogany, or be dissatisfied with what she gets.

To have an oak income and mahogany friends is to pave the way for discontent. Only a very strong mind can barricade you from the enemy of happiness under such conditions.

A group of girls, all of moderate means, were speaking of their plans to cross the water some day, and discussing the various lines by which they might travel.

One girl said, "I'm saving up in the hope I can afford to go on the R—— line"—naming one of the lines which is distinguished by the magnificence of its appointments and the wealth of its patrons.

"Are you really?" said one of the other girls. "Do you know, I have friends there and think I could get reduced rates, but I'd rather go on the L——line," naming a line of which the equipments are much simpler and the patrons mostly middle-class people.

"Why aren't you foolish!" cried the other girl. "Don't you know how beautiful the R—— ships are and what wealthy people you meet?"

"That's just why I don't want to go on that line," answered the wise one. "I know I should feel insignificant, under-dressed and envious most of the time with all those rich people around me. I should probably spend more money than I ought and get ideas and standards that would make me dissatisfied with what I could afford on the rest of my trip. Whereas on the L—— line, I'd meet people who had about as much means as I have. They say that a great many professors and teachers and people who are taking their one trip abroad, go on those boats, and I know I'd feel much more satisfied with my clothes and the money I'll have to spend, and the trip I'm going to take, after being with that kind of folks, than I should if I met a lot of rich people."

There is a great deal of wisdom in that point of view. I have no doubt that nine times out of ten, when people live beyond their means, it is because they have too many friends in the class financially above them, and lack the strength of mind not to try to pattern their lives after these friends.

In "The Newcomers," Thackeray wonders in his gently satirical fashion at the folks who "give themselves extreme pains to frequent company where all around them are their superiors, and where, do what they will, they must be subject to continued mortification"—and concludes that "the true pleasure of life is to live with one's inferiors." That seems to me to be putting it rather strong, but I should certainly suggest our equals as the safest class in which to find the majority of our friends, if we value out content and peace of mind.

MONSTER EXCURSION ON C.G.E. DAY, JUNE 15th TO TORONTO

Plans Practically Perfected for a Big Outing That May Become an Annual Affair--Meeting Held Last Night of Committee of Employees.

If the plans outlined by the committee of shop representatives acting with the Mutual Benefit Society materialize, the employees of the Canadian General Electric Company will run a monster excursion to Toronto and Niagara Falls on Saturday, June 15th. There only remains the approval of the Superintendent, Mr. E. G. Patterson, to this date chosen by a representative gathering of the employees at the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday night.

Mr. Patterson has offered an entire Saturday holiday to the employees, who were asked to decide for themselves the manner in which they would spend it. Accordingly the different departments of the works were asked to send two representatives from each to last night's meeting for the purpose of discussing the proposal.

Mr. R. E. Harding was appointed chairman and Mr. F. A. Shannon secretary for the occasion. There was a large representation of employees, not a few of whom came of their own accord.

The decision to hold the excursion to Toronto and Niagara Falls was unanimously supported and every one evinced a genuine interest in the proposal, and apparently felt that the outing would be a splendid success.

Will be C.G.E. Day.

The tentative plans are, therefore, to celebrate C.G.E. Day, as it will possibly be known, by an excursion to Toronto and Niagara Falls. The date June 15th, was chosen, the only provision being that it meet with the approval of Mr. Patterson. Three vestibule trains will be run from the city, leaving the C.P.R. station at 6.15 a.m., 6.35 a.m. and 6.55 a.m. respectively. At 9.15 the steamer Cayuga will leave Toronto for the sail across the lake to Niagara for those desiring to make this part of the trip. It is fully expected that between 2,000 and 3,000 people will avail themselves of this opportunity for a pleasant outing at a time when the season is at its best.

From the enthusiasm displayed in the discussions last night, the affair should be a big success. Some regard it as a splendid advertisement for Peterborough, apart from the pleasure the excursionists will enjoy. Excursions of the size that this is expected to be, are not met with every day. From the present prospects, there is every reason to believe that it will be a success if the proposed plans are carried out. The C. G. E. Mutual Benefit Society are practically taking the lead, and with the shop representatives present last night, will compose a committee that should look after all the details of the outing. Very favourable rates will likely be received and every inducement will be offered the employees to make the occasion a pleasant one.

C.G.E. Day on certain conditions, may be made an annual event, and no doubt the success of the first outing will be the principal factor in determining this point.

LOCAL LABOUR CONDITIONS DURING MONTH OF JANUARY

Following is the report of labour conditions in Peterborough in January as given by the Labour Gazette:

The labour market in January was fair. Outside work became quieter, compared with the preceding month. In other lines of industry, however, the busy conditions reported last month were maintained. Manufacturers of electrical machinery were exceptionally busy. The Quaker Oats Company has also had a busy season but finds it hard to get girls to do their work. The International Harvester Company, the Brinton Carpet Company and the Canadian General Electric Company are also advertising for girls. All other help is equal to the demand. The Canadian Canoe Company has commenced operations in a new building. The city has just completed a new sewage system and pumping station for the south end of the city. T. police commissioners at their rannual meetin gthis month raised he salary of the chief and men of the force. The city firemen's salaries were raised: first year men to $550, second year men to $600, third year men to $650. A bylaw was carried in favour of Hydro-Electric power. A new coal company has started business and one shipment has been disposed off at a price below that of other dealers. A new company has been organized to manufacture gasoline engines, capitalized at $30,000, the A. W. Parks & Son Company, Limited. The Board of Education asks $65,000 for schools the present year. The demand for Separate schools will increase the amount to about $75,000. There will be two new schools built this year, one in the east ward and one in the west ward. The local merchants expressed themselves as being very well satisfied with the Christmas trade this year, notwithstanding the absence of good sleighing. Building permits for the year 1911 numbered 260, amounting to $365,373, and for the year 1910 the number was 231, amounting to $517,960, or a decrease for the past year of $172,586. There were no particularly large contracts in 1911 as in 1910. The grocers in the southwestern end of the city have decided to close their places of business at 9 o'clock in the future.

The farmers have been busy during the past month caring for stock and marketing their produce. Prices for farm products were never higher than at present. In lumbering the outlook is favorable for a large cut. A smelter is to be installed at the Galway lead mine where the Union Creek Mining Company, the owners of the property, have about 500 tons of pure lead ready. A recent sample weighing about two pounds contained 80 per cent lead.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The basketball team of the Y.W.C.A. held a banquet last evening, at which about twenty-eight people sat down. The decorative scheme was unique, being representative of the teams favourite pastime, that of basketball.

It is with many regrets that the resignation of Miss Shuttleworth has been accepted by the management of the local branch of the Y.W.C.A. Miss Shuttleworth has for the past season been assistant junior secretary and is leaving soon to take up association work in Toronto.

Mrs. (Rev.) Taylor addressed a large gathering of ladies at the regular weekly session of the literary class last evening. The subject of her discourse was "Modern Fiction." A piano duet was contributed by the Misses Gladman.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THE GIRL AND THE GAMBLER.

Ernie Marks' big success "The Girl and the Gambler" was presented for the first time in this city at the Grand last evening. The theme of the story is one that grasps the interest of the audience from the start, and maintains it until the climax of the fourth act. Here, in an intensely dramatic scene, Jessie Lynne, in the role of "Nettie Rico" struggles desperately, and is seemingly successful in reclaiming her husband's trust and belief in her, after a series of escapades on her part. The scene of the plot is taken from a Nevada mining camp and is a true to life presentation of conditions as they exist. Probably one of the best features of the play was the exceptionally fine work of Webb Chamberlain, who figured in the role of "Caleb Swan, the gambler. His lines were strong and virile, and all the elements of a true dramatist were displayed to advantage in their interpretation. The vaudeville specialities also came in for an ovation from the audience, and Miss Lida Gardner's impersonation as a mere man brought down the house, while Frank Ellin A. Brooks, in a brand new vehicle, pleased the audience immensely. Probably one of the best bills of the week will be presented to-night, when that popular four-act drama, entitled "Driven from Home" will be given; also a brand new bill of vaudeville specialities by Franklin Brooks, Lida Gardiner and Miss De-Lima. These artists need no introduction to the citizens of Peterborough as their work throughout the week has met with the unalloyed approval of the large audiences who turned out to hear them.

Woman to Jail For Day.

London, Feb. 28.—Mrs. Deborah Jeffreys was sentenced yesterday by the London Court of Sessions at the Old Bailey to a day's imprisonment on a charge of contracting a bigamous marriage with Horace F. Marshall, the chairman of the Central London Tube Railway. The sentence meant her immediate discharge from custody.

The magistrate adopted the view that Mrs. Jeffreys had acted under the compulsion of her real husband Herbert Jeffreys.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

The Keene team invaded Peterborough last night and had a lively game with the East City seven, the visitors finally winning by 4 goals to 2. The team from across the river were in front 2 to 1 early in the struggle, but Keene pulled up even and at half time had the score 3 to 2 in their favour. Soon after the breathing spell a nice rush by Bill Short added another goal to the Keene total and although both teams had good openings afterwards, there was no further scoring. Rolly Weir of the juniors played for the East City team, but failed to turn the tide against his old team mates who watched him closely. Weir and the Butcher Brothers starred for East City, while Short was the pick of the Keene aggregation. The visitors had the weight and speed all through the league.

The Northern Lights and the Cannon Balls met in deadly combat at Brock street rink last night, and the team from the North won a well-played and hard-fought game by 6 goals to 3.

As the Trent Valley League stands at the present time, T.A.S. are champions of one district, Hastings and Lakefield settle another to-night and Marmora and Stirling are playing home and home games to decide the third. The semi-final round will in all probability commence on Friday night, as the League officials desire to take advantage of the good ice.

SITUATION GROWS WORSE

British Coal Dispute Reaches No Settlement—Between 30,000 and 40,000 Quit Work Yesterday

QUESTION OF WAGE

London, Feb. 28.—No settlement of the coal dispute was reached at the various conferences, in which the Premier and members of his Cabinet and the representatives of the mine owners and miners participated yesterday. The official statement of the proceedings issued last night, which some predicted would report that an agreement had been reached, merely records the fact that various conferences occurred, but tells nothing of what was done or said at any of them. It concludes with the announcement that the conferences will be resumed today, from which all that can be deduced is that the Government is still striving to avert a stoppage of the gigantic industry on which the country's commercial supremacy is based.

Between 30,000 and 40,000 miners in Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire ceased work yesterday, in accordance with a notice previously given, and it is now quite evident that, as the time limit provided for in the notices expires, the men will lay down their tools and await the action of the miners' federation.

Until the owners are persuaded to concede the minimum wage principle it is obvious that nothing can be accomplished by bringing the disputants together. From the fact that this has not been done, it is inferred that the Cabinet has not succeeded in inducing the owners, Welsh as well as English, to make that concession.

That the sanguine expectations, widely held, of ultimate success, are not yet altogether justified, is shown by the answer given by James Haslam, member of Parliament and leader of the Derbyshire miners, who attended the conference, to interviewers, in reply to a question concerning the outlook. "There is no outlook at present," said Mr. Haslam. "The Government seems to have gone as far as it can go. The Ministers are very anxious, just as we are, but it is going to be a rum job."

In the view of morning newspapers likely to be well informed the coal difficulty presents a grave outlook, mainly owing to the obduracy of the Welsh mine owners who decline to grant a minimum wage on any terms whatever. Hints that the Government might force a minimum wage bill through Parliament seem to have had the effect of stiffening the backs of the mine owners generally who resent seeing their hands forced in this manner.

In Parliamentary circles, where, presumably, inside information has been obtained, there is an undeniable feeling of optimism, but if Government intervention fails by Friday morning, practically every colliery in the land will be shut down. Meanwhile many thousands are making ready to strike, and the time left to accomplish anything by negotiations is alarmingly short.

The negotiations continued until midnight. Premier had another conference at his official residence with the owners' committee at 9 o'clock, and neither the Premier, Chancellor Lloyd-George nor the president of the Board of Trade, Sydney Buxton, was able to appear in the House of Commons last night, because of the coal situation.

EXPROPRIATE CHATS FALLS

Scheme to Secure Power for Eastern Ontario Outlined

100,000 HORSE POWER

Toronto, Feb. 28.—Hydro-electric power for the whole eastern section of the province is assured by the action of the Government in commencing expropriation proceedings to obtain possession of Chats Falls on the Ottawa River. Between 100,000 and 120,000 horsepower will be developed there. Ontario will soon have as much power in the eastern portion of Ontario as in the west, and the demands of Ottawa, Smith's Falls, Prescott and the whole district west of Kingston will be met.

Announcement to that effect was made yesterday by Hon. Adam Beck, who feels that the Government is entirely justified in its action. "The commission realizes," said he, "that it still has some difficulties to overcome. One of the principal obstacles it has to encounter is the exploitation of the property of the people of this province, and whatever the constitutional rights of the province may be, the commission intends that the people of Ontario shall know to what extent the heritage of the people has been granted or appreciated. It must be once and all be understood that the resources of this province and of every legitimate agency which the Government finds at its disposal, will be used to preserve or regain that heritage, and that in doing so we are not prepared to compensate anyone for gains made which are known to be unlawful or immoral. This is in order that the powers of eminent domain existing in the crown, as representing this province, will be exercised upon such a basis as to render nugatory any attempts at political brigandage or the basic methods of [illegible] what gain it may upon a political party for the advantage of themselves, or of a corporation, no matter how plausible, which they represent."

Chats Falls was transferred by the crown to Wm. Harty on June 3, 1920. It consists of about 62 acres. On July 30, 1920, Mr. Harty sold one-third of his liberty to Daniel O'Connor for $167, and on the same day sold another third to C. P. Brophy for $167. On April 22, 1919, Brophy returned to the Hon. Wm. Harty all his interest for the consideration of one dollar. On Oct. 17, 1921, the crown deeded to Mr. O'Connor the Government slide reserve rights for $1,471. This was about three weeks after the Dominion election. Mr. O'Connor then secured all the control of all water and power had covered by the slide.

Brophy is superintendent of waterways on the Ottawa River, for the Ottawa Government, and reported that the slide rights were no longer required for Government purposes, when he transferred them to O'Connor.

Previous to this transfer, the city of Ottawa made application to obtain possession of the slide, and the Hydro-Electric Commission co-operated with the city. Last Friday the Provincial Government passed an order-in-council authorizing the commission to expropriate all the properties covered by the forgoing deeds. The plan was prepared, forwarded to Ottawa and registered in the registry office of the County of Carleton on Monday last.

The Hydro-Electric Commission will hear all parties who are interested in the proposed act to amend the Power Commission Act, which was introduced in the Legislature last week by Hon. Adam Beck. The date set for the hearing is Tuesday, March 5, at 10 a. m.

THE ABSTAINERS WIN THEIR GROUP CAPTURE ROUND BY THREE GOALS

T. A. S. Were Beaten 3 to 1 by Campbellford in Return Game Last Night but the Round Was Never in Danger.

AN EXCITING BATTLE

The T.A.S. are champions of their district. They were beaten last night by 3 to 1 at Campbellford but they carried a margin of five goals with them to the Eastern town so that they captured the round by 6 goals to 3. The Abstainers report a stormy session in Campbellford last night and state that they had to submit to bad treatment on the part of crowd and players alike. The Campbellford fans were inclined to be sore when they saw the tide was going against them and the Peterborough players and Referee Waghorn were given a bad evening. Nagle Phelan, who played left wing for the T.A.S., received a punch in the eye from a spectator when he was sent to the penalty box and after the game one of the Peterborough bunch was thrown bodily out of the rink. It was a hard fought battle. Campbellford led at half time by 2 to 1 and added another score in the second chapter. The Abstainers stated they scored two goals on shots by Phelan and Lancefield which were not allowed by the Campbellford goal umpire. However, they were satisfied to keep the score down and the result of the round was never in doubt. The game did not start until 10.30 owing to the late arrival of Referee Waghorn. The Abstainers lined up as follows:

Married Ladies Doubled Score

A very interesting game of curling was played at the Charlotte Street Rink this morning, between a rink of married ladies and one composed of unmarried ladies. The ice was in good condition and quite a closely-contested game resulted. The score board, at the final end, showed a score of 10 to 5, in favour of the married ladies, who gave many evidences of a knowledge of the fine points of the game. The rinks were as follows:

Married.	Unmarried.
Mrs. V. Eastwood	Miss H. Davidson
Mrs. Grant	Miss Belle Morrow
Mrs. W. H. Hill	Miss Flora Collins
Mrs. Ritchie	Miss Nina Davidson

"SALT RHEUM"

Had It On Hands For Two Years.

ITCHED SO DID NOT KNOW WHAT TO DO.

Tried Three Doctors and Went to Hospital.

All skin diseases are more or less occasioned by a bad state of the blood, and no one can expect to be free from some form or other of skin trouble unless the blood is kept in good shape. All skin diseases can be very easily cured by the wonderful blood cleansing properties of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This is due to the unrivalled purifying action of Burdock Blood Bitters on the blood, coupled with the thorough manner in which it cleanses and expels the impurities from the body.

Mrs. Richard Coutine, White Head, Que., writes:—"I have been bothered with salt rheum, on my hands, for two years, and it itched so I did not know what to do. I tried three doctors, and even went to Montreal to the hospital without getting any relief. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got three bottles, and before I had the second used I found a big change, and now to-day I am cured."

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for about 35 years and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Lakefield-Hastings Engagement To-night

Two Special Trains and Rumours About "Ringers" Add to the Excitement and a Big Crowd Will See the Trent Valley League Teams Battle at Brock Street Rink.

There will be all kinds of excitement at Brock street rink to-night when Hastings and Lakefield meet in a sudden death semi-final Trent Valley League game. There is intense rivalry between the two towns and both will run excursions for the big event. Local fans will turn out strongly for the battle and it looks like one big crowd. For some reason or other each club is inclined to look upon the other with suspicion and the air has been heavy to-day with rumours of mysterious strangers who are to play on one side or the other. All this of course will add to the excitement and it is probable that the personnel of each team will be closely scrutinized before the puck is faced. Neither team will lack supporters and any way you look at it the affray ought to be well worth seeing. The winning team will be in line to play the T.A.S. and the winners of the Eastern division for the championship.

Here are the line-ups given to the Examiner by the respective managements this morning:

Hastings		Lakefield

Burton	Cover-Point	Crawford
McMillan	Rover	Blewitt

THE CANOE CLUB WIN THE JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Were Beaten 5 to 3 at Orillia Last Night But Have a Margin of Three Goals on the Round

ORILLIA, FEB. 27.—Every available foot of space in the local rink was crowded with enthusiastic spectators this evening when Orillia and Toronto Canoe Club met in the final game of the O. H. A. junior championship series. Keen ice, an impartial referee, and both teams in excellent condition, combined to make the final one of the best exhibitions of hockey ever seen here. The score, 5 to 3, in favour of the home team, is a fair criterion of the strength of the respective teams. After the game the supporters of the Canoe Club were ready to admit that the better team won. Although the trophy goes to T.C.C., Orillians console themselves with the reflection that exceptional conditions at Toronto on Saturday night were responsible for the result of the round, which is 7 to 10 in the Canoe Club's favour, rather than that "our little boys" were lacking in ability to play the game.

Toronto brought up a large contingent on the afternoon train: Many sportsmen were also here from Peterborough, Collingwood, Midland and other towns. The long-distance telephone in the rink was kept busy with calls from all over the Province. The game was good, clean hockey all the way through with the exception, perhaps, of the last fifteen minutes, when some roughness developed. After three-quarter time the Toronto Canoe Club seemed to fade away, and their goal was stormed repeatedly. At half-time the score was 1 to 1. Brilliant play was conspicuous everywhere and neither side appeared to have any advantage. Toronto's defence did magnificent work and the combination play of the Orillians was a surprise to everyone.

In the second half the Orillia combination weakened and lone rushes were more frequent. Both goal-keepers did great work and on the home team Jupp and Mohan were the stars. The referee was strict, and in the first half Butterfield, Mackenzie, Cooke and Dopp were penalised. In the second half Sidley, Cooke, Thornton, Romeril, Mohan, Butterfield and Mackenzie were sent to the box. Cooke offending three times. Over 2 thousand spectators witnessed the game and there were 1,362 paid admissions to the rink. The teams:

CONSIDERABLE INTEREST BEING EVINCED IN LOCAL BONSPIEL

The second day of the local curling bonspiel brought out the real strength of the many rinks in action, and the evening's play was featured by many sensational finishes, a number of the games being decided with the last few rocks. A few dark horses are showing up in the opening rounds of the primary competition, but as a rule the old favourites held their own last night. The curlers are showing splendid form at the outset, and many hair-raising contests are anticipated before the bonspiel is concluded. Play was opened in the primary event yesterday and to-day will find practically every competition in full swing. The consolation will be under way and the fight for the trophy in this event should prove as interesting as that of the primary fixture.

Eight skips have entered the second round, seven of these on a straight win, and one by the default route. Skip Collins put Skip Maitland's rink away by one shot, while Skip Renwick performed the same feat as regards Medd's quartette, the score in both cases being identically the same. Skip Thompson played a whirlwind of a game, piling up a score of 17—5 in his favour. The following skips by reason of their victory over their opponents, or otherwise, have qualified for the second round: Messrs. Thompson, Foote, Campbell, Waddell, Renwick, McDermid, J. N. Ferguson and Collins:

The summary for last night's play is as follows:

A. J. Grant	Rev. Mr. Keith
M. J. Stanley	J. H. Metheral
H. Rose	W. T. Hall
W. J. Thompson, sk..17	T. B. Yeats..8
F. Koster	W. Johnston
G. A. Ferguson	H. Rush
W. G. Menzie	H. C. Hill
W. G. Ferguson, s	W. D. Campbell 11
A. Davidson	T. McKnight
W. Austin	H. P. Morgan
J. Montgomery	W. J. Henry
S. T. Medd, sk..12	J. H. Renwick..13
A. O. Grant	R. H. Hall
D. H. Moore	T. Hooper
R. Best	H. Martin
J. W. McDermid, sk.10	A. Hall, sk.5
J. McGeachie	W. A. Logan
A. Archibald	D. Winch
W. H. Meredith	D. B. Dennison
G. Maitland, sk..12	J. D. Collins..13

Skip A. Moore's rink was given a bye in the first round, his rink being considered too strong.. This action was determined upon by the committee in charge of the bonspiel.

Skip R. M. Waddell passed into the second round of the primary by reason of default, his opponent having introduced a spare man contrary to the ruling of the executive committee.

The competition for the Lindsay-Peterborough Cup will probably commence on Friday, with four Lindsay rinks playing on the local ice and four Peterborough rinks in Lindsay, both ends being played on the same day. In all probability Skips Flavelle, Butler, Sisson and Burke will accompany the Lindsayites here; if such is the case, a battle royal in so far as curling is concerned may be looked for.

The silverware that goes with the winner of this contest has been competed for annually since 1880, and for the past year has decorated the Lindsay club quarters. But the local aggregation is confident of depleting Lindsay of this trophy for a year at least.

The Seat Sale for "Madame Sherry" Grand, next Saturday, Matinee and Night, opens to-morrow.

SISTER OF LOCAL DOCTRESS CAPTURES A HOUSE-BREAKER

INGERSOLL, FEB. 27.—Armed with her father's heavy revolver, Miss Annie Bearss, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Constable Henry Bearss was responsible for the capture of a man giving the name of Henry Watson, and who to-morrow morning will appear in the Police Court to answer to a charge of breaking and entering by day the dwelling of Mrs. Lillywhite, Charles street east.

With unflinching nerve Miss Bearss covered the supposed burglar with the revolver, while her sister, who had accompanied her to the Lillywhite residence, hurried to inform her father, who had been sleeping.

When the Bearss sisters approached the Lillywhite residence, Watson, it is said went out by way of the back door. He was commanded to stop by the girl with the revolver. Watson at first ignored the command, but when a couple of bullets whizzed over his head he was very submissive. The girl kept him covered with the gun until her father was in sight. Watson then made a dash, and the girl emptied the revolver in an endeavor to frighten him into surrendering. He was captured by Constable Bearss after a short chase.

Miss Bearss, it is said, saw Watson enter the house, and after notifying her father, who was in bed, as he is right constable, hurried to take part in the exciting capture.

Miss Bearss, the heroine of the above episode, is a sister of Whitty Bearss, the prize player of the Peterborough lacrosse team.

Crippled With Sore Back

Kidneys Were Badly Diseased and She Didn't Know It

Was Completely Cured by Less Than Three Boxes of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Women are very often deceived and mistaken in regard to kidney disease. The pains in the back are attributed to other derangements, and kidney disease is allowed to run on and on until beyond the reach of medical science.

There is needless suffering, and life itself is risked, because backache is not recognized as the most marked symptom of kidney disease.

There is no treatment which so quickly relieves and cures kidney pains in the back as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. As proof of this read Mrs. Patterson's letter:

Mrs. Richard Patterson, Haldimand, Gaspe Co., Que., writes: "I will gladly say that I was cured of kidney trouble by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. When I began using this medicine I was crippled with sore back and did not know what was the trouble. In looking over Dr. Chase's Almanac I saw Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills advertised and decided to try them.

"I had not used two boxes before my back was all right, and before I had completed the third box was entirely cured. There has been no return of the old kidney trouble, and I therefore believe the cure to be permanent."

One pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmandson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The deceased lady had only been suffering a little over a week with bronchitis. She was in her 75th year and is survived by two daughters, namely, the Misses Mary and Eliza, both residing at home.

The funeral will take place on Friday morning at 9 o'clock from River Road, North, to St. Peter's Cathedral and from thence to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

FUNERAL TO-MORROW.

The funeral of the late Honora Torpey, relict of the late Mr. Eugene Torpey, of Lot 20, Con. 7, Otonabee, who passed away on Monday morning last, will leave the house at 9 o'clock to-morrow and proceed to St. Joseph's Church, Douro, and from thence to St. Joseph's cemetery, for interment.

MRS. J. W. BROWETT.

In the death of Elizabeth Helen Dotson, who passed away at 5 o'clock this morning, wife of Mr. J. W. Browett, of 583 Aylmer street, the city loses one of its most estimable citizens. The deceased lady, who was forty-nine years of age, was born in Stratford, Ont., and on her marriage went to Ingersoll, where her husband engaged in the business of a druggist. Eventually Mr. Browett made a special study of optics, and this occasioned their removal to Peterborough, some five years ago. The late Mrs. Browett was a useful and beloved member of the Murray Street Baptist church and an active member of Mr. Elcome's Bible Class. She had been ailing for some two months, and passed away on the 25th anniversary of her wedding.

The deceased is survived by a sorrowing husband, one daughter, and three sons, namely Miss Joyce Browett and Messrs. Wilfrid, Norman and Dutton Browett, all of Peterborough. Three brothers and five sisters also lament her demise, in the persons of Mr. J. W. Dutton of Woodstock, A. H. Dutton of Boston, Dr. Dutton of Detroit, Mrs. Deadman of Brussels, Mrs. McGillicuddy of Toronto, Mrs. Clarke of Hamilton, Mrs. Bell of Fulton, and Mrs. Hull of Flint.

The Rev. J. R. Webb will conduct a service at the house at 3 o'clock to-morrow evening and at 5.30 p.m. on Friday the remains will be conveyed per C.P.R. to Ingersoll, where interment will take place.

Banquet To A Departing Citizen

Friends to the number of about 25 gathered together last evening in Coleman's grill room to formally bid farewell to Mr. George Clark of the local Branch of the Bank of Commerce. A very enjoyable repast was served after which the remainder of the evening was enlivened by songs and speeches on the part of Mr. Clark's friends. A beautiful set of India paper Dickens was presented to the departing guest by Mr. McIlroy, on behalf of his associates. Mr. Clark was completely taken by surprise, and replying briefly, thanked his many friends for their kind expressions of good will towards him.

The proceedings of the evening were further enlivened with songs by Mr. McIroy, Mr. Walter Davidson, Mr. Reg Turner, Mr. Louis Mendel, and speeches by Mr. R. M. Glover, Dr. MacPherson, Dr. Frederick, Mr. W. Davidson, Mr. W. McKnight, and Mr. Paul Trebilcock.

The speakers expressed regret at Mr. Clark's coming departure from Peterborough, and were loud in their praises of the services which he had rendered towards the Belmont Club, and other institutions, with which he was affiliated. He was a true type of a gentleman, who would prove to be a valuable asset to any community, declared one speaker. The songs that interspersed the proceedings of the evening were selections from the Belmont Club's recent minstrel show.

Mr. Clark leaves on Monday next for Forest, Ont., where he will take up a position as manager of the Bank of Commerce.

A WEAK, ACHING BACK CAUSED HER MUCH MISERY

Could Not Work and Had No Ambition For Anything.

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which those afflicted endure.

Weak, lame or aching backs come from the kidneys, and when the kidneys are out of order the whole system becomes deranged.

Mrs. W. R. Hodge, Fielding, Sask., writes:—"A few lines highly recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. For this last year I have been troubled very much with nasty sick headaches, and a weak, aching back which caused me much misery, for I could not work and had no ambition for anything. My kidneys were very badly out of order, and kept me from sleeping at nights. I tried many kinds of pills and medicines but it seemed almost in vain. I began to give up in despair of ever being well and strong again, when a kind neighbor advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and am thankful for the relief I obtained from them, for now I am never in trouble with a lame back or sick headaches. I will always say Doan's Kidney Pills for mine, and can highly recommend them to any sufferers."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SNOW PLOW STORY

Of An Attempt to Lessen Labour That Was Foiled

A story was going the rounds of the city hall to-day of how a snow-plough contractor was making less labour for his horse. Under the plough he had nailed a hemlock runner of about an inch in thickness which raised the point and the bottom of the plough that much higher. Of course it meant that so much more snow was left on the sidewalk, and the horse's labour would be lightened to that extent. It was a good idea all right, and it is thoroughly modern, but some one "queered" it.

FIRE DRILL IS PRACTISED REGULARLY

Parents entertain fears which are not Substantiated.

Complaints have been prevalent of late in regard to the regularity of the fire drill at the South Central School; the criticism in regard to this principally emanating from parents whose children attend the school in question. In order that the fears of these people might be set at rest, Chief Howard invited a number of them to visit the school yesterday, where the children were put through the usual form of fire drill. They performed the drill in a very creditable manner and the time they consumed in leaving the building after the alarm was rung was on a par with the record of other schools in the city. Fire drill is practised in this school regularly, as in all the schools of the city, and the manner in which the children performed their duties in this respect yesterday, goes to show that they are thoroughly conversant with the rudiments of fire drill.

GREATEST CRISIS SINCE THE DAYS OF SPANISH ARMADA IS ENGLISH STRIKE

British Isles Are Awakened to the Seriousness of the Situation and Are Trying to Solve Problem.

MILLION TO GO OUT

Examiner Special:

LONDON, ENG., FEB. 29.—(Special cable.) — To-day the whole British Isles awakened and are keenly alert to the national seriousness of the situation and frantic eleventh hour efforts are being made to avoid the culmination of the strike by which over one million men and boys will have laid down their mining tools to-night and all Great Britain will be crippled for coal to run its industries and its trains, cook meals and warm the homes of the teeming millions of inhabitants and preserve the power of its navy to defend the empire from attack from the enemies supposed to be only awaiting such a favourable opportunity. The London Times says this morning that England will be facing the greatest crisis since the days of the Spanish Armada if the strike is not avoided. The Archbishops of Canterbury and York have issued a special prayer to be read in all parish churches to-day, calling on the Almighty to grant at this particular time of strife and unrest, fuller realization of brotherhood of man to allay anger and bitterness and deepen sense, truth and equity in dealing with one another.

Sir George Askwith whose fame as a strike settler looks to be waning in this instance, made a powerful plea to the miners' representatives this morning and also to a meeting of the mine owners to show moreconciliation toward the other side of the question. Premier Asquith had another audience with King George this morning. His Majesty was most distressed to hear officially that negotiations which were reported to him yesterday as very promising, seemed this morning to have utterly failed. It is understood that Asquith submitted and received the approval of the king to the minimum wage bill with various safeguards to the owners which the government will force through the Commons immediately as a last resort, if there is no improvement in the conditions to-day.

MONTREAL WOMEN APING MEN EVEN IN THEIR VICES

MONTREAL, FEB. 29.—A trenchant expose of the vices of Montreal society women, who seek to ape men even in their vices, was delivered this morning by Bishop Farthing at the meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the M. S. C. C.

After stating that a blatant agnostic, if not an atheistic socialism, was seeking to destroy the purity of Canada's national life, the bishop said that he had noticed that society women were aping men even in their vices and their revelries and drinking bouts.

"They spend their time," he said, "at lunches and bridge parties. It is a rare thing to find them at home, which they consider 'deadly slow.' Through the smoke beclouded rooms you can hear the chink of coin as they gamble. Love of dress is a dominant passion with them and one woman's expenses on luxuries would keep a poor family with ease. Their ostentatious charity is only a small fraction of the money they spend on enjoyment and dress.

URIC ACID SUFFERING

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Doctors Use This For Eczema

Dr. Evans, Ex-Commissioner of Health, says: "There is almost no relation between skin diseases and the blood." The skin must be cured through the skin. The germs must be washed out, and so salves have long ago been found worthless. The most advanced physicians of this country are now agreed on this, and are prescribing a wash of wintergreen, thymol and other ingredients for eczema and all other skin diseases. This compound is known as D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema.

Dr. Holmes, the well known skin specialist writes: "I am convinced that the D. D. D. Prescription is as much a specific for eczema as quinine for malaria. We have been prescribing the D. D. D. remedy for years."

We ourselves vouch for the D. D. D. Prescription for eczema and absolutely believe that it will take away the itch the instant you apply it.

Of course other druggists have D.D.D. Prescription. Go to them if you cannot come to us, but don't accept some big profit substitute.

But if you are suffering from any form of skin trouble we would like to have you come to our store, for we have had the agency of this remedy for so many years that we can tell you all about D. D. D. Prescription and how it cures eczema. Or you can get a free trial bottle by writing the D.D.D. Laboratories, 49 Colborne St., Toronto. McDermid and Jury and E. L. Payne, druggists.

BUFFALO, N.Y., FEB. 29.—The police of the Ontario cities will be asked to look for Harry Nash, aged seventeen, of this city, who ran away from home some months ago, sending a letter from Niagara Falls to his mother, telling her she would never see him again. She died in January of a broken heart, leaving him a fortune of twenty-five thousand dollars.

Trades And Labour Council Meet

A meeting of the Trades and Labour Council was held last evening. After the routine business had been disposed of, a discussion of the Old Age Pension scheme was in order, dealing with the proposition upon the grounds of information received from outside sources. In the event of the bill which is now before the House becoming a working law, about sixty Peterborough men would be benefitted thereby. The meeting also decided to hold another concert towards the end of March. The last concert held by the Trades and Labour Council, was such a well-merited success from the viewpoint of the committee in charge, and the large number of people, who were present, that the above course of action was deemed practicable.

THE WEATHER

The temperature took another decided drop last night, and 10 below zero was reached. Eight below was the reading about seven o'clock. These low reading will soon be, however, a thing of the past. A short report of February weather as compared with other years will probably appear to-morrow.—W. P.

VICTIM OF ROBBERS

Word has come to Mrs. A. D. Gardine of King street, that her mother, Mrs. Ida V. Kinley of Cincinnati, Ohio, a noted vocalist, was a victim of a very bold robbery last week. While returning from her physician's office after treatment for an injured ankle, she stopped in a writting room of one of the hotels of Cincinnati to advise a Chicago Bureau, under whose management she is, of her condition, and while there a neatly dressed man snatched Mrs. Kipley's hand satchel, which contained $719 (seven hundred and nineteen dollars.) The empty purse was found a few hours later in another hotel, but the money was all gone. Special detectives were put on the case, but no discoveries as to the thief have thus far been made.

FOOD TOO DEAR.

Farmers Losing Money it is Said by Trying to Fatten Hogs.

On the market these days it is claimed that $6.50, the present price of hogs, is too low to afford the farmer any profit. It is claimed in fact that with the present high price of feed of every kind that the farmer is simply losing money trying to fatten hogs these days. Several farmers prepared figures recently to show that the cost of adding a pound of fat to hogs is much more than six and a half cents. Buyers state that there is an evident willingness among the farmers to dispose of their hogs now as the cost of feeding cattle and hogs is altogether too high to provide a fair profit. Carrying the cattle and hogs through the winter has been quite a tax on the finances of many country residents this winter.

THE BOUNDARY SETTLEMENT.

The Toronto News claims that in settling the Manitoba boundary question, the Borden government did in four months what the Laurier government failed to do in three years. Where is the credit to the Borden government? The boundaries accepted are precisely what the Laurier government proposed three years ago. Manitoba would not accept them from a Liberal government, but the moment a Conservative government got into power, the boundaries were all right. Ontario refused, or did not accept the boundaries proposed by Sir Wilfrid, but accepts the same from Borden with a humiliating condition. The boundary settlement cuts Ontario out of a port on Hudson Bay, except with the humiliating sufferance of Manitoba. Ontario wouldn't have been sleeping as it has been over the matter of this settlement, if Sir Oliver Mowat had been at the head of the government. If a port on Hudson Bay would be an advatnage to Ontario, Ontario should have been given that port in her own territory, and not be put off with a mere right of way, through Manitoba territory, with no rights to this province except the privilege of laying down a railway. This strip of land will be under the jurisdiction of Manitoba and subject to its rule. The Borden government has only accomplished the part of the settlement that was easy, that practically settled itself, by help of a big money bribe at the expense of the other provinces. Manitoba has been ready for three years to accept the territorial terms proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but it wouldn't have been good form to accept from a Grit government what is readily accepted from a Tory government. There is no mention of the settlement of the school question in the new territory. A future bone of contention is allowed to remain. The Nationalists of Quebec have not yet put up the expected "kick" in regard to the schools. They seems to derive some comfort from the knowledge that the same conditions will obtain in the new territory as in older Manitoba, where Premier Roblin "winks at the existence of schools that are sectarian save in name only." A settlement is a settlement that settles, not one that leaves a burning question unsettled, which, in the interests of all parties concerned, should be definitely disposed of one way or another and all grounds of harrassing and pernicious dispute removed.

Two of the supporters of the Borden government had the temerity to question the merits of Canada's national arm, and Hon. Col. Sam Hughes, drew a bead on them with the Ross Rifle. It isn't safe to disparage the Ross Rifle in Hon. Sam's hearing; he has a patriotic tenderness for the made-in-Canada rifle, the "best arm in the world."

MAY A DOG TAKE ONE BITE?

Are you aware of the fact that a dog is entitled to one bite?" asked Judge Morson in his court, of a man who had had a piece bitten out of his coat by another man's dog, and sought damages. "Had the dog torn another person's coat before, the owner would be liable," said the judge, giving judgment in favour of the owner of the dog. The man, whose Sunday overcoat was damaged, as he thought, to the extent of $20, must bear that loss, and also the costs of futile court proceedings. If that's the law, we desire to express our concurrence in the celebrated opinion of Mr. Bumble that "the law's a ass—a idjit."—Toronto Star.

This is rare reasoning. It adopts as the essence of our law a principle that, if generally applied, would lead to anarchy. On this principle a man would be entitled to commit one crime with impunity. He might commit murder, but if it was his first murder, according to Judge Morson, he would be within his rights and free from punishment. The dog nuisance is sufficiently exasperating without such judgments from the bench lending its intensity and giving the predatory dog free rein.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If Ontario's added territory be likened to a pan, the handle of the pan is in the hands of Manitoba.

If Ontario extends the provincial railway to a port on Hudson Bay, we shall have the anomaly of having an Ontario railway lying in another province.

New York is in great luck. It has heard two concerts from Volt's Mendelssohn choir and the large supply of eggs has brought down the wholesale price to 29 cents.

Mr. Maguau, M.P., of Sturgeon Falls, says the Ontario Government lacks push. The London Advertiser, in view of the boundary settlement, thinks it also lacks pull.

What Hon. George E. Foster said when stumping for the Government in South Renfrew:

"When Sir Wilfrid Laurier asks you to elect George P. Graham instead of Dr. Maloney, he is asking you to inject the one drop of poison into the veins of the Government in order evetually, to destroy that Government. If you elect George P. Graham it will be considered everywhere as a blow to the new Government. Let the new Government show you what it can do before you strike it such a blow."

Yet the Conservative papers claim that the election of Hon. G. P. Graham and the defeat of the Government candidate had no political significance.

WHOLESALE PETROLEA AXE-WIELDING

The Energetic Application of the Spoils System

PETROLEA, FEB. 28.—Seldom, if ever, has public indignation been aroused to such a state in Petrolea as it is at the present time over the action of Mr. J. E. Armstrong, M.P., for East Lambton, in making a whole sale dismissal of Government officials in Petrolea. Alleged political partisanship is the reason given for most of the dismissals, and although investigations have been asked for no attention has been paid to the communications. Mr. Armstrong is responsible for the discharge of Mr. C. Fleming, Inland Revenue Officer, who has been in the service over fourteen years, and has passed the civil service examination, but notwithstanding this his request for an investigation has not been acknowledged. Mr. James McCort is Mr. Fleming's successor, and he is a well-known Conservative over seventy years of age.

Mr. Armstrong, it is alleged, promised nearly every Government position in the riding to his active supporters, and they are now demanding their reward. The injustice of Mr. Armstrong's action is keenly felt by both Conservatives and Reformers, as it is the first time in the history of Petrolea that the political axe has ever been felt. All the dismissals have been made without the sanction of the local Conservative Association, which has held numerous meetings to discuss the matter, but owing to the President and several other members of the Executive strongly objecting to any changes being made no action was taken by them.

Mr. B. Edwards received the appointment as Collector of Customs, to replace Mr. J. A. Peat, who received his dismissal yesterday. Mr. Edwards is about twenty-one years of age. He was formerly baggeman on the T. & N. O. Railway at North Cobalt. Mr. J. C. Waddell is reported to be an applicant for the position of Bounty Inspector. Mr. C. Collins has been appointed Landing Waiter, to succeed Mr. J. A. Craise, who was dismissed several weeks ago. Mr. Collins is over the age limit and is without any experience. He has been a very active Conservative worker for years.

CONFINE PRIVY COUNCIL APPEALS TO CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTIONS

The whole question of appeals from the courts of Canada to the Imperial Privy Council is again up for discussion. It ought to be faced steadily, confidently, and settled for a generation. As it stands now it is full of danger, not only to justice as between litigants, but also to good feeling as between Canada and Britain. The opinion is gaining strength that justice is not served by appealing questions of Canadian law touching property and civil rights to an Imperial court whose interpretations of statutes are affected by circumstances and situations quite out of touch with Canadian conditions. Words even in statutes are only symbols of ideas, and it has been too often seen that the change from the new world to the old, from the Supreme Court of Canada in Ottawa to the Privy Council in London, changes the ideas which the same words convey when a statute governing matters of public interest has to be interpreted.

Three cases are cited by The Ottawa Journal in a recent editorial questioning the advisability of continuing the right of appeal to the Privy Council:

"In all these cases it was a question of vested right against the public weal. One suit was that of Toronto city against the Toronto Street Railway Company, in which the apparently plain intent and plain English of the Street Railway contract there to give to the city authorities certain rights was upset by the Privy Council after the city had won in Canadian courts. Another case was that of the ten million dollars which Canada has been condemned to pay to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company after the Supreme Court of Canada had decided in favour of the Government. A third case is that just decided against the city of Winnipeg, giving the Winnipeg Street Railway Company power to put up poles and wires in the streets to carry electricity for sale for power and lighting purposes, although the company has no franchise to do so. This although the Manitoba Supreme Court had decided in favour of Winnipeg. The Journal has always hitherto been an advocate of retaining to Canadians the right to appeal to the Privy Council. We confess that these cases, coming within a couple of years, shake our idea of the desirability of the option of going to the Privy Council."

The Globe does not go so far as its Conservative contemporary. The right to appeal ought not to be cut off, but it ought to be confined to constitutional questions. All questions involving the law of property and civil rights, as the cases cited by The Journal, should be decided finally by the Canadian courts. Questions of a constitutional character, involving rights as between the Provinces and the Dominion, might well go for final judgment to the Imperial Privy Council.

The case of Toronto and the Toronto Railway Company illustrates the danger complained of. The Canadian statute conceived the agreement as a "contract," while the law Lords interpreted it as an "enterprise." No Canadian court familiar with the Canadian situation did make or would have made that mistake.

A serious danger threatens in the possible action of a Provincial Legislature passing legislation to minimise the hurtful effects of Privy Council decisions. This, for instance, might be done by the Legislature of Manitoba in the Winnipeg case, of which complaint is now made. As Mr. Justice Riddell, in a well-known mining case, said, there is no appeal from such Provincial legislation. But it would be inimical to public interests if such incidents became common. The wisest and most dignified course would be not to abolish the right of appeal to the Privy Council, but to confine such right to constitutional questions. In matters of property and civil rights the courts of Canada should be the place of last resort.—The Globe.

ONTARIO'S RAILWAY MANITOBA'S GAIN

Extension of Ontario Provincial Railway Subject to Manitoba

TORONTO, FEB. 27—Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature, when interviewed on the Manitoba boundary settlement, freely expressed their views, hey were at one in censuring the boundary arrangement as being anything from unbusinesslike to childish.

Hugh Munro, M.P.P., Glengarry, was of the opinion that the projection of Ontario in a five-mile strip through Manitoba would be likely to lead to all kinds of interprovincial difficulties. It would have been better had Ontario been extended right up to the Churchill River, the river then being followed as a boundary to the Hudson Bay. Both provinces could then have ports on this river.

Manitoba Gets the Benefit.

"One feature seems to have escaped notice, and it strikes me as important," said Thomas Marshall, M.P.P. for Monck. "Ontario extends the T. and N. O. into Manitoba, thereby developing that territory. Ontario will spend money in getting business for the extended road, in attractig immigrants, etc. Manitoba reaps the harvest. Ontario bears the expense. Manitoba gets the benefit."

"A childish piece of business," was the opinion of Dr. McQueen, M. P.P., for West Wentworth. "We get something we will never own. We get running rights, nothing more. Premier Whitney's fight contrasts most strikingly with that of Sir Oliver Mowat against Sir John A. Macdonald's administration. A pretty sort of fight the Ontario Government has put up for provincial rights—when compared with Mowat's."

Manitoba Has the Say.

"It looks as if the Province of Ontario is in the same position as any other settler in the Province of Manitoba. The use of that parcel by Ontario would be subject to all the laws of Manitoba from time to time."

Such was he opinion of Mr. E. F. B. Johnston this morning on being asked the meaning of Premier Borden's statement that "the ownership of the land is granted to Ontario, but the Province of Manitoba will have legislative jurisdiction over it."

Such a situation may permit of numerous legal entanglements, not only between the two Provinces, but between citizens of either Province, and between these citizens and the Provincial Governments.

The municipal law of Manitoba, which will govern all communities which spring up on the territory in question, is not the same as Ontario's municipal law. The company laws of the Provinces also differ. As a result companies chartered in Ontario and wishing to locate on this strip of land will require Manitoba's charters, which in some cases, owing to altered conditions, may be difficult to secure. Moreover all business taxes and all license taxes will go to Manitoba.

"The rights of Manitoba to expropriate this land would give rise to a very interesting legal point.

"You can't expropriate as against the Crown," said a well-know legal authority on this question, "but suppose Ontario were to dispose of any part of the five-mile strip running from the easterly boundary of Manitoba to Nelson River, then there might be expropriation."

THE BOUNDARY BILL NOT A FINALITY

Nationalist Wing of the Conservative Government Party Threaten Trouble

OTTAWA, FEB. 28.—The principal features of the text of the Government bill to give effect to the resolution to extend the boundaries of Manitoba, as passed yesterday by the Commons, are first the omission of any clause granting the demands of the Roman Catholic supporters of the Ministry for the continuance of their present rights to separate schools in the part of Keewatin to be added to Manitoba; second, a clause providing for the increase of Manitoba's representation in the Senate from four, as at present, to six; third, a clause exempting the Hudson Bay Company in so far as its lands are concerned, from the Federal restrictions applicable to the disposition of mineral and other lands within the territory annexed; and fourth, a clause bringing the bill into effect by order in Council after the Manitoba Legislature has formally consented to the geographical and financial terms offered.

The omission of any provision in regard to the continuance of separate schools is, of course, the reason for the present revolt of the Nationalists The three French-Canadian Ministers from Quebec are naturally amenable to discipline. They will hold their portfolios and support the bill.

A majority of the Government's French-speaking supporters from Quebec, however, are stubbornly insisting on the fulfillment of their pre-election pledges, and will openly break with the Government on the issue. If the Opposition should, as is probable, move the six months' hoist on the score of constitutional and other objections to the financial terms granted to Manitoba at the expense of the other Provinces of Confederation, the recalcitrants on the Ministerial side will, to be consistent have to vote against the Government on this amendment, though for different reasons. The Government would, however, still have sufficient majority to force the bill through if it so desires. It is still believed, however, that the Government is not desirous of having the threatened split in its ranks materialise this session, and the final passage of the bill may be left over until next year. A protest from any of the other Provinces in regard to the financial terms or delay in securing the consent of the Manitoba Legislature would furnish convenient excuses for postponing the consideration of the bill until next session. Meanwhile the Government would like time to strengthen its position in the country and placate, if possible, the recalcitrants by promises, patronage and other devices

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

All Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ellington, Me. — "For seven years I suffered from ulceration. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and go would hardly walk. I thought I had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at these times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, has my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl." —Mrs. DELIA BARRAGER, Ellington, Mo.

Vivid Story On 12th Anniversary Of Battle Of Paardeberg

By One Who Fought There

It is just twelve years since Cronje, peering from the shelter of the trees which flanked his laager on the right bank of the Modder at Kondosrand Drift, realised for the first time the hopelessness of his position and that his hurried flight from his impregnable position at Magersfontein had ended only in his being trapped as securely as any rat in a steel stage.

Overnight, he had thrown away his last chance at escape, for had he chosen to abandon his wagons and impedimenta and cross the drift, he might have succeeded in making his way eastwards to Bloemfontein. But stubborn to the last, he disregarded the advice of his better-informed subordinates, and so it came that when Sunday morning, February 18th, 1900, dawned, it found French's hard-riding cavalry thundering on his right flank, while the Ninth Division, by a supreme effort in which they covered 46 miles in two night marches, had succeeded in arriving at the opportune time to cut off his retreat on the left bank of the river. There was nothing to do but fight or surrender, and Cronje, with all his faults, was not of the surrendering type. How well he fought until, battered by shell and rifle fire without, and tortured by inconceivable smell and foulest of insanitary conditions within, he eventually hoisted the White Flag, is now a matter of history.

Supreme Effort of 10 Days' Engagement.

Those who hail the 27th of February as the one day worthy of remembrance in the operations around Paardeberg, in that it signals the anniversary of the grim old Boer chieftain's surrender, should not lose sight of the fact that the determined advance of the Canadian regiment which wiped out for all time the nineteen-year-old stain of Majuba Hill, was the supreme effort of a ten days' engagement which swelled the casualty returns by some 2,000 names.

First Canadian Contingent.

So much for the result, now for a few details of the events which led up to it, and in which the Nineteenth Brigade — Smith-Dorrien's fighting brigade—played such a conspicuous part. The brigade consisted of the 2nd Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, the 1st Shropshire Light Infantry, the 1st Gordon Highlanders, and last, but not least, our own representatives from the land of the Maple, the Royal Canadian Regiment, better known as the First Canadian Contingent. As a composite unit, it had no lengthy history, for as a matter of fact it was only formed one week before the first shot was fired at Paardeberg; its birthplace, appropriately enough, being at Maple Leaf Camp. Before it was disbanded, however, in the following July, it had helped to make history. It had marched from Graspan to Pretoria, with many an incidental excursion on the way; it had taken part in forty days of continuous fighting and four general engagements, without tasting the bitters of a reverse and wherever the fighting was heaviest, the graves of its fallen bore eloquent witness that the Nineteenth Brigade had contributed its proportionate toll of the slain.

Head off Cronje in Mad Flight.

It was this brigade then that Lord Roberts called on to make a final effort and head off Cronje on his mad flight to the capital of the Orange Free State. Already the men had performed one night march from Jacobsdal to Klip Drift, but scarcely had they arrived there when the order came to fall in again. At four on Saturday afternoon the force started off on the final trek to the spot where Cronje had halted for the night. Ahead lay a march of 24 miles, most of it through soft sand into which the feet of the men sank deeply. Every now and again, when a temporary halt was made, the wearied troops, who had not slept since Thursday, flung themselves down and snatched a moment's sleep, to fall in the ranks again and once more stagger on when the column resumed its march. To the majority of slumber-starved men taking part in that second successive night march, it seemed a procession of nightmares as they passed deserted farms with their household contents strewn around, dead artillery and cavalry horses, and little groups of men who, too exhausted to move another step, had dropped to the ground. But even 24-mile night marches have an end, and this came at dawn when a fringe of trees, marking the Modder River, loomed up, and the column came to a halt.

Highland Brigade Hard at It.

There was little rest, however, for the wearied troops. Ere the sun had risen over the tree-tops, the pop-pop of rifle fire, interspersed occasionally with the deep boom of heavy guns told of the proximity of the enemy. Already the Highland Brigade was hard at it, and with the philosophic knowledge that our turn would soon come, we bided our time. An hour later we were moved to a low kopje some distance east of the Modder, where from its rock-crowned eminence, the panorama of battle unfolded itself.

Everything is Far Off.

Not a great deal of the life and death struggle going on was to be seen, for your modern battle is the furthest removed from the spectacular. It is hard to work up a high degree of interest watching through powerful field-glasses little khaki dots running apparently aimlessly here and there, or crouched at irregular intervals on the sun-scorched veldt. Even when, now and again, a little figure gives a grotesque jump like a stage marionette, to fall motionless it is hard to realize, when one is two or three miles away, that a human life has been blotted out. So scientific has modern war become that the soldier often finds a difficulty in realizing that he is taking part in an engagement.

To Support of Highland Brigade.

Half an hour later brought a spurring A.D.C. with the news that the Highland Brigade was barely holding its own, and so three companies of the right half battalion were ordered to its support. Water bottles were replenished, accoutrements adjusted and the men swung from behind the shelter of the friendly kopje. Ahead two miles away, lay a fringe of trees running at right angles to the river to the left, the sinuous Modder, its banks defined by dwarfing verdure rushed along; to the right a low ridge of kopjes, which gradually descended until they lost themselves in the flat expanse of veldt, marked the extreme flank of the advance. It was not until these were left behind that the advance was characterized by anything out of the ordinary.

Dead Men Lying in Clusters.

Then as the line emerged into the open, like the singing of a million angry bees, the bullets zipped and pinged overhead. The enemy's aim was bad, but grim evidence that it had not always been so was there in plenty. For now the baked veldt was splashed with the color of varied tartans—Black Watch, Seaforth, and Argyll and Sutherland. Here they lay in ones and twos, and sometimes, as a tribute to Dutchman's marksmanship, in clusters. And some were writhing in agony, and some were lying unconscious, and not a few turned their tense, pain-drawn faces upward, and cheered as we passed by or stepped gingerly over them.

What Saps the Courage.

There is nothing which saps the courage or unnerves the boldest more than a long advance over open ground to reinforce an attack that has failed. On every side you see stricken comrades; few of whom even know from which direction the hurt come. You see the chum of a lifetime throw up his hands and spin around, to fall, dry-lipped and motionless; you see the officer leading you give a sudden gurgle and totter at the knees, the while he tears at his throat laid open by an expanding bullet. You see all these things, and yet not once do you gain a glimpse of the enemy, who is working all this havoc—that is, if they are Boers. You are ready and anxious to deliver your fire, but there is nothing to fire at. To say the least, this silent death that picks out a man here and there is uncanny, and tests the nerves of the imaginative almost to the breaking strain.

Hellish Fire Smote the Line.

A final spurt brought us to the firing line, where prone dropped every man. Here was the first opportunity afforded of learning how the regiments were mixed up, for Seaforth lay next to Argyll, and Black Watch intermingled with both. Not a glimpse of the enemy was to be seen but ample evidence of his watchfulness was forthcoming in the hellish fire which smote the line on the front and left flank, and thinned the ranks with appalling monotony. As for the men they lay silent and wondered what it was all about. Some emptied their pouches with random shots at the fringe of trees, five hundred yards ahead, and some, with head buried in the sand, slept, for men who have not closed an eye for two nights are not always particular where or how they sleep.

Killed While They Slept.

Not a few of those who closed their eyes in slumber never opened them again in this world, for the deadly, accurate fire of the hidden marksmen took toll of sleeper and watcher alike. Over our heads played the guns of a couple of field batteries; played with a bad aim, too, we thought, as shell after shell came hurtling in amongst the ranks. Later we learned that the gunners had mistaken us for the Boers, but death is none the less easier for coming from the hand of friends instead of foes.

Kitchener Resolved on Immediate Attack.

From then until four o'clock the battle was waged without either side having an advantage. Then Lord Kitchener, chafing at any further delay, resolved on an immediate attack, confident that the bayonet would succeed where the bullet had failed. Accordingly Col. Aldworth with four companies of the Cornwalls, were sent across the river, and there, at a convenient point, preparations were made for a final assault. The Colonel offered a five-pound note to the first man of his command inside the trenches. It was never won. From the outset the task was a hopeless one, but that did not deter the men from following their leader, or the Canadians from joining in the charge. Eight hundred yards stretched between a low ridge and the Boer position, but the intervening space was as destitute of cover as a billiard table. It is doubtful if five times the force that took part in that forlorn hope could have won through. However, Aldworth had his orders, and, well in front of the leading company, he showed the way.

Holocaust of Leaden Hail.

Directly the line of khaki topped the ridge, a furious holocaust of leaden hail commenced. Men beat their heads and staggered on as though facing a blizzard. The fire of four thousand rifles wielded by the best shots in the world was concentrated on the attacking force, and nothing human could live against it. Aldworth hit first on the ankle and then on the head, died while he whooped his men on. Both officers of the leading company fell a moment afterwards. The left section was wiped completely out, every man being killed or wounded, and the men leaderless, and more than decimated, flung themselves down where they could. To reply to the fire was practically out of the question. Every movement, every change of position brought forth a volley of shots from the well-concealed Boers.

Wounded Men Hit by More Bullets.

The wounded were the greatest sufferers, for as they writhed in their agony they frequently received additional hurts, cases of men being hit four, five, and even six times being quite frequent. One man was hit eleven times, and then lived to tell the story. Despite this fearful leaden hail, the stretcher-bearers, nearly all Canadians, darted here and there on their errand of mercy. Certainly none who saw their work that afternoon would refuse them the highest place on the roll of fame. Fortunately the evening came on apace and put an end to the strife, though the sufferings of the wounded, many of whom lay on the field through the bitter night until the next morning, were pitiable in the extreme.

Casualty of 1,000 on First Day.

Thus ended the first day's fighting at Paardeberg, which resulted in a casualty list of 1,000 for the British without producing any corresponding effect on the well entrenched Dutchmen. How Lord Roberts changed the plan of attack, preferring to try less spectacular but surer methods to encompass Cronje's surrender is an old story. How after days of work in the trenches followed by nights of arduous outpost duty, the Nineteenth Brigade threaded their way up to within five hundred yards of the enemy, has also been told many times.

Bloodiest Next at Magersfontein.

None the less, the story of those intrepid companies of the Canadian regiment, who worked their way up to the wire entanglements on the morning of February 27, and held on to the ground they had won in the teeth of a murderous fire waiting for the dawn to finish their task with the bayonet, is a narration which will never lose anything of its vivid interest by repetition. With the exception of Magersfontein, Paardeberg was the bloodiest struggle in the western field of operations, and its name will always stand as a lasting memorial to Canadian valour.

Teacher Cured of Barber's Itch

Tells of Cures Among His Pupils That Were Remarkable

Raw, Inflamed, Itching Skin is Soothed and Healed by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Barber's Itch is a form of Ringworm, which, when once started, is most annoying and unsightly, and most difficult to cure. Barbers often refuse to shave anyone having this disease, for fear of passing it on to other customers.

But you can cure Barber's Itch and keep the skin wonderfully soft and healthy by applying Dr. Chase's Ointment. Just read what this teacher has to say about the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Chas. C. Poirier, Upper Carraquet, N. B., writes: "Two years ago while teaching at Shippegan I caught Barber's Itch. A friend told me Dr. Chase's Ointment would cure me, as it had him. When I went for a box I thought it dear, but when I found how good it was I thought it cheap.

"Not only was I cured by that single box, but it also cured two of my pupils, and this too quickly to be believed. One of them, a girl, had a running sore on the chin, which the doctor had tried in vain to cure. The other had a sore on the ear; water running out of it all the time. I can certify to the cure of these cases."

Wherever there is itching skin or a sore that refuses to heal you can apply Dr. Chase's Ointment with positive assurance that the results will be entirely satisfactory. The soothing, healing power of this great ointment is truly wonderful. One a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Cream of Corn Soup

Add one-half cupful of Tillson's Rolled Oats to one can of corn and three cupfuls of water. Simmer thirty minutes. Press through sieve. Add this to three cupfuls scalded milk. Mix well, season with salt, paprika and celery extract. Add one cupful of hot cream and serve.

Some Errors Corrected

1. Error: "All Rolled Oats Taste Alike."

This needs correction. Tillson's Rolled Oats taste like no other oats. The delicious, distinctive taste of Tillson's is due to the exclusive pan drying process, during which none of the aroma or flavor of the oats is allowed to escape. Tillson's Oats are the only oats dried by this method.

2. Error: "All Rolled Oats Look Alike."

This needs correction. Examine Tillson's carefully. You will discover that the flakes are the thinnest and most uniform you ever saw. They are also unbroken and free from meal dust.

3. Error: "All Oats Cook Alike."

This needs correction. Tillson's Oats cook thoroughly in 15 minutes. This is due to the remarkable thinness of Tillson's flakes. As no other oats are rolled so thin, no other can be cooked so quickly.

Rolled oats are an important article of diet. You owe it to yourself to have the best the market affords. Try Tillson's.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Mrs. Sydney Revoy, died August 17th, 1911, aged 25 years:

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is still,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled;
The smile that cheered a happy home
The wife so kind and true
Lies sleeping in a silent grave
As we all have to do.

And she, aware of Death's cruel sting
A faithful life did live,
For God can easy take away
The life that He did give.
A kindly husband she left behind,
Who felt the sting of grief,
Whose love of her who was so dear
Still brings his heart relief.

Through all her pains she always smiled
With a smile of heavenly mirth,
And when the angels called her home
She smiled farewell to earth.
There was an angel band in heaven
That was not quite complete;
God called upon dear Lizzie
To fill the vacant seat.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Peaceful in thy grave so low,
Thou no more shall join our number
Thou no more our sorrows know;
Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled,
And in heaven with joy to greet thee
Where no farewell tears are shed.

'Tis hard to break the tender cord
When love has found the heart,
'Tis hard, so hard, to speak the words:
We must on earth forever part.
Dearest, loved one, we have laid thee
In the peaceful grave's embrace,
But thy memory will be cherished
Till we see thy heavenly face.

—A Friend.

HAY AT $15

The snow is about fifteen feet deep in some places," a farmer said on the market this morning. He had come in with a load of hay and had had a rough passage almost over the entire road. In many places the road is at an angle of forty-five degrees, and farmers have, in many cases, been forced to get out of cutters to avoid upsetting. Drawing hay into town is even more precarious, although the heavy traffic over the main highways of late has been helping to settle them. There was quite an offering of hay on the market this morning. Some one said it must have been the fine weather that brought the farmers out this morning.

"No so," replied another; "it's the mighty dollar".

Office Has Been Enlarged

In order to cope with the increasing business, it has been found necessary to alter and enlarge the office of Messrs. Turnbull's establishment. Whereas hitherto it was but a single story structure, admittig only of the work of the bookkeeper and cashier being carried on therein, it has now been transformed into a double-storey office. The first floor will contain a private office and a cloak room and the second an office for the cashier, the bookkeeper and the card writer. In addition, many improvements have been added and the painting which has been done, gives the building a decidedly business-like appearance.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

A FRIEND OF MINE, in walking through a shop one day, came to a narrow doorway, just as another woman was about to pass through it in the opposite direction. My friend politely stepped to one side to allow the other woman to pass, but as she did so the other woman also moved in the same direction. The first woman moved again, and again the other woman dodged at just the same instant.

Thinking that this had gone on long enough, my friend stood still and said with great dignity, "Madame, if you will stand on one side or the other, I will endeavour to pass you." At this moment the floor walker caught sight of her and sprang to the rescue, pointing out to the astonished lady that the woman whom she had had so much difficulty in attempting to pass, was no other than her own reflection, as she was facing a mirror.

Now this is a very amusing and unusual experience, and was probably due partially to the lady's nearsightedness, but I doubt if there is one of us, no matter how keen-eyed, who has not sometime, in similar wise, caught sight of himself in an unexpected mirror, and for at least an instant, completely failed to recognize himself.

And, if so much can be true in regard to our outer selves which we see daily, and indeed many times daily, in our mirrors, tell me, friends, how would it be with our inner selves, our personalities, our individualities, if we could for an instant catch sight of them—"as ithers see them."

Arnold Bennett has a fascinating essay along these lines, in which he quaintly asks, "Has it ever struck you that there is a mysterious individual going around, walking the streets, calling at houses for tea, chatting, laughing, grumbling, arguing, and that all your friends know him and have long since added him up and come to a definite conclusion about him — without saying more than a chance, cautious word to you; and that that person is you?

Isn't that a piquant thought, and a true on?

Perhaps the "you" which other people know is more virtuous and more interesting than the "you" whom you yourself know. And then again, perhaps he is the opposite. But in either case he is a totally different person. Would you not give a great deal to meet him as you meet other people? I'm sure I would.

And wouldn't we learn a lot?

Of course, we can never meet him or her face to face as we meet our outer selves in the mirror, but I think we can, to a certain extent, make the acquaintance of this elusive personage, if we will make the necessary mental effort.

And I think it would be a healthful exercise.

Try it some day.

Try to—

"Just stand aside and watch yourself go by;
Think of yourself as 'he' instead of 'I.'
Pick flaws; find fault; forget the man is you.
And strive to make your estimate ring true.
The faults of others then will dwarf and shrink,
Love's chain grow stronger by one mighty link,
When you with 'he' as substitute for 'I'
Have stood aside and watched yourself go by.'
—Strickland W. Gillilan.

Father, Mother, Sister, Brother, All Should Use Parisian Sage

Prevents Baldness—Banishes Dandruff—Stops Falling Hair and Itching Scalp.

PARISIAN SAGE is a family hair tonic and dressing that will do much good in every home.

The man who uses PARISIAN SAGE if only occasionally will never grow bald. Baldness is caused by dandruff germs which dig down into the roots of the hair, devour its nourishment and cause the root to die and the hair to fall and thin out.

PARISIAN SAGE is a scientific hair remedy that not only kills the dandruff germs, but gives the hair root just the same nourishment that nature gives it.

PARISIAN SAGE first kills the germs; then nourishes the weakened hair root and causes a growth of healthy hair.

This same nourishment (PARISIAN SAGE) causes the hair to grow vigorous, which means that the hair becomes full of life and lustre, and grows radiant and beautiful.

Thousands are wasting time, losing hair and growing bald because they are using superficial tonics. While they may clean the scalp and make it feel refreshed, they do not get to the root of the hair where the real destroyer of hair, the pernicious dandruff germs, thrives and multiplies.

MONEY BACK DANDRUFF REMOVER

Try PARISIAN SAGE for all hair trouble; it means death to the germs; life to the hair. It is pleasant to use and so harmless that it can be used by every member of the family from the oldest to the little tot.

Get a 50 cent bottle to-day, and if you are not satisfied that it is just as good as claimed, your money back without any squibbling. Sold by Wm. Madill and druggists everywhere. Girl with Auburn hair on every carton and bottle.

HEAVY FINES IMPOSED IN THE ILLICIT FISHING CASE

Case Was Disposed of in Police Court This Morning---Mr. G. N. Gordon Pleaded Guilty on Behalf of Defendants, Who Were Absent.

The case of Walter Heron, Tidy Heron and John Heron, charged with illicit fishing, was disposed of in the police court this morning. W. Heron with five charges registered against him, was the first case to be dealt with.

Mr. G. N. Gordon pleaded guilty to the charges on the defendant's behalf. The latter was not present in court. When questioned as to the reason for their non appearance, Mr. Gordon stated that he had intended asking for an adjournment, in order that he might better prepare a case. He had only received about fifteen minutes' notice prior to the opening of court, and therefore did not feel disposed to go on with the case under those circumstances. He was prepared to plead guilty on recommendation of certain findings of the court. Captain Hunter Chief Inspector for the Game and Fisheries Department, expressed himself as being satisfied that the ends of justice would be met in this manner.

Magistrate Dumble was of the opinion that the defendants should have been present in court and intimated that if such were the case he would impose the heaviest penalty possible and would make their fines payable forthwith.

"There is no meaner act of piracy in the land than illicit fishing," said his Worship.

"Well, I didn't do the fishing," interposed the counsel for the defence.

A fine of $70 and costs was imposed, covering the seven charges against the defendants. The fines were proportioned as follows:

Walter Heron, with five charges against him, $10 for each charge, with costs attached; Tidy Heron, one charge, $10; John Heron, one charge, $10, costs added in all cases.

The fines amounted in all to $70 and the costs $17.50. The charges were based upon the number of fish found in the possession of the offenders, one charge being laid for each fish so found. There are still seventeen charges pending in the case.

The prosecution was represented by Captain Thomas of Belleville, Chief Inspector of the Game and Fisheries Department of Ontario, Captain Carson, Fisheries Overseer of the patrol boat and Inspector Watt.

little over a week ago, were forwarded to the Fisheries Department at Toronto, and eventually found their way into the Sick Children's Hospital.

"I might say, for the edification of those present," said this Worship, in a brief resume of the case, "that the existence of this evil is thoroughly known to the people of the city. The trade has been carried on for several years by men who are selfishly disposed to incur the risk. There are certain seasons of the year when people are allowed to fish on the back lakes for their own private consumption, but not for commercial purposes at ayn time. There is also a certain class of people in this city who buy these fish, knowing as they do, that the sale of these fish is a direct violation of the Game and Fishery Act. I wish these people were before me to-day. I am sorry that the government, in its generosity, is content with a small fine. But I want the people to know that I will not be satisfied with the smallest fine, but will impose the heaviest penalty on cases that come before me."

Presentation To Mr. G. E. Clarke

The Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club met together last evening at the Belmont Club rooms, the occasion being the coming departure of one of their fellow members, Mr. G. E. Clarke. The evening was spent in an informal manner, a portion of the programme taking the form of a progressive euchre contest. During the course of the evening the following address was presented to Mr. Clarke, accompanied by a beautiful pair of bowls.

Peterborough, 28th Feb., 1912.

Mr. G. E. Clarke, Secretary Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club, Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir and Fellow Bowler,—It is with mingled feelings of regret and pleasure that we learn of your early removal from our city—pain and regret that we are to be deprived of your genial companionship, but pleasure that you are receiving a promotion consistent with your talents.

Only those whose privilege it has been to know and associate with you can appreciate the loss you will be, not only to our Club, but to the community at large. When ever duty, pleasure or sport has called you, your estimable qualities have proclaimed you "the white-headed boy," and although your hair is black (and may it long remain so) we have always found you "white" clear through.

It will be difficult to fill your place.

We feel confident your nature will never let you forget the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club, and a reminder is not necessary, but just as an evidence of our good will, which is not measured by the intrinsic value, we ask you to accept the accompanying pair of bowls, and may they always, when handled by you, lie near the kitty.

In conclusion, we wish you long life, unalloyed happiness, and unbounded prosperity in this life, and afterwards the "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Signed on behalf of the Club,
T. BRIGHTMAN,
President.
D. H. MOORE,
for the Secretary.

Mr. Clarke made a feeling reply, and thanked his many associates, whose kindly feelings towards him would always remain vivid in his memory. Mr. Clarke leaves for Forest, Ont., on Monday next, where he will assume the position of Manager of the Bank of Commerce.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of a handsome napkin ring to Mr. Clarke, with the monogram of the Belmont Club inscribed upon it. President Fee made the presentation, which was preceded by a short address expressive of the regret which the Club entertained towards the departing member.

MISSIONARY CONFERENCE CONCLUDED

The Missionary Conference at St. John's church, which commenced with special services on Sunday, and was continued on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, was brought to a successful and enthusiastic closing last night.

In the afternoon Mr. R. W. Allin, of Toronto, gave his final address on "Missions in Canada," dealing with the block, "From Sea to Sea," and his interesting remarks were followed with close attention. Afterwards a series of lantern slides of China were given, a large number of children being present.

In the evening Mr. Allin gave a comprehensive and interesting address on the mission work of the Canadian Church in Japan, China, and India, at the conclusion of which Rev. Canon Davidson expressed the gratitude of the people of Peterborough to the speakers from outside whose addresses and instructions, he remarked, would result in a new era in mission work in this city.

Afterwards, a men's conference was held, at which a lively discussion on missions took place, with some seventy-five men present. The leading speaker was Mr. D. M. Ross of Toronto, the Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. Considerable enthusiasm was aroused and the meeting was a thoroughly successful one.

The four speakers have gone to Kingston, where a similar conference will commence to-day.

Although there was considerable expense in connection with the local conference, no collection was taken up.

Next Meeting Of Ad. Club

Local business men interested in the newly-organized Ad. Club in this city are anticipating an enjoyable and profitable time at the next meeting of the Club, to be held on Tuesday evening, March 5th. Mr. O. H. Ashley, the Advertising Manager of the Toronto Saturday Night, will be the speaker.

The subject of the evening will be "Better Sales and More of Them." Mr. Ashley, after throwing out his suggestions on this topic, will explain to those in attendance, just what the Ad. Club can do for Peterborough.

In connection with the live and progressive Advertising Club in Toronto, of which the local organization is a branch, Mr. Ashley has had much to do, and it is anticipated that he will, from his own experience in the Ad. Club movement, give the local members and others much that is really worth while.

The Club will meet for dinner at 6.15 p.m., after which the speaker of the evening will immediately follow with his address, the meeting being over at 8 o'clock.

Further announcements will be made later.

SHE GAINED 16 LBS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was, in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up. By using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 16 pounds in weight."

Successful Sale

Mr. W. J. Hancock, auctioneer, conducted one of the most successful sales held in this district this year yesterday at the home of Mr. Mat. Stiles, Ennismore. ARENA COMPANY'S STOCK ON LOCAL MARKET

A Portion of the Securities of the Arena Gardens of Toronto to be Offered Through Prominent Montreal and Toronto Houses

MONTREAL, FEB. 29.—(Special.)—The announcement was made in local financial circles to-day that the strong group of Montreal and Toronto capitalists identified with the Arena Gardens of Toronto, Limited, which is to control the big skating rink and summer gardens in Toronto, were likely, at the beginning of next week, to place on the Canadian markets a portion of the stock of the Company for subscription.

The capitalization of the Arena Gardens of Toronto, Limited, includes an issued capital of $250,000 of 7 p.c. Preferred Stock, $250,000 of Common Stock, and $300,000 of thirty-year 6 p.c. Sinking Fund Bonds. Of the capital $250,000 of the 7 p.c. Cumulative Preference Stock will be offered for subscription only, the price being $96 a share and carrying with it a bonus of 40 p.c. of Common Stock.

It is stated that the new Toronto Arena Gardens is being erected by the P. Lyall & Sons Construction Company, and covers a ground area of 334 x 190 feet. The rink will have a seating capacity for over 6000 spectators, as compared with the present seating capacity of 4,000 in the Montreal Arena. For years past Toronto has been badly in need of just such a building in connection with its hockey games, as also for its horse shows, flower shows, food fairs, etc.

It is officially stated that Mr Lawrence Solman, who is well known throughout Canada for his management of theatrical and summer amusements, has accepted the position of managing director of the new Company.

The offering of the stock of the Canadian markets will be made by the International Bank of Canada, Messrs. Pellatt & Pellatt, members Toronto Stock Exchange, and the Crown Trust Company, Montreal.

WHITNEY REPRIMANDED

Mr. Rowell Takes Him to Task for Stand on Boundary

SAYS ONTARIO HAS RIGHTS

Toronto, Feb. 29.—Bristling with argument for and against the terms of settlement of the Ontario-Manitoba boundary question made yesterday afternoon's session of the Legislature by far the most lively and interesting of any since the House opened.

Sir James Whitney, in resuming the debate, referred to Mr. Rowell's statement that the Government had presented the case to Ottawa in a dilatory manner and that it was lacking in force of presentation. "Why, the Ontario members of the Laurier Government turned down in 1908, our resolution, which was couched in the same words that my hon. friend, the leader of the Opposition now uses. He borrowed the language from us."

Sir James remarked that events at Ottawa during the past 48 hours had shown that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was "the chief juggler" in this boundary question all the way through.

Sir James referred to the difference of opinion among naval officers, surveyors and explorer about the relative advantages of Fort Churchill and Port Nelson. He also said that by the boundary settlement Manitoba was getting an additional 178,780 square miles of territory, making her total area 251,832 square miles; Ontario was getting an additional 146,400 square miles, making her total area 407,262 square miles; Quebec was getting the district known as Ungava, 354,000 miles in extent, making the total area of the province 706,000 square miles.

"I have nothing more to say," concluded Sir James. "The position which Ontario occupied has been put before the House fairly. I have shown the steps we took and the obstacles thrown in our way by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The strip of land to Port Nelson has been secured from the Dominion Government and is free of taxation."

Hon. A. G. Mackay made an excellent address. While admitting that there were no legal rights for Ontario's claim in the boundary settlement Mr. MacKay maintained that justice, natural rights, moral rights, equitable rights and every other kind of rights entitled Ontario to press her claims just as forcibly as Manitoba had done.

"These are just as high as legal and technical rights," said he, "and I think that the Government has failed to appreciate the importance of obtaining what is only common justice. We on this side of the House are willing to sink our party differences to get Ontario's rights."

The ex-leader of the Opposition deplored the fact that Ontario would be prevented by the boundary settlement from extending northward for an indefinite distance, as Manitoba could now do. "If you let Manitoba, instead of extending her boundary northward, come in and take part of Ontario's hinterland, why not let Ontario take part of Quebec's hinterland?

"If that argument had been advanced," said Mr. MacKay, "Quebec would have been solid behind Ontario in presenting their respective claims. But, while Manitoba is busy asserting her rights and sending briefs to every member of the Dominion Government, the premier province of Ontario goes shedding tears in her finger in her mouth and tongue in her cheek, apologizing for her very position.

"I don't think Ontario is being properly treated," concluded Mr. MacKay. "I don't care what Sir Wilfrid Laurier says or Mr. Borden says."

E. R. Gamey also participated in the debate.

How to Make Better Cough Syrup than You Can Buy

A Family Supply, Saving $4 and Fully Guaranteed.

Fifteen ounces of cough syrup — as much as you could buy for $2.50—can easily be made at home. You will find nothing that takes hold of an obstinate cough more quickly, usually ending it inside of 24 hours. Excellent, too, for croup, whooping cough, sore lungs, asthma, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, then add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This is just laxative enough to help cure a cough. Also stimulates the appetite, which is usually upset by a cough. The taste is pleasant.

The effect of pine and sugar syrup on the inflamed membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe is now used by thousands of housewives throughout the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

ASKED FAIR PRICE.

Harty Denies That Chats Falls' Figure Was Too High.

Kingston, Feb. 29.—When interviewed, Hon. Wm. Harty denied the statement that he had demanded too much from the Ontario Government for his Chats Falls power holdings. He said no substantial price had ever been offered him for his power interests, and that any figures he may have submitted were with the impression that no results would be forthcoming and events had proved that he was right in his views.

He added: "My belief is that, until the last two or three years when the knowledge of the value of power has become so much greater, I do not believe that I would have been able to sell at five or ten thousand dollars if I had put such a price on my share of the holding."

He expressed pleasure at the prospect of the Ontario Government taking over his interests and favored the proposed expropriation proceedings.

Going Ahead With Expropriation.

Ottawa, Feb. 29.—The Hydro-Electric Commission has taken the necessary steps by filing plans, etc., under the Public Works Act of 1910 to vest in the Ontario Government the property known as Chats Rapids, and likely to be needed by the city of Ottawa. Proceedings to ascertain the value to be paid will be taken in due course.

R. A. Pringle, K.C., is acting for Hon. Mr. Harty, and D. O'Connor, to whom the Government sold the falls for a trifle.

NASAL CATARRH

Responsible for Much Deafness, Hoarseness, Bronchitis and Stomach Trouble.

Medicated Air Will Cure

These are common diseases, but not less dangerous and difficult to cure on that account. In our climate the weather changes quickly. We are careless. Disease attacks us before we know it. A large majority of our people have nose, lung, or throat troubles, and find it hard to get cured.

It's remarkable with what tenacity both the medical profession and the laity adhere to the old theory that these diseases can be reached and combated by dosing. And this despite the fact that failure to cure in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred attends this mode of treatment.

STOMACH MEDICINE CAN'T CURE

At best it is a roundabout way of trying to reach the disease which is in the air passages of the throat, nose, bronchial tubes and lungs. Leave the stomach alone—use a remedy that air will carry into the minutest air cells into the tiniest cavities of the affected organs.

LIQUID REMEDIES DANGEROUS

Doctors say only "Catarrhozone" can cure—you inhale it along with the air you breath—it goes where the living disease germs are gnawing into your system—it kills these germs—it heals, soothes. It CURES.

CATARRHOZONE GUARANTEED.

Wouldn't it be wise to use Catarrhozone now—to-day—and be cured permanently?

You can send the soothing vapor of the pine woods, the richest balsams and healing essences, right to the cause of your trouble by inhaling Catarrhozone.

Little drops of wonderful curative power are distributed through the whole breathing apparatus in two seconds.

Like a miracle, that's how Catarrhozone works in bronchitis, catarrh colds, and irritable throat. You simply breath its oily, fragrant vapor, and every trace of congestion and disease flees as before fire.

So safe, infants can use it; so sure to cure, doctors prescribe it, so beneficial in preventing winter ills, no person can afford to do without Catarrhozone. Used in thousands of cases without failure. Try it yourself! 25c, 50c, $1.00 sizes. Sold by all dealers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

ASQUITH IS HELPLESS

He Fails to Avert Strike of the Coal Miners

THE MEN ARE UNSHAKEN

London, Feb. 29.—After negotiations lasting a week, the Government last night in an official communication admits its failure to stave off a national coal strike. True, the negotiations will be resumed to-day, but little is expected from these.

The deadlock is graver than anticipated. It had been supposed that the greatest hostility would arise from the Welsh mine owners and public opinion was veering in favor of the miners, who, it was thought, would be satisfied with the concession of the principle of a minimum wage, leaving the adjustment of the detail to subsequent arbitration or negotiation. It is now seen that the miners themselves are placing the greatest obstacle in the way of a peaceful solution by insisting upon their own interpretation of the terms of the minimum wage.

A meeting of the Cabinet has been called for to-day to discuss the Government's policy, in view of the failure to avert a strike, and it is expected that an important statement concerning the situation will be made to Parliament. The general expectancy is that the Government will introduce a minimum wage bill, and there is also some talk of the intention of the crown to purchase some of the collieries in Wales, so that henceforth it will be impossible to jeopardize the navy's supply of Welsh coal.

By to-night nearly a million miners will have ceased work. The best authorities, however, are strongly of the opinion that the strike will be of short duration.

It is this aspect of the situation which renders the outlook almost hopeless. At the same time it is felt that the Government's efforts have not been wasted. The Government has secured the assent of 60 per cent. of the mine-owners of the country to the principle of a minimum wage, thus greatly facilitating its task should it be deemed advisable to resort to legislative enforcement of the minimum scale. According to opinion in the lobbies of Parliament last night, this will be the next step, should the conferences which are to be resumed to-day show that the deadlock is inseperable.

Breaking the rule of secrecy and silence which has heretofore been rigidly observed during the course of the negotiations, an official statement was issued by the Government regarding the proposals submitted by the Prime Minister to the representatives of the owners and miners.

Good Roads' Officers.

Toronto, Feb. 29.—"This has been the best convention of the Good Roads Association I have ever attended," said W. H. Pugsley at the closing session yesterday afternoon.

Election of officers was the concluding business. A. M. Rankin, M.P.P., Collins Bay, was unanimously elected honorary president. Major Kennedy, Dixie, had no opponent and was elected president. N. Verrayles, Belleville, and W. H. Pugsley were nominated for vice-presidents. Mr. Pugsley withdrew in favor of Mr. Verrayles. Col. J. E. Farewell, Whitby, was made hon. secretary, and G. S. Henry, York County, elected secretary-treasurer. The foregoing with the following five delegates will form the new executive: J. A. Sandegson, Leeds and Grenville; C. R. Wheelock, Dufferin; Dr. Fairbanks, Lambton; N. W. MacKay, St. Thomas, and S. L. Squires, Waterford.

James Armitage, Dunrobin, and W. C. Bush, Port Dalhousie, made brief addresses on county and township roads.

The assessment on counties was changed from $25, as fixed on Tuesday, to $15.

Roblin Well Pleased.

Winnipeg, Feb. 29.—Premier Roblin expressed satisfaction at the announcement made regarding Manitoba's boundaries.

The additional revenue, Mr Roblin stated, would be devoted in part to complete and perfect the Agricultural College and to develop other educational interests, and also to inaugurate and establish a good roads policy, for which at least $100,000 will be set apart for building and maintaining good roads, while some of the money will be expended in developing and equipping the added territory for communities.

RESOLUTION IS LOST

Hon. Mr. Oliver's Plea For West is Voted Down

HE URGES LOWER RATES

Ottawa, Feb. 29.—By a vote of 88 to 54, a Government majority of 33, the House last night rejected Hon. Mr. Oliver's amendment urging the Government to secure further consideration of a reduction of railway freight rates to meet the grain blockade in the west.

Hon. Mr. Oliver brought up the question of western car shortage on the motion to go into supply. He moved a resolution urging on the Government the desirability of securing for grain shipped to Minneapolis and Duluth for consumption in the United States, the same equality of rates with that shipped to Port Arthur and Fort William, as had already been secured for grain shipped to the former ports in bond for export.

The first effect of the car shortage was a cut of six to eight cents a bushel on the market price. After Dec. 10 panic prices had become the rule, and the loss then would be at least ten cents a bushel. Thirty millions of bushels remaining in the farmers' hands had been damaged by damp and could not go forward because of the blockade. Possibly 15,000,000 bushels of this would be a total loss.

He claimed that the "policy of restriction" adopted by the Government had broken down and had to be revoked, but the change had come too late to save the situation this season.

Hon. George E. Foster wanted to know what was the purpose of the discussion. The first hear of Mr. Oliver's speech had been taken up detailing the natural causes which had been largely responsible for the loss to the western farmer.

"But he can't move a vote of want of confidence in nature," remarked Mr. Foster. "He won't be able to turn nature and providence out of office."

The shortage in coal resulting from the western coal strike, he declared, played a large part in disorganizing the railway traffic. Nevertheless, 108,000 cars were moved in 1911-12, as against only 63,000 in the six weeks' longer season of 1910-11.

"What is the use, I ask," said Mr. Foster, "of my hon. friend drawing all these dark pictures of how providence has maltreated and abused the farmers of the northwest?"

"But he says the Government might have done something. What did he do himself? He had the northwest in his hand. He slept with it by night and walked with it by day. His Government made it their favorite child, and left it in this condition. (Applause.) Then he comes down like a wolf on the fold and asks why an unoffending Minister of Trade and Commerce has not remedied all this."

"If the present Government does not do more to alleviate conditions in the northwest in five years than you did in fifteen," declared Mr. Foster, "turn us out."

"Black Hand" Member Dead.

Kingston, Feb. 29.—The death occurred at the penitentiary of an Italian named Colombo, who three years ago was given a term of ten years at Hamilton for being a member of a "black hand" gang. Death was due to tuberculosis. The remains were shipped to Hamilton.

THE DOCTOR HABIT.
And How She Overcame It.

When well selected food has helped the honest physician place his patient in sturdy health and free from the "doctor habit" it is a source of satisfaction to all parties. A Chicago woman says:

"We have not had a doctor in the house during all the 5 years that we have been using Grape-Nuts food. Before we began, however, we had "the doctor habit" and scarcely a week went by without a call on our physician.

"When our youngest boy arrived, 5 years ago, I was very much run down and nervous, suffering from indigestion and almost continuous headaches. I was not able to attend to my ordinary domestic duties and was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself. Under advice I took to Grape-Nuts.

"I am now, and have been ever since we began to use Grape-Nuts food, able to do all my own work. The dyspepsia, headaches, nervousness and rheumatism which used to drive me fairly wild, have entirely disappeared.

"My husband finds that in the night work in which he is engaged, Grape-Nuts food supplies him the most wholesome, strengthening and satisfying lunch he ever took with him." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

HASTINGS TEAM OUT OF THE RUNNING LAKEFIELD WINS SUDDEN DEATH GAME

Cementville Seven Showed Speed and Class and Captured Last Night's Battle by 10 Goals to 5

CONTEST A GOOD ONE

Lakefield eliminated Hastings from the Trent Valley race, and incidentally demonstrated to a good-sized crowd that they are to be considered as factors in the championship battle, by defeating the Eastern team by 10 goals to 5, in a semi-final sudden-death contest at Brock Street Rink last night. The result of the battle and the great showing of the Cementville seven were somewhs of a surprise. Hastings were favourites and even the Lakefield supporters asked for odds when betting was mentioned However, the boys from the North showed a fast, clever team, with speed all along the line, and the ability and willingness to check back with every rush. While they had little or no team work, they were effective, individually on the attack, and their forwards did as effective and persistent back checking as has been seen here this winter.

They were always back with their defence in every emergency, and the result was that it was only rarely that the Hastings forwards got a chance to work down without interruptions from behind.

Hastings had a heavy, hard-checking team, with a couple of speedy forwards and they played nice combination at times, but poor work, when close in, robbed them of frequent opportunities to score, after some passing had beaten the Lakefield defence. This was especially noticeable in the first half, when half a dozen brilliant chances in succession were thrown away by weird shooting. Up to the middle of the second half it was anybody's game, although Lakefield had always been in front. With the score 3 to 2, however, the Easterners faded and the Cementville team turned it into the high gear and came through with six goals in a row. Hastings came to life long enough to run in two goals in quick succession, but Lakefield were always coming, each team scoring one more before the final whistle. The better team won; there can be no doubt of that.

The game was the best Trent Valley exhibition of the season—at least the best Peterborough fans have had a chance of seeing. The teams were always going and there was some lively hockey handed out all through the piece while the players showed no desire to get the men. Leo Derocher handled the game most satisfactorily.

Lakefield will meet T. A. S. in the semi-finals, probably in a sudden-death game and the winner will clash with the Eastern group winner in the finals. From this distance it looks as if the Lakefield-T. A. S. battle will be a real game all the way.

For Lakefield, Simpson, at centre, was probably the star, he sharing honours with Blewitt. The two did an immense amount of work, and both proved good scorers. Hill uncorked a speedy shot from left wing and Joe Morin on the right boards, was always on the job. Crawford checked vigorously on the defence, and came through with some beautiful rushes, two of which resulted in goals.

For Hastings, Wilson, the little left-wing man, played a hard, effective game, his rushes down the boards being of decided assistance. Weller did some nice stick-handling and rushing, and Doc. Burton, the ex-Barrie baseball twirler, although palpably out of condition, was in the limelight all through. Tate, in goal, distinguished himself with some pretty stops of close-range shots, although he was beaten by a couple of easy ones.

Lakefield pressed from the start, showing lots of speed, the back-checking of their forwards keeping Hastings pretty well tied up for the first few minutes. The green and white team buzzed around the Hastings nets ineffectively for a few minutes, until finally Blewitt wiggled inside, and tipped the rubber past Tate for the first counter. He netted the puck again in a few minutes, but had used a little footwork in getting into position for the shot, and Referee Derocher very properly refused to allow the goal. They got another sure enough one though, not long after, when Simpson slammed one through from a mixup, putting Lakefield two to the good. Another was shoved in during a scrimmage, but once more the player making the shot had kicked the rubber and the score did not count. It had been pretty well all Lakefield up to this point, but Hastings cut loose with some nice combination, and until half-time, gave the Northerners a red-hot chase for the honours. Half a dozen rushes started by the energetic Wilson, worked the rubber into the scoring zone, but McMillan and Burton fooled a couple of nice opportunities and Hill robbed them on another occasion by a gilt-edged stop. Wilson took the rebound on this occasion but missed the open net by inches and then Armstrong had the puck in front of the goal with no one checking him, but fell all over himself and lost a beautiful opening. It looked like a toss-up at half-time, and when Hastings came back like race-horses, after the rest their supporters began to wax enthusiastic. They had their first real chance to cut loose with some cheer stuff almost at the go-in of the second half when a nice rush wound up in a pretty goal by Weller, leaving the score 2 to 1. It looked rosy for Hastings just at that moment, but Blewitt knocked some bloom off the peach by a beautiful individual rush up the centre, working right in for a neat goal, putting Lakefield two to the good. Burton and Weller went down together in a pretty passing rush, and the former hammered the rubber past Hill for Hastings' second goal. It was 3 to 2, and both teams going strong when Armstrong of the Hastings team took the count from being slammed into the boards and had to retire. Lakefield dropped Rowe and the game fished six aside. The change seemed to benfit Lakefield, for right off the reel Hill slipped a scoop shot past Tate, and Blewitt tore in by himself and made it 5 to 2. That was bad enough for Hastings, but it speedily threatened to culminate in a landslide. Crawford went the length of the rink, going right in on Tate for a pretty goal and Simpson made it 7 to 2 on a dodging run. He got another in quick order, and Blewitt followed with No. 9, with a good shot from a face-off. Hastings showed their gameness by fighting to the end. Burton tore down the centre and veering over to the left boards, bored one past Hill for a nice goal. Then Weller caught Crawford out on a foray and duplicated Burton's trick by ripping down with a speedy rush and scoring from close in. Lakefield 9, Hastings 4.

Crawford contributed another rink-length rush and sent Lakefield's score into double figures by sailing into the nets and tipping the rubber past Tate.

This left it 10 to 4 and it looked as if it would remain there as time was almost up. Ten seconds, however, before the whistle blew, Wilson shot down his wing and fooled Hill from the side, bringing Hastings' total to 5.

Final score, Lakefield 10, Hastings 5.

The summary follows:

1—Lakefield—Blewitt.
2—Lakefield, Simpson.
Half-time—
3—Hastings, Weller.
4—Lakefield, Blewitt.
5—Hastings, Burton.
6—Lakefield, Hill.

9—Lakefield, Simpson.
10—Lakefield, Simpson.

PNEUMONIA.

Doctors Said He Would Not Live.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP Cured Him.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that when a person catches cold it must be attended to immediately, or serious results are liable to follow.

There is only one way to prevent pneumonia, and that is, to cure the cold just as soon as it appears.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will do this quickly and effectively.

Mr. Hugh McLeod, Esterhazy, Sask., writes:—"My little boy took a very severe cold, and it developed into pneumonia. The doctor said he would not live. I got some of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and he began to improve. Now, he is a strong healthy child, and shows no sign of it coming back."

EXCITING EPISODES IN TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE

Marmora Team Delightfully Entertained at Tweed With Well-aimed and Well-seasoned Eggs, But Get the Game by Default.

MARMORA, FEB. 27.—A rather peculiar condition of affairs has arisen in the Trent Valley League over a postponed game. Marmora protested their game with Tweed, owing to the rink being improperly lighted, and their protest was allowed, and the game ordered to be replayed on Wednesday evening last. On that date Marmora arranged to run an excursion via C. P. R. to Tweed, and although the worst storm of the season was raging, over fifty drove five miles to Central Ontario Junction to take the train. On arriving there it was found that owing to a wreck on the C. P. R. near Blairton the special train had been unable to get down. About 8.30 the railway company cancelled the special train and would not promise to get a train through to Tweed that evening. Mr. W. H. Hubbell, president of the league, who was one of the excursion party, then called up the manager of the Tweed team and after explaining the circumstances informed him the game would have to be postponed until Friday evening.

On Thursday forenoon the manager of the Marmora team 'phoned the manager of the Tweed club re the game, and the latter flatly refused to replay the game, claiming it went to Tweed by default on the part of the Marmora team. The manager of the Marmora Team then appealed to the president of the league, but the telephone wires were out of business through the storm, so he was unable to get in communication with Tweed until Friday morning, when he again informed the manager of the Tweed team that the game was to be played that evening as soon after the arrival of the local from Toronto as the teams could get on the ice.

On Friday evening the Marmora team accordingly went to Tweed accompanied by about thirty-five supporters. As soon as the train arrived in Tweed the lights were turned off the rink and the rink locked up. As soon as the team were ready the Marmora contingent started for the rink, but just before they reached it they were met with a fusilade of eggs which caused a hurried retreat. The referee, Mr. Anderson, of Peterborough, then went to the manager of the Tweed team, who absolutely refused to play that night. Later on, however, he made a proposition that if Marmora would stay over until the next morning they would play them at 8 o'clock. Marmora refused to do this and the referee awarded the game to Marmora.

This ties Marmora and Stirling for the championship of No. 1 district, and home-and-home games are now being played.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

(Toronto Star)

The last and the best of the hockey games of the season will be played on Saturday night at the Excelsior Rink, when the Toronto Canoe Club, Junior Champions of the O. H. A., will meet an all-star seven, selected by the Association.

The receipts will be devoted to charity, and the Hospital for Sick Children will be the beneficiary.

The all-star team will be managed by Mr. George Moore of Orillia, runners-up for the championship and the personnel will be announced to-morrow.

This game will give lovers of hockey the opportunity of seeing all the great junior players of the year in action on the same ice.

Although few knew it, Frank Heffernan spent Sunday and Monday in the infirmary at College. "Moose" caught a cold in the first game of the Laval series, and it has stuck to him ever since. Notwithstanding this Heff's work last night drew rounds of applause. The big Ottawa student outskated the McGill speed boys more than once and but for the good work of Warwick in the nets should have had a couple of goals to his credit in the first half. Had the Peterborough boy been in good shape it is doubtful if anyone on the ice could have touched him. Like all good ones Heffernan is unselfish when attacking. His defence work, in the first half especially, was a feature.—Ottawa Free Press.

Sores From Elbow to Fingers

Zam-Buk Worked a Miracle of Healing

Reverend Gentleman Fully Corroborates.

Miss Kate L. Dolliver, of Caledonia, Queens Co., N.B., says: "I must add my testimony to the value of Zam-Buk. Ulcers and sores broke out on my arm, and although I tried to heal them by using various preparations, nothing seemed to do me any good. The sores spread until from fingers to elbow was one mass of ulceration.

"I had five different doctors, and faithfully carried out their instructions. I drank pint after pint of blood medicines, tried salve after salve, and lotion after lotion; but it was of no avail.

"My father then took me thirty miles to see a well known doctor. He photographed the arm and hand. This photograph was sent to a New York hospital to the specialist; but they sent word they could do nothing further for me, and I was in despair.

"One day a friend asked me if I had tried Zam-Buk. I said I had not, but I got a box right away. That first box did me more good than all the medicines I had tried up to that time so I continued the treatment. Every box healed the sores more and more until, to make a long story short, Zam-Buk healed all the sores completely. Everybody in this place knows of my case and that it is Zam-Buk alone which cured me."

Minister corroborates.—The Rev. W. B. M. Parker, of Caledonia, Miss Dolliver's minister, writes: "This is to certify that the testimonial of Miss Dolliver is correct as far as my knowledge goes. I have known her for a year and a half, and her cure effected by Zam-Buk is remarkable."

Wherever there is ulceration, blood-poison, sores, cold-cracks, abscesses, cuts, burns, bruises, or any skin injury or disease, there Zam-Buk should be applied. It is also a sure cure for piles. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. per box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse cheap and harmful imitations and substitutes.

Carton, of Bonarb. They were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Carton still reside in the north end of the city.

ARNOTT—PORTER.

The marriage of Miss Ethel Francis Porter to Mr. Westcott Arnott, both of Peterborough, Ont., took place on Wednesday afternoon in Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Armitage. Mr. and Mrs. Arnott upon their return to Peterborough, will reside at Maple Villa, Monaghan Road. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents.

Blacksmiths in Convention

New Prices Go Into Effect To-morrow—Dinner This Evening

The anvil chorus is hushed to-day, the forges are dead and dark, and he "who with steady sledge, smites the shrill anvil all day long" has ceased his toil to meet in convention on the last day before the new schedule of blacksmithing prices go into effect.

The blacksmiths of this district laid aside their leather aprons at noon, donned their Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes, for their assembly this afternoon, which concludes with a very pleasant function of a dinner at the Munro House this evening.

As exclusively announced in the Examiner a week ago, the blacksmiths of this district have found it necessary to increase their prices. Other prices all around them have been soaring, from the very food they eat to the wages they pay their assistants, and the iron and other materials they use in their work.

This afternoon's convention is being held in the Labour Hall, with an attendance of blacksmiths from Millbrook, Lakefield, Young's Point, and other points near Peterborough.

GREAT INTEREST IN THE MUTT-JEFF BATTLE

The announcement of the game to-morrow night between the Mutts and Jeffs, i.e., picked teams of the Intermediates and Bear Cats, has aroused considerable interest among the hockey fans and followers of the game, after sizing up the teams, have decided that it will be a snappy contest all through the piece. The Mutts, according to the general fancy, look to have the edge, but closer students of the game, predict that there will be little to choose between the two teams. The Mutt supporters say that the senior forwards, with the assistance of Denison, on the defence will prove too fast a scoring proposition for the Jeffs, but those who fancy the latter, point out that the Mutt attackers will not find Derocher, Bond and Bearss a light bunch by any means, while the Bear Cat forwards, with their speed and combination, may be able to do some scoring on their own account. Looking at it from any angle it will be a classy game and as the players are worked up over the battle they may be depended upon to give all they have. Ernie Watson will referee, and the game is called for 8.15 p.m., with a [illegible] admission charge to any part of the rink. The ice will be lightning fast, and the going will be as the players like it. The teams:

Busy Night At The City Hall

A meeting of the Property Committee is called for this evening, at 7 o'clock. The sections of the Garbage By-law will be discussed and the applications for the position of Sanitary Inspector will be opened.

At 8 o'clock there will be a meeting of the Finance Committee when the estimates for the year will be passed upon and the tax rate will likely be struck.

To complete a busy evening at the City Hall a meeting of the Police Commission has been called for five o'clock.

Both the committee meetings this evening will likely be important. Ald. Duncan will probably report upon the progress that has been made in the preparations for the Garbage by-law, and to Finance Committee meeting will likely bring forth some items of interest to the ratepayers.

It looks like a busy night for Mayor Bradburn with three meetings to attend.

An effort will be made this year to organize a baseball league composed of Lindsay, Port Perry, Cannington, Beaverton, Markham, Stouffville, Woodville and other centres.—Lindsay Post.

Flashlight Taken of the Banquet Tendered Senator Cox of the Canada Life Assurance Company on His Attainment of Fifty Years Service in the Corporation

TEACHERS ARE NEEDED

Hon. A. G. MacKay Pilloried Department for Its Sudden Change of System

CONDITIONS ARE WORSE

Toronto, March 1.—Normal schools and model schools—their relative advantages and disadvantages—were the topic over which the legislators in Queen's Park got excited at yesterday afternoon's session.

"Model schools—" This modest little item in the supplementary estimates which the House had under consideration was the cause of all the trouble.

The discussion was precipitated by Hon. A. G. MacKay's defence of the old model school system of Ontario. Mr. MacKay maintained that as regards schools, the people of the province were infinitely worse off to-day than they would have been had there been no change from the old system. "If it was the desire of the government to give normal training to every teacher in the land," said he, "we begged them to at least do it gradually, and to retain at least one good model school in each county. By that means the children would at least have the assurance of being provided with a teacher who had received a model school training instead of having to secure somebody without even the limited qualifications of the model training. "It is the bounden duty of the Government," said Mr. MacKay, "to come back to our contention of model schools."

Sir James Whitney, in reply, stated that the subject was one of which Mr. MacKay had made a specialty for years. "He seemed every time normal schools are mentioned," said Sir James. "He has a right to his own opinions on the subject, but this subject has been discussed, I might almost say, ad nauseum. It was even under consideration long before the present Government came into power. How Mr. MacKay can suggest that this Government ought to come back to his contention as regards model schools, after the people of the province had endorsed our policy by such majorities as he never heard of, is more than I can understand."

N. W. Rowell said that the question was one of vital interest to the people of the whole province. He thought that the Government should take the Opposition members into its confidence, and discuss the methods that were being considered, to solve the problem of education. The fact that there were inducements in the west, said Mr. Rowell, was all the more reason why the Government of Ontario should adopt a progressive policy to get efficient teachers.

J. C. Milligan, Stormont, defended the present policy of the Government. Speaking as an old teacher, and as a new member of the House, he said that the abolition of the model schools was one of the wisest things ever done by any Government.

A. C. Pratt of North Norfolk characterized the model school system that was formerly in vogue as nothing short of a curse to the country. He would regret it if any of his children ever were compelled to go to a model school.

When the discussion opened Mr. Rowell asked the Minister of Education what centres were under consideration at the present time for the establishment of normal schools.

Hon. Dr. Pyne replied that there were several.

Hon. A. G. MacKay then contended that there should be a defined statement at the beginning of the academic year as to where the model schools would be. By this means pupils preparing for examination would know whether or not there would be a model school in their district.

Hon. W. H. Hearst introduced a bill to amend the Forest Preserves Act, in order that the Townships of Deloro and Ogden may be taken out of the forest reserve. These townships are part of the Porcupine gold fields, and being now practically all taken up for mining purposes, there is no timber of value on them to be preserved. The amendment will enable the Department to grant patents in the ordinary way to claim owners who prefer patents to leases.

PREMIER ASQUITH WILL MAKE OWNERS RAISE WAGES

Says If Operators Will Not Grant Minimum Wage He Will Force Them To Do So---Now Drafting a Bill

London, March 1.—The settlement of the threatened coal strike is yet far off. The Government has not yet been able to induce all the coal owners to agree to the demand for a minimum wage made by the miners, but Premier Asquith declared last night that if the principle of a minimum wage was not secured by agreement it would be secured by other means.

Fully 800,000 miners have already laid down their tools, and will not pick them up again until an agreement satisfactory to the miners' federation has been reached. The men have the Government behind them and feel that victory has been won.

It was officially announced last night that the conference of the Cabinet Ministers with the miners' federation would be continued to-day. Chancellor Lloyd-George is drafting a minimum wage bill, but it is stated that the Government is hopeful of being able to secure the establishment of the minimum wage without recourse to legislation, now that the Welsh mine-owners see that they are powerless to resist longer.

Some of the railways have sent out notifications of curtailment of their services owing to the strike.

"The Government having recognized the principle of a minimum wage for all underground workers, if it is not secured by agreement, it will be secured by the Government by other means."

This extract from the speech made by the Prime Minister to the members of the National Miners Federation, as reported in the official statement issued last night concerning the conference held yesterday, indicates the lengths to which the Government is prepared to go to effect a settlement of the strike. It is virtually an ultimatum to the coal owners.

Emphasizing the point again, Mr. Asquith said that the Government "were determined that the minimum wage shall become part and parcel of the organization and working of the coal industry by whatever appropriate means the Government can command."

They would be false to their duty as stewards and trustees of the general interests of the nation, continued the Premier, if they did not take what steps they could to bring about a reasonable arrangement. The Government felt that they were face to face with a warfare between capital and labor in the coal industry, which might paralyze all other industries in the country.

The Government had started upon their investigation of the problem, the Premier said, without any prejudice of party or class bias in one direction or another. Having given the fullest and most careful consideration to the evidence which the workmen had brought before them, the conclusion they had unanimously come to was that a case had been made out for ensuring to the underground workers in the coal industry, with adequate safeguards, a reasonable minimum wage.

Already a majority — certainly 60 per cent.—of the coal owners of the country had assented to the Government's proposals, and they did not intend that the resistance of what, he hoped, was a dwindling minority of the employers of labor, should unduly delay the attainment of an object which "we have satisfied ourselves is consistent with justice and the best interests of the community."

The Prime Minister concluded his speech with an appeal to the miners to allow reasonable latitude for discussion with respect to fixing the minimum wage for the different districts, and not to insist upon rigid adherence to the schedule adopted by the miners' federation. He reminded them that if they persisted in that course they assumed a terrible responsibility, although it was obvious that nothing short of a miracle could avert a national coal strike.

Coal Strike In U. S.?

New York, March 1.—The representatives of the anthracite coal miners, who have been here for several days formulating their demands for higher wages, have concluded their deliberations for the present. They will return to meet the operators at a conference in this city on March 13.

As to the chances for a strike, the miners' leaders are non-committal.

"We are not looking for a strike," declared Mr. White before leaving New York, "but will insist on our demands."

There are 700,000 coal mine workers in this country, and according to the last official returns 350,000 of them are in the union.

ANARCHY IN PEKIN.

Yuan's Troops Rise and Slay and Rob In City.

Pekin, March 1.—(1 a.m.)—A mutiny of Yuan Shi Kai's soldiers started at Pekin at 8 o'clock last night. Many of the natives have been killed or wounded, but so far as is known all foreigners are safe. The legation quarter is crowded, but the missionaries are holding out in their own compounds.

When the outbreak occurred it was estimated that two thousand soldiers took part, but since then the mutineers have been augmented by large numbers of police, coolies and loafers. The legations know no reasons for the outbreak. The idea is expressed that Yuan Shi Kai's soldiers began the trouble when they learned that he intended to leave the capital for Nanking. The soldiers are everywhere looting from house to house. They have not spared even the foreign residences within one block of the legation quarter.

Fires were started in various sections and territory of more than a mile in area has been burned. This stretches from the Forbidden City to the building of the Chinese Foreign Board, where Yuan Shi Kai resides, the flames reaching within half a mile of the legation. The quarters occupied by the Nanking delegates who came here to notify Premier Yuan of his election as President, have been enveloped in flames.

Much reckless shooting has occurred, and one shell, which fell into the compound of the American legation through the tent of one of the soldiers of the recently-arrived reinforcements, but did not explode.

Willard D. Straight, ex-American consul-general at Mukden, and now the representative of a New York financial syndicate, is among the refugees at the American legation. His wife is with him.

The Chinese soldiers did not attempt to interfere with fleeing foreigners, but there was great danger from flying bullets and firebrands which were flourished in all directions. Mr. and Mrs. Straight saved their valuables, but deserted a richly-furnished house, which was given over to the looters.

The Perfect Test

(Short Story.)

BY ANNIE HINRICHSEN.

(Copyright, 1912, by the Associated Literary Press.)

"Do you really mean that you will give me no explanation?"

"I can not explain, Katherine," Carter protested. "My reason is an excellent one. Some time I can give it to you. I ask you to trust me until that time."

"We have been the best of good friends, Doane. Before the Legislature convened you came often from your home in Johnsville to Benton to see me, a distance of seventy miles. After the Legislature assembled and you were in Capital City, ten miles from my home, you came once to Benton. Then you wrote me that you could not come again for many weeks, probably not until the Legislature adjourns. You said there is a reason which some time I shall understand and—and you asked me to—to——"

"To love me and trust me," Carter broke in. "You did not answer my letter."

"Of course, I did not. When a man tells a girl he does not intend to see her again she knows it is because he does not want to. I come to Capital City every few days to see my sister, who is in a hospital here. To-day I meet you by chance, and you ask me to believe that you care for me?"

"You know I love you, Katherine. Will you not trust me a few weeks? Will you not believe that my reason is a good one and an honourable one?"

"Then why not tell me?"

"I can't, dear, yet."

"Is it because you cannot trust me with the reason or—because there is no reason except your desire to end our friendship?"

"I am not a cad although you seem to think I am. I could trust you with anything in the world that I could in honour share with you. But I can not tell you this."

"You need not," Katherine's voice had become suspiciously gracious. "Your affairs are no concern of mine. You and I enjoyed for a time a pleasant friendship. You have ended it. Will you please leave me? I do not care to walk with a stranger."

Carter's perplexed, angry eyes met her calm ones. Then he lifted his hat and walked rapidly away.

For several weeks the general assembly had been deadlocked over the election of a United States Senator. There were ninety-three Republican members and eighty-eight Democratic ones. The Republicans had nominated Sherrill Vane. The Democratic candidate was James Brown. As the Republicans had a majority of five it was expected that their candidate would be elected on the first ballot. But when the Republicans met in caucus and chose their candidate, five of the younger members of the party rebelled, refused to support Sherrill Vane, and demanded the election of George Allerton.

Allerton had never been affiliated with either party. He was the leading lawyer of the State a man of incorruptible honour and national fame.

The five insurgents openly declared their hostility to Sherrill Vane, the Republican candidate, and announced that the deadlock would remain until George Allerton was elected. The leader of the insurgents was Doane Carter.

Around the insurgents' band raged the political battle. The Republican party used every weapon and every strategy at their command to compel the five to support the party candidate. The Democrats fought as fiercely to win them for the Democratic candidate. Day after day for many weeks the ballot remained the same: Sherrill Vane, 88; James Brown, 88; George Allerton, 5.

One morning Katherine Vane sat in the gallery of the House of Representatives. The balloting began. Amid the wildest bedlam the old hall had ever held, George Allerton received the vote of the entire Democratic faction and of the insurgent band and was declared the successful candidate for the Senate.

Katherine pushed her way through the crowd toward the elevator. A hand touched her arm. Doane Carter the leader of the insurgent band, almost as great a hero in that hour as the man whose election he had secured, stood beside her. He drew her into a committee room and closed the door against a clamouring mob of admirers.

"You know now why I could not come to see you." His voice was cold. He spoke hurriedly as if in haste to dispose of an unpleasant topic. "Your uncle, it was known, was using every means to secure those five votes. The Democratic candidate was also doing his best to get them. Both men are grafters and bribers. We five stood out to elect a good man. I was made chairman of our band. Every act of mine was watched by the spies of each side. Had it been known that I was going to Benton, Sherrill Vane's home to see his niece, I should have been suspected of secretly favouring his candidacy. I could not have made any one understand that he and your father are bitter enemies because your father despises his political methods. My connection with his family would have made my men suspicious of my sincerity and they might have been won by one of the other faction.

"There was more at stake than a little glory for ourselves. We were fighting to compel the assembly to elect a great man instead of a boodler. Last night the Democratic leaders agreed, since they could not elect their candidate, to share with us the honour of electing Allerton.

"Now you understand my reason. When I refused to tell you and you refused to trust me, the candidates had not been nominated, and our plans to refuse to support Vane, if he should be nominated, were still secret. I could not in honour tell you the plans of my associates."

"I understand, Doane, and I am sorry—I can't tell you how sorry am—how much I regret my unkindness. If you were to ask me again to trust you——"

"I shall not. Since I have been proved honourable you are willing to trust me. I have given you the explanation I promised you. I do not ask you to love me. What sort of wife would you be? A woman who would have no confidence in her husband, who would not believe his word of honour unless it was supported by affidavits." He opened the door to allow her to pass out. "Good morning," he said curtly.

In the rotunda she met her uncle, the defeated candidate. For the first time in her life he spoke to her.

"Doane Carter sold out for a price," he said deliberately. "His price was Allerton's daughter. He expects to marry her. She is the reason he formed an insurgent band and elected her father."

"That is not true." There was conviction in Katherine's voice. "He elected Mr. Allerton because he was a great man, an honour to the State, and not a boodling politician. Doane Carter is a man whom no price can buy."

"Good for you," laughed Carter behind her. "I hurried after you," he went on when her uncle was out of hearing, "to ask you to forgive me for being such a brute and to love me if you can. I've loved you all the time, Kate, dear, but my pride had been awfully hurt by your lack of confidence in me."

"Lack of confidence? Did I not prove that my trust in you is absolute when Uncle Sherrill could not make me suspicious or jealous by saying you love another woman. Have I not stood the perfect test. Aren't you sure now that I trust you and—and love you?"

Peterborough's admission into the Canadian Baseball League will give that sport a great boost in this district. There is no reason whatever why the Electric City could not support a team when St. Thomas and Berlin succeeded in doing so.—Lindsay Post.

Would Fall In a Faint

When She Attempted to Work, so Exhausted Was the Nervous System

The Feeble, Wasted Nerves Were Restored and Revitalized by

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Nervous prostration is a terrible disease to all who understand its symptoms. At times the sufferer feels comparatively well, but with slight exertion the dreadful helplessness returns and all strength and vitality seems to leave the system.

This letter from Mrs. Martin very well describes the terrible conditions in which many a sufferer finds herself. She also tells how she regained health and strength by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after all other treatments had failed.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition from nervous exhaustion and prostration. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. The weakness was so great that I could not so much as sweep the floor without fainting, but the nerve food helped me after the doctors failed. It has done wonders in building up my nervous system. I can do my own housework now and washing, and feel that this great medicine has been a God-send to me. I think it is the best of medicines."

SHAKESPEARE

(From the New York Tribune.)

Shakespeare was with us, for I saw him. I was strolling across Fourteenth street in the gloaming, when a tap on my shoulder arrested me, and like a tinkling pearl the intonation of pure blank verse was rolled amid the outcries of the pushcart venders who were hawking cat fur overcoat collars. Turning, I encountered the figure of the bard himself—starched ruff, fluted doublet, silver shoe buckles and all concomitants—the very outlandishness of his costume saving him from a mob, because the walking advertisements of publishing houses were frequent in that vicinity.

"You?" I gasped. "What are you doing here? In the name of all the muses, back to the coal mine! Don't you know this is the age of Nietzsche, New Thought, Tolstoy, Turgeney and Laura Jean Libbey? Don't you know that the Bacon hunters swear that you are buried at London Bridge under forty feet of mud and in a piano box? Hurry!" I cried.

"Friend," he replied in that wonderful voice of his, "while singing upon Parnassus I slipped and fell miles. Methought 'twas like a second fall of man. I encountered in my descent a tall white tower, where ponderous bells rang out beneath the impact of my body, and sliding down from thence with exceeding swiftness I arrived in this marvelous city. Can it be Venice?"

"You're off the map," I said indulgently. "That was the Metropolitan Tower. Highest building ever built. Chicago can't touch it. This is little old New York, and if you want to stay you'll have to cut out old style English and put on some proper clothes. We'll have dinner at Rector's, take in 'The Squeeze Dream,' and top off with a feed at Shanley's."

Taking him into a first class clothing store, I procured for him a nobby and tasty getup of green tweeds. When he adjusted his pink carnation, tilted his brown derby to the proper angle, shuffled into his spats and hung his cane over his arm, he looked almost like a son of Gotham.

Before he left Fourteenth street he had acquired a tendency to Yiddish, but this was corrected by listening to a fight between a motorman and a taxi-cab chauffeur. Compound metropolitan abuse interested him particularly, and he absorbed it like a sponge. He said with a sigh that there was nothing like it in his day and that he wanted to rewrite "Othello" and "Richard III." I told him to wait until he got the hang of Broadway, when he might turn out something classy. Then we went to Rector's and there dined.

"Shake," as I now familiarly termed him, liked his cocktail. He liked it so well that he ordered another and then another, and I began to glance askance at him out of the corner of my eye. He said that it was better than sack. But the biographers of this mighty bard have by no means belied him, and by the time he got to the dessert I was ordering lemonades and horses' necks in self defence. He absorbed gin rickeys, he assimilated fizzes, he downed Mamie Taylors galore, shouted for Fish House Punch and got away with a quart and a pint of Zimmerman's Extra Dry.

"Ooms," he said, when I told him it was time to hit the footlights. "Ooms, but that was a merry meal! Would that my friend Ben Jonson could have absorbed these dainty drinks also! And now for the play. Odds tabors, I am all impatience!"

The yodling of the Broadway chorus was in full blast when we dropped into our seats in the front row and I watched him to note the effect of the stagecraft, so far superior to anything that he had ever seen.

He nodded his head in perfect time to the music, and I saw him wink at a chorus girl. "Ooms," I heard him murmur once again, "'tis strange and marvellous." And then he spoke aloud.

"Good for the tired business man," he said. "Pleasant to cheer the time away until the play begins."

"What play?" I said. "Look at the stage. Don't you see Mamie Millholland and the office boy in their hotel duet? Slickest thing of the year. I'm surprised at you — surprised and hurt."

"I know, I know," he said wearily. "'Tis a great improvement, to be sure, over the swashbuckling fellow in his yellow coat. But surely this is not all."

"All," I said. "Fifty girls, not one of them over 20. Fifty handsome men in fawn coloured suits to dance with them. Music by Moses Greenhunt. Real fountain in the third act. Great moonlight hammock scene. Popular best sellers. Music given away free on Moses Greenhunt birthday. Honestly, 'Shake,' you're not living up to your reputation."

The bard regarded me for an instant with a contemptuous and withering glance of scorn. Then he fumbled in his pocket and produced an egg. It must have been Elisabethan, for he didn't get it at Rector's. With a loud cry of "Shame!" he rose to his feet and hurled it upon the stage.

Someone in the audience—an Irishman—took up his cry. Others followed suit. A riot was imminent. But a burly policeman, grasping Shakespeare firmly by the collar, propelled him vigorously down the aisle and headlong through the swinging doors into the street. When I reached the pavement out of breath, a rising spot of light like a star directly over the Metropolitan Tower was the sole indication that the bard had honoured us with his presence. He will come again, though. The cocktails will prove irresistible.

REVIVAL OF DUELLING

LONDON, Feb. 21.—In these days of continued novelties and of the revival of many old things there is not much room left for real surprises, but a surprise is certainly furnished by the statement, made apparently quite seriously, that certain well-known Englishmen are not only in favour of the revival of the duel, but will do their best to bring such a revival about.

It is argued that the abolition of dueling causes Englishmen to be treated with less respect than in former days, and that thus it is indirectly the origin of the suffragette movement. A step back toward those chivalrous, romantic days has been taken in the preparations now in progress for a special exhibition to illustrate the history of swordsmanship, with the object of popularizing the sword in England.

It is claimed by the promoters—many of whom are prominent men in English society—that the revival of duelling in England would be associated with the following beneficial results:

1. Better manners and more civility.
2. The purity of the home.
3. The practical abolition of divorce.
4. A higher moral standard.
5. Less friction and rivalry between the sexes.
6. A finer physical standard for all who practise fencing.

Most of the gentlemen who will take part in the celebration, which will be a matinee, are members of the Actors' Sword Club, and the scenes illustrating the history of the duel will be based on a series of famous fights taken from both history and fiction. Sir George Alexander has kindly loaned St. James's Theatre for the matinee, but owing to the elaborate preparations necessary the performance can hardly be given before next May.

Duels of all periods will be fought, and a special "quarrel dialogue" suitable to the period will be written by well-known authors to lead up to each fight. This "quarrel dialogue" will require very careful writing, for a grievance or insult that would have stung an ancient Roman to the quick might not be enough to base, say, a modern French duel upon.

"We shall overcome this difficulty," said Gerald Ames, "by basing our quarrels upon the honour of women, in which cause man has been prepared to shed his blood throughout the ages. Nowadays woman is not treated with the respect and reverence that was her right in the old days, when most women had a champion who was prepared to draw his sword for her honour.

"If you take a lady out to supper and some cad of a man takes it into his head to annoy her with his insolent starnig, she has no redress, and you have no means of punishing him. If duelling were recognized and practised in England that sort of thing would be stopped, and a lady could walk out alone without fearing the insolent advances and attentions

MADE IT EASIER FOR OTHER MEN TO BEAR PAIN

NEW YORK.—Ting-a-ling-ling!—the small house telephone gives an abrupt little ring.

Hello! Yes, this is Dr. Blank (thin small voice in telephone). "Call!"

The ambulance surgeon, or "bus surgeon" as he is known in hospital life, hangs up the receiver, mechanically slaps the pockets of his white coat to assure himself that stethoscope, bandage-scissors, and thermometer are there, and in one movement slides into his heavy 'bus coat and dinky little peaked cap with "Surgeon, Bellevue Hospital," in gold letters upon it, and frees down to the front office of the hospital.

Off on the Job.

Here the telephone operator hands him a slip of paper upon which is written the address of the ambulance call—it may be anywhere from the Tombs to the 86th Street Ferry. The 'bus surgeon trips lightly (if he has not been up all night answering calls—if he has then he wearily makes his way) down the worn stone steps of the old main building, hands the slip to the 'bus driver, who grunts disgustedly if it is a long distance or grins expectantly if it takes him through the most crowded thoroughfares of the city, picks up his waiting surgical bag and swings on to the back of the 'bus as it starts towards the big iron gates at the entrance to the hospital grounds. These majestically swing open and, with the gong clanking and the horse at a brisk trot, the famous Bellevue 'bus goes out to an ambulance call.

The Patient Found

Out through the big iron gates of the hospital the 'bus goes—the call happens to be a tenement in East 2nd Street, and the destination is soon reached. The usual motley crowd of East Siders has collected—children, Dagoes, "wops," and the the ubiquitous Yiddisher. "Cops is upstairs on de top flat," cries an eager little urchin who has gleaned all the harrowing details in less time than it takes a policeman to drink a glass of beer; "Gee! awful stink o' gas; woist I ever smell." The surgeon, bag in hand, swings off the 'bus and into the tenement, preceded and followed by a swarm of youths and curious women whom nothing on earth could persuade to stay behind. Before the top floor is reached, most of the women being somewhat of the build of Santa Claus, have dropped out panting for breath, but their places are taken by others who emerge wide-eyed from the numerous doorways on the other floors. About two flights from the top the familiar odour of illuminating gas assails the nostrils and the picture above is easily surmised.

Reviving Him.

On the grimy floor of a disordered little top room lies a heavy-set purple-faced man, and bending over him is a big coatless police officer, methodically performing artificial respiration on the recumbent figure. From a just-opened window comes a flood of cold, crisp, smoke-scented air; the doorway is already packed with a murmuring, peering excited crowd of tenement dwellers. A hasty examination of the patient proves that the timely efforts of the officer are meeting with success; the pulse, imperceptible at first, soon gives a feeble flicker, and when a hypodermic stimulant is administered and the artificial respiration suspended for a few minutes, the man's breathing, albeit somewhat shallow and irregular, becomes at least voluntary. The ambulance stretcher is already on its way upstairs and soon the burly figure of the unconscious man, well wrapped up in blankets, is placed upon it.

Out of the Tenement.

Now comes the task of carrying the stretcher with its burden down five flights of narrow twisting stairs whose turns are so sharp that at each one the litter has to be almost upended before the bearers can proceed and the lower man must needs receive the patient's head against his stomach lest the unconscious man be precipitated to the steps. The officers, however, are used to this sort of thing, though it is frequently the signal for a few well chosen remarks directed against the architect of the building, and the morbid crowd of East Siders who are ever eager to catch a glimpse of the bloated purple face. As the man is a prisoner on a charge of attempted suicide, an officer must accompany the ambulance back to the hospital and personally conduct the patient to the prison ward which is set apart for those cases which are brought to the hospital under arrest.

Another Call.

No sooner has the 'bus surgeon delivered his patient to the admitting office and handed in the admission card than he receives another call, this time to 44th Street and 1st Avenue. Down again to the waiting 'bus and off to this new summons. As he approaches the point of call, an officer emerges from a doorway and the 'bus comes to a stop in front of him. "Good morning, officer! What have you for me this time?" "Hello, doc, sick and destitute case I guess: call sent in to headquarters by the clergyman near here." As is nearly always the luck, the sick and destitute cases reside or rather simply exist, on the top floor, and up the narrow, dark, evil-smelling stairways one must climb, encountering varying odours of cabbage, onion, garlic, or turnips, and the everlasting one of stale, unwashed humanity at each landing.

Squalour and Misery.

The patient's abode consists of two meanly-furnished, poorly-lighted rooms, one (innocent of windows) used as a bedroom and kitchen, with a fireless stove near the wall and a few battered, unclean looking cooking utensils about, giving a lonely and forlorn aspect of poverty, in the other room a few ragged and soiled garments with a few pieces of begrimed finery are lying about; on the mantelpiece, two dog-eared photographs, reminiscent of happier and more prosperous days ,and several cheap, useless household goods looking as if they had reposed most of their time on the floor, where slouching feet had reduced them to their present gim-crack condition. It is curious that in so many of these places the mantelpiece and shelves are littered with half-broken coloured glass and tarnished metal ornaments whose lack of usefulness is only equalled by their pitiful tawdriness.

A Poor Old Woman.

The patient is an old tottering woman, thin and half-starved, who understands no English and speaks only a hybrid German. With the aid of several voluble and gesticulating women from the other floors who endeavour to interpret the few mumbled remarks of the old woman, one learns that she has no food, fire or future, and, moreover, does not want to go to a hospital. But the other occupants of the tenement, fearful lest she should be left upon their hands, finally persuade her that the hospital is her only salvation and prevail upon her to come down to the waiting ambulance. She does not stay long in Bellevue—there is no room in the wards for cases that are not really sick, and in the course of a day or so she is transferred across to Blackwell's Island, where food and comfort are provided for her in one of the city institutions.

of the cads who infest our streets today.

"But apart altogether from the social advantages of duelling, sword practice or fencing is quite the finest exercise there is for keeping a man or woman fit. Lord Halsbury, Lord Desborough, Lord Howard de Walden and the Speaker (Mr. Lowther) are among our best-known fencers. They have all promised their patronage and among those who have already promised to help are the amateur champions and ex-champions, Norman Forbes, Ben Webster, Justin Huntly McCarthy, Jerrold Robertshaw, Athol Stewart, and Col. ABOUT INCUBATORS

For nine months I have dallied with the common domestic hen, and I have very strong convictions concerning her mission in life. In the beginning I read a great deal about the creature. I found that she possesses an uninteresting personality. Calm, even tranquil, at most times, there are occasions when the hen becomes excitable and garrulous. These occasions are very rare and depend upon the position of the sun in its annual revolution, for in my experience they never occurred during the five months immediately following the winter solstice.

I thought this discovery was important enough to call to the attention of the firm who sold me one of my brooders. In the same communication I commented in my best manner on the brooder itself, which with some ingenuity I had converted into a go-cart for my youngest son. The firm replied that I should consult an astronomer, and suggested that if the ecliptic were slightly enlarged along the line of the autumnal equinox the hen would undoubtedly acquire a more ambitious nature..

The hen has taken little part in the history of nations. Down to the Twentieth Century man was unvexed by any problems concerned with her existence. It was only when I came to search very modern literature that I beheld a great light. For hundreds of years the amiable hen had been permitted to peck its way unaided into the world, forage on trespassing bugs and worms without regard to their species, and hop to bed at night without a blanket or a tepid bath. I discovered that modern research had elevated the hen, had given her a high place among those agencies that minister to man's material advancement.

"I was overjoyed at the prospect of a certain income. The word 'broiler' appealed to me now wholly in a commercial sense. Every time I read of a new restaurant in Manhattan I made another imaginary deposit in the savings bank.

"I determined to start with about four hundred eggs. I purchased them with great care and after the most exacting scrutiny. The last batch, consisting of nine dozen, I procured one cloudy morning of a tall farmer with a wart on the left side of his nose. He informed me they were extra quality,' and the price was 24 a dozen. He also informed me, quite casually, that he had never thought of experimenting with chickens. This seemed to me a striking commentary on the ignorance of our agricultural classes, and I told him so. I asserted that he and his kind were moving along in the same old groove utterly indifferent to advanced scientific methods that might easily be employed to better their condition.

To keep the incubators at an even temperature cost me many hours of slumber. But to him who for the first time realises that the fate of hundreds of little, embryonic germs possessing a potential market value lies absolutely in his power there comes a feeling of grave responsibility that spurs him to ceaseless endeavour.

Forty-eight hours before the first batch of eighty was to come off I heard the sound of faint cheepings that caused me to muse with infinite satisfaction, not unmixed with a feeling of awe, upon the inscrutable ways of nature.

At the appointed time I lifted the cover and liberated the brood. It numbered four! After the other incubators had yielded up their dead I discovered by a rapid process of calculation that I was the owner of 376 healthy, robust eggs that were seemingly in as good condition as when I purchased them, a little warmer, but otherwise as placidly non-committal.

"You may talk about the smile of the 'Mona Lisa,' the mutilated face of the Sphinx or the classic features of Napoleon, but for simon pure inscrutability, give me the unhatched incubator egg.

Criticisms came to me gratuitously. One of the neighbours said I had exposed the eggs to a chill; another said I had not given them enough air and moisture, while a third pointed out to me that the incubators did not set quite level and therefore the egg germs had developed abnormally on the left side and died of fatty degeneration of the heart.

A few days afterward as I stood on the verandah the tall farmer with the wart on his nose drove slowly by. He was bent over like an aged dame, elbows resting on his long, lean legs, the whip dangling idly over the dashboard. I made a quick movement in an effort to put one of the large posts between myself and the hoary old sinner. But it was too late. He waved his hand at me and grinned.

"If ye want any more eggs," he called, "I kin let ye hev abaout twelve doren at the same figger!"—Simon Creel in the New York Sun.

FAMOUS BRIGAND FREED

After forty-six years in Prison, D'Angelo is terrified by an automobile.

The notorious Abruzzi brigand chief, D'Angelo, has been pardoned by the king of Italy, after undergoing forty-six years' imprisonment, in the course of which he never asked a favour from anybody nor broke the prison rules. He was very loth to quit his convict home. He has no relatives left, and with $30 in his pocket, the fruit of his long term of toil, was carried to the railway station on a litter, because he has become utterly paralysed in his lower limbs.

He was terrified on seeing a passing automobile, and when for the first time he saw a man riding a bicycle he cried out, fearing that the cyclist would fall. The officials supplied him with a railway ticket for his native mountain town of Palomgara, where over half a century ago D'Angelo killed his first victim for besmirching the character of his sweetheart.

Up to the time of his arrest he murdered a dozen wayfarers. His favorite procedure was to lead them to the edge of a yawning precipice and there put to them the fatal alternative, "Leap down, or I put a ball through your brains."

FIREMEN WERE EXCLUDED.

During a fire in a convent belonging to the order of St. Claire at Le Puy, France, the nuns, in order not to break the rule of their order forbidding men to enter the convent, barricaded themselves in the burning building and refused admittance to the firemen and police. Since the State dissolved the religious orders only the very aged nuns have been permitted to remain at the convent. They numbered seven, and finding the building in flames they retreated to the dormitory and bolted the door. However, a policeman, accompanied by several civilians, dashed through the fire and smoke, and battered the door down.

The nuns were found unconscious, and with great difficulty were carried out of the building, which was destroyed

Had Them Lanced But, Got No Relief Until He Used

Burdock Blood Bitters.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still, at the same time are very painful. They are caused entirely by bad blood, and for you to get rid of them it is absolutely necessary to put the blood into good condition. For this purpose there is no remedy that can compare with Burdock Blood Bitters. This preparation has been on the market for about 35 years, and has a reputation unequalled by any other for the making of pure, rich, red blood. Mr. H. J. Batten, Stratford, Ont., writes:—"I have been troubled for several weeks with boils on my neck and arms. I had them lanced by the doctor, but as soon as one went others came. I tried all kinds of so called remedies, but could get no relief till I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I am pleased to say I am now quite free from those most painful things, and feel much better in every respect.

"My boy, of nine years, had a rash come over his back and legs, so we gave him a few doses and now he is all right again."

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

SAVED FROM BEDOUINS BY A COWBOY

THE Story of an Adventure in the Nedjed Desert, Which Begins in Treachery and Ends in the Discovery of Treasure.

HOMO the adventurers who roam the earth, sword, rifle or prospector's hammer in hand, Alan de Gracio Markham is entitled to one of the most eccentric. He was born in Piacentia Bay, Newfoundland, and educated in Dublin, leaving college to join Sir Evelyn Wood's expedition against the Zulus, and receiving among other wounds a stab from an assegai, which pooled the flesh from his forehead, leaving a peculiar white line all the way across just above his eyebrows that caused him to be nicknamed among his fellow adventurers "Horizontal" Markham.

He was the military officer of the Ningchow, recently wrecked in Alaska under the name of the Princess May, when she set out from Amoy with a crew of Oriental adventurers enlisted to fight the pirates of the South China Sea.

He was the leader of the expedition to rescue Ian Perdicaris when that gentleman was held captive by Raisuli, but the Spanish authorities would not permit the hold band to take ship from Barcelona, and before the matter was adjusted the captive was freed.

He chanced to be in Amalfi at the time of the earthquake at Messina, and, gathering a chosen few on board a fishing boat, he put into both Reggio and Messina, and did valiant work among the toppling buildings, rescuing the unfortunate victims.

BY ALAN DE GRACIO MARKHAM.

SOMEWHERE in the Southwest of the United States there is a cowboy by the name of Taylor Tolliver, whom I would like to rejoin. He and I faced death together, night and day for two weeks, in the heart of Arabia, and but for him I would not be alive to tell this story.

Beyond the fact that he had emigrated from the mountains of Tennessee to Texas, worked there as a cowboy and enlisted to go to the Philippines in one of the volunteer infantry regiments raised by the American government in 1899. I know very little about him. He had been honorably discharged when his regiment was mustered out, and instead of going home as most of the volunteers did, by the military transports to San Francisco, he chose to come around the other way so that he might say he had been around the world.

I met him in the smoking room of the P. & O. steamship from Singapore and we played cards together.

At Colombo there came on board an Armenian jewel merchant by the name of Dinadjian. He had caught a cold in crossing the Himalayas that had developed into consumption and he was trying to get home before he died. The man had been in some of the corners of Asia where I have always longed to go, but his days of gem gathering were over; that was plain. Because we did not shun him as most of the tourists did he spent every possible hour of the quiet trip with us, and when we were passing Socotra Island the day before we were to reach Aden he told us a bit of knowledge which he had been treasuring for years and was now glad to give to us, as he hoped we might make some use of it.

Back of Jidda, on the coast of the Red Sea, lies Mecca, the Mecca of the Great Prophet, and southeast of Mecca, in the southern end of the Nedjed part of the great Arabian desert, is a bitter lake, called by a number of names, but, as I found, referred to among the Arabians as Jebayel. Dinadjian said he had been there and that the sands were rich in turquoise matrices and in free gold, but that he had always been too intensely engaged to return. Furthermore, he being an Armenian would interfere very seriously with his obtaining any satisfactory proprietary rights.

To organise an expedition on short notice was no easy matter, and though the British Resident advised us very strongly against going into the interior without a strong bodyguard, both Tolliver and myself were of the opinion, after looking over the available bodyguard material, that we would be better off entirely alone. That, however, was impossible. We must have attendants, and after we left the coast guides to take us over the mountains, so we began by hiring a half Greek, half Egyptian dragoman named Ben Matoulous.

The Outfitting.

Next we took on a cook who was familiar with the Mohammedan religious calendar and food prohibitions accordingly, as well as how to present a white man's mess. There were three former Abyssinian infantrymen in Aden, having been brought there among the people saved from a sloop that foundered in the Straits of Bab El Mandeb, and something prompted me to take the three along. I was very glad afterward that I did.

As for the transport men we thought it best to proceed to Jidda and trust to finding something very excellent in their line among the men who did the work of carrying Mohammedan pilgrims to Mecca. On arrival at Jidda we found an abundance of Arabian camels and horsemen well mounted and fairly well armed. I had obtained twelve Remingtons in Aden, with abundant ammunition, and to such of the Arabians as were armed with jingals I gave Remingtons instead. Tolliver and I had our own weapons and we used four of the twelve for Ben Matoulous and the three Abyssinians.

The second day beyond Mecca, where we hurried through the usual throng of fanatical pilgrims, glad to escape the knife of some one of them gone amuck, I found that I had made a slight mistake in picking my men at Jidda. I had taken them for size, appearance and equipment. I had avoided the wilder ones. The result was that I had representatives of four different tribes that hated one another, and, also, if they had been wilder it would have been better. To their original wildness the "tamed" ones had merely added a little coastwise cunning and treachery.

The principal trouble maker was a rawboned, square shouldered El Hasa man, who rejoiced in a name that translated means Memory of the White Rosebuds. Rosebud him Rosebud, and, permit me to say, he was a rare flower. His body was lean but powerful, but his legs from the knee down were thin as laths, though shapely, and his foot was small. This thing is often seen among people who live in the saddle almost from childhood.

The day of the [illegible] we had made a dry halt shortly before [illegible] to make two rapid night marches to abandon [illegible], which the guides said could be found in [illegible] northwest of Lake Jebayel. Rosebud came [illegible] by and coolly jostled one of the Abyssinians [illegible] him off his feet. The Abyssinian, named Robert, turned around to see who had done it. Rosebud shot in his face. Robert was unarmed and Rosebud had both pistol and short sword in his girdle, but the ex-infantryman, calling to mind his British boxing lessons, let drive with his right in a swinging uppercut that laid Rosebud fairly across the neck of a kneeling camel.

The El Hasa man was not unconscious, but for a few seconds he was helpless, very largely from surprise, perhaps.

Robert snatched the short sword and would have finished him had not Tolliver run in and stopped the fight.

All afternoon bad blood grew. It was plain that we were going to have trouble among our own men. The men from Oman and Asir were few in number compared to the Hasans and Nedjedans, and though they were spoiling for a fight they remained passive in word and act, only little things showing that they were allied with the Abyssinians, not because they liked the black men, but because they realized their drilled efficiency.

Trouble Is Breeding.

Very plain indeed were the strained relations when the caravan set out at moonrise. The free mingling of the men, the rough, good natured jibes, had given place to a silent grouping of the parties according to their affiliations. It even seemed that the camels understood that the happy family was such no more. We made good progress, however, and a half hour after sunrise camped on the western side of a pillar of rocks which rose like a business block out of the sandy waste.

By keeping close to it we should have shade till noon and could then move to the northern side and on around to the east, the sole disadvantage being our necessity for living on our shortened supply of freighted water and of being showered with sand every time the wind stirred.

It was late in the afternoon and I was sound asleep under my fly when I heard the crack of a rifle and sprang to my feet in time to see a big Nedjedan called Kouf staggering back, back from before Tolliver, tearing at his burnoose. Cartridges dropped from him every step he took. He had been stealing ammunition from three sleeping Omans, and Reb-jedel, an Asir man, had seen him and wakened Tolliver, who stopped to ask no questions, but shot him in the neck. I caught up my magazine rifle and swept my eye over the other men.

Most of them were still asleep, and the sight of the two of us on the alert prevented any demonstration. Kouf was hard hit, but not mortally so, and striking a horse came to a short stop and seemed to recover his faculties. He saw Tolliver standing rifle in hand twenty yards away, and the expression of maddened devilry that came on his face was something well worth seeing. Whirling to the other side of the horse, he began calling hoarsely to his companions. He caught up a jingal and, levelling it over the animal's back, was in the act of firing when Tolliver, throwing his rifle to shoulder once more, sent a bullet through Kouf's head. The jingal went into the air. The sling clattered among the rocks overhead and Kouf fell dead under the hoofs of the prancing mare. Not another man in the now awakened company made the slightest hostile demonstration, though the faces of many were black with hatred, anger and vengeance.

"Markham, I reckon we better round up the ammunition and stow one at a time after this. Think so?" drawled Tolliver.

Without further ado we stripped every man Jack of them at the muzzle, did it half laughingly but quickly, all save the Abyssinians, and packing each load [illegible] separately we made special [illegible] and [illegible] as the man went down, the Abyssinians in charge of the animals carrying the cartridges.

It was a unique situation and far from a comfortable one, but it was the only thing to do. Shortly after midnight we were on the crest of a ridge three or four hundred feet higher than the surrounding rough country, when Ben Matoulous called my attention to two lights off to the northeast. At first glance I thought they were stars low down at the horizon, but very soon one of them was blotted out for a moment and then shone again. We had company of some sort or other in that inhospitable country.

Now we began the descent of a long, dry gorge, where the entire caravan was strung out over at least a quarter of a mile, and the going in the darkness was very precarious indeed. Just as daylight was breaking I heard a cry from the head of the cavalcade and the camels began to act peculiarly. When I came up the men and animals who had preceded me were grouped about a fine pool, fifty feet in diameter, in the bed of the gorge, fed by some spring under the rocks. A few minutes' work with a pick served to open up the hidden duct, and we had water in abundance, as cool and sweet as any Berkshire spring.

Deserters Speed Away.

When we had made camp and the sun was up Tolliver and I were taking our first comfortable smoke in days, when one of the black men came up, saluted and said:—

"Three boy, three camel go 'way."

It was the truth. Three Nedjedans had deserted in the darkness, and though I questioned every one of their tribesmen and Tolliver and I pondered the matter over carefully we could come to no explanation of it. If only one had been missing I would have thought that he had lagged and gone over a cliff in the darkness, but the number missing made the disappearance purposeful and perhaps ominous.

We were now within striking distance of our objective point, and, for that matter, might be in rich ground even then. Satisfying ourselves that all was quiet and, leaving the Abyssinians on guard we proceeded down the gorge, and Tolliver panned several high bars, finding gold in every one, but not in the quantities we had anticipated. There was no trace of ironstones, and the formation around us was certainly very different from that surrounding the Persian wells, according to the descriptions I had obtained of them.

Resting for the full twenty-four hours, we set out to follow the gorge, breaking camp with daylight the next day. I learned later how fortunate we were to have made this move just when we did. About six miles further on we came to a transverse crevasse that looked very slightly water worn, and just beyond the gorge widened into what might once have been a small lake. On the southeastern side of this was another pool at the base of a clump of rocks separated from the main cliffs. Around this lair were many signs of old encampments. Tolliver left the camp while I was disposing the caravan with some idea of defence, since it was now certain that a wandering band of Bedouins had been in the vicinity. He was gone about half an hour when I heard a shout from him and raising my eyes saw him standing on a rock at the far eastern side of the enclosure, waving his arms, pan in one hand and something clutched in the other.

I hurriedly completed my work and went over to him.

"Look at these, Markham! Look at these!" he cried, displaying some very fine fragments of turquoise matrix. He had found them in a rift in the sand of the bar at the very base of the barrier.

The working conditions were awful. Sand storms, hot winds, days of blazing stillness, when the temperature reached one hundred and twenty-five for hours at a stretch! The sixth night there was a great stir among the animals first and the men afterward. Our Arabs were positive that we were being reconnoitred by a party in the darkness. They had [illegible] up in our wind on the cliff tops, as they thought, but the swirl inside the depression had brought their [illegible] our camels' noses. Nothing was seen, nothing [illegible]—

In Ten Minutes We Had Driven Them to Cover Completely

Strategy and Force.

An English platoon on the cliff tops could have handled us exactly as Piet Cronje and his men were handled, but the range was too long for the Arabs from the north, east and west, and we were protected by a clump of rocks on the south. The strategists among them would figure out two things if we were to be attacked. First, they could descend the gorges and fight us on the bed of the dry lake; second, they must know that we could not remain where we were more than a few days longer and they could fall on us when we moved. Our sole defensive measures were to keep the camp in a state of preparation and to post guards at the two entrances to the enclosure from the gorges.

The second night after the reconnaissance Tolliver wakened me at one and I took up the watch, we having divided the twenty-four hours into four even watches, breaking at one o'clock and seven o'clock night and day. It must have been an hour before sunrise when I heard an odd sound from the vicinity of the western entrance to the gorge. It was like a shout ending in a groan. I ran rapidly toward the spot, moving as silently as possible, and nearing the entrance was aware that something was crawling toward me. It was a dark body—a man on all fours, one of the Oman men on guard, with a terrible cut in his neck and shoulder. An effort had been made to decapitate him on post. Clutching my neck, he rolled over dead.

I blew my whistle and its shrill summons went echoing among the rocks. Two sets of shouts and cries answered. One came from the camp behind me and the other from the gorge.

The Bedouins had sent several men to creep up on the guard of three men and murder them. The Oman had escaped after being struck and tried to crawl to the camp, since he was so terribly hurt he could not call out more than the one sound he had uttered. Doubtless the shouts came from the main body moving on to the attack. Dropping on my knee, I began pumping away into the entrance of the gorge, and instantly there came that terrible sound—the shriek of a wounded, frightened horse. The whole gap began to blaze with flashes as they replied, and from the camp came the crackle of the guns of Tolliver and our wakened men. I, being squarely between the two bodies, was in a most dangerous position.

The air seemed to be alive with bullets and slugs, and [illegible] I ran south to get out of the line, turning in time to see a large body of mounted men emerge from the mouth of the gorge and bear down on the camp. I emptied my magazine into them and then ran with all speed to keep from being cut off. A terrified camel came galloping toward me and I barely got out of his way. It struck me that the cries of the attacking party were echoed in kind by the men in the camp, and suddenly as I drew near I saw that a body of our men was leaving the shelter of the camp's defences and charging the enemy. No, the cries were tribal calls! The whole Nedjedan Hasan faction was deserting to the enemy.

A pretty state of affairs indeed! I shoved another clip into my rifle and stopped running long enough to send every bullet into the treacherous crowd, then I ran for my life. As I leaped over the piles of goods we had arranged as a permanent breastworks one of the Oman boys drove viciously at me with his knife but missed me, and then, seeing who it was, would have fallen on the ground at my feet if I had permitted him. Tolliver was having a hard job getting the proper ammunition distributed. Thank our stars the deserters had left with only a few charges each.

The juncture between the attacking party and the deserters was an unfortunate manoeuvre for them, as it broke the force of the raid long enough for us to get started into really effectual firing and we made it so hot that the whole party with wild yells dashed off to one side, and as it was now too dark to make them out we stopped firing.

Tolliver's Courage.

The three men who had been at the other entrance had vanished. That left us nine men in camp against a possible fifty or sixty. Sighting the Remingtons to the safest range for the Abyssinians and doing very careful work ourselves, Tolliver and I led off, making it hot for the band. They were not well enough armed to reply effectively, the best fire they had coming from my own men in their midst, and in ten minutes we had driven them to cover completely. They could not shelter their animals among the rocks, and, though we disliked to put down such fine creatures, we began on them. That settled the matter. They saw their position was untenable and at a signal cry the whole band dashed into the open skirting the north side of the dry lake and vanished into the gorge whence they had come, with the loss of but one man.

There was no question about what we must do. It was only a matter of time till they could finish us. Tolliver and I did not own camels. Picking our best animals and packing only expeditionar[illegible] necessities we abandoned everything else.

"Shall we try to take the stuff?" said Tolliver, pointing to the result of our work.

"We certainly will," said I, and we did.

In less than fifteen minutes after the last shot was fired we were off for the entrance to the other gorge. The Bedouins could not follow us and overwhelm us with their numbers without paying a heavy price for their victory. At the first sign of attack all we need do was stand and let them come on in slender columns, the only way they could attack in the dry gorge. If they meant to harass us from above they would have to mount the cliffs and circle the dry lake. The natural thing for them to do would be to follow along the cliffs until we were forced to camp in some spot where their circling raiding methods would be effective.

It was a miserable flight, straight into the very heart of the desert. We had taken all hands into council after we were safely started and the unanimous decision was that it was best to push a little to the north and strike the caravan route to Katal. The tribesmen were of the opinion that since we had inflicted so heavy a loss on the Nedjedans they would go to extremes for vengeance. Also our arms, animals, the gold and matrices would make fine loot.

The first day I had a bad riding fall among the rocks and dislocated my left shoulder. Tolliver and one of the Abyssinians got it back, but the suffering in conjunction with the fall was something frightful.

The second day we made dry camp out on the undulating waste of sand between two low clumps of rock. Better ground for which we had been aiming had proved to be a retreating illusion and, completely exhausted, both men and animals, we were glad to reach even the rocks. Before sunset three different bodies of Bedouins had appeared on the horizon and then vanished, and as the dark came down I said to Tolliver:—

"I should not be surprised if to-night will wind up this game."

"No. It looks that way. I don't care much, but let's give them hell from the saddle as long as we can hold out. It has been good fun so far."

The Big Attack.

About midnight came the expected attack and it was most cleverly planned. No American Indian manoeuvre could have surpassed it. At least one hundred men rode over the western sky line, mounted on camels and horses, as we could see with the glasses, and that they were fully aware what sort of marksmen and rides we had was shown by the respectful distance the troop kept. Coming about as they dared to come without drawing our fire, the distinct groups separated one by one and circling took up positions to the west and north, the last comers being in the northeast.

At a signal, shrilled from the centre, each little troop of about ten men dashed down on the camp. It is needless to say that we could not fire on all of them nor, worn out as we were, could we keep our heads and nerves steady enough to concentrate on one group. Our fire was very ineffective and when they were near enough they poured in a hail of slugs and bullets. In two minutes' time one of the blacks and one of the Omans were badly wounded. Tolliver had a rip down his thigh and several of the animals were disabled. Suddenly Ben Matoulous cried out that he saw Rosebud, at least recognized his horse. Tolliver caught up his rifle once more and, following the dragoman's finger, made out the Hasan. The rifle cracked and Rosebud threw up his arms and rolled over over his horse's hips.

As the groups concentrated they began to feel our fire and at a signal they whirled and galloped back to their former posts. In an hour they repeated the manoeuvre, and this time they got two fire of us and I had a half spent ball buried in the muscles of my bad shoulder. Things looked very bad indeed when suddenly there was excitement on the right, a grand shift of front and Ben Matoulous pointed out a large body of men approaching from the southeast. They were riding like the wind and when near enough for their cries to be distinguishable the last of the Omans with us announced that they were his countrymen. Apparently it was merely a matter of whether or not one or the other party murdered and looted us, but Ben Matoulous leaped on a horse and was away toward them, answering their tribal calls. They swerved in our direction and in ten minutes we were surrounded by them. It was pleasant to find that we had been in no danger of being raided at their hands. Two of the guards who had vanished from the east entrance to the gorge four days before on the occasion of the first attack were Omans and had made their way to their fellow tribesmen, so that the expedition was practically a rescue party.

It was a rather costly one, however. After a brush with the other band the Omans returned and an hour before daylight we moved on with them to the southeast. It was two weeks before Tolliver and I could leave them to proceed to the coast, as the sheik seemed bent on keeping us with him. What his purpose was we had no idea, but we were helpless, and, anyhow, we were in sad need of recuperation. At the end of two weeks he signified that he was willing we should depart and suggested that we leave with him our gold and matrices. I was amazed at the alacrity with which Tolliver accepted this, without even giving me a glance or consulting me in any way. I had been laid up in the camp by the springs, where the sheik always made his headquarters at that season of the year, and so I did not know all that had been going on.

When the stuff was brought in from our effects for [illegible] I was amazed to see how it had shrunk. Half the matrices were gone and four-fifths of the gold. Tolliver did not seem to mind in the least and [illegible] as we went on, our way told me the reason. Bit by bit he had [illegible] the piles himself, discarding the stuff among our things so that the sheik got only one-tenth of what we had.

For And About Women

What training would prepare a young woman as adequately for the work of a mother as a lawyer is expected to be trained for the court, the actor for the stage, the physician for the hospital, or the teacher for the schoolroom? Leaving behind those problems of control of environment that every housewife must encounter, let us go on to the problems that arise only because of motherhood—that except for the children would never be confronted. It is with these that our present discussion is concerned.

The most obvious, of course, are the problems of the daily physical care, first in babyhood, then in childhood. Here is the baby, a little soft, limp bundle, with many active appendages, to bathe, to dress, to keep properly warm and properly cool, to hold in the right way, to feed at the right times and in the right amount and with the right kind of food.

REACHES THE CUNNING AGE

By and by he spends more hours awake. He watches, listens, laughs, kicks, pulls, tries to play. He is so cunning! How much may he be fondled and played with? He is forming habits of physical activity and manner of response to his mother, his father, his furniture—to all persons and things. Is it any use trying to shape his character so early? Presently he begins to stand, to walk. What sort of shoes should he wear? His teeth are being cut. May he have a pacifier or a rubber ring? He attempts to eat everything he can reach. How much may he partake of his father's diet?

Must he go to bed at sundown, or may he stay up to play with father? He loves to hear little songs at bedtime and in the morning. His ideas become more definite and abstract, and he begins to ask questions, questions about everything he sees and hears and imagines and wonders.

By and by he starts to school. He learns to read, and is ready to devour everything of a narrative nature that he can lay hands on. He makes acquaintances among the school boys and girls and receives some share of their ideas and experiences. How shall his mother retain his confidence and sympathy?

THE POWER TO PERCEIVE WORTH

To be sure, these many problems involve vastly more than instruction in classroom science. The growth through her own childhood and girlhood of a natural, vigourous physical life with abundant reserve strength and resistant nerves; the development of wholesome ideas and ideals of marriage as a responsibility and motherhood as a blessing and a trust; the cultivation of habits of self-reliance and service for others; the ready sympathy with others' troubles and joys, little or great; the fine combination of gentleness and firmness; the true perception of worth in life and in mankind, and the consequent unregretted bestowal of her love—all these are foundational. It requires so much of personality, of well trained character, of vitality to be the artist mother!

Such a training in character and physique is the essential prerequisite of those sciences that will give her definite instruction in the care and training of her children. What are those sciences? Chiefly biology, hygiene, psychology and sociology.

STUDIES SHE MIGHT PURSUE

To suggest only a few of the subjects within these sciences that are particularly important for her training, these would include, in sociology the importance of the family in social welfare, the history of human marriage, the development of monogamy, the experiments in other forms of marriage and why they have been abandoned, the value of courtship, the fundamental causes of divorce and of infant mortality, the conditions that have produced more comradeship between husband and wife, the wife's share of responsibility in the home.

In psychology she should learn how to study the developing mind and spirit of the little child, how to observe and make the most of the characteristics that are predominant in each stage of his development—in infancy, childhood and adolescence, how habits are formed, how appetites and emotions are trained.

In biology she should gain a clear understanding of the wonderful progress of reproduction and the development of the embryo, and the biological meaning of birth, what is known of heredity and congenital influences, the influence of sunlight, food, and temperature upon growth.

Unless she is one of the few who have gone on to college, or at least to high school, she has had little study of any of these sciences. Yet the fundamental principles of them all might be taught her profitably in the elementary grades, through her nature study, geography, physiology, history and literature.

THE NEED OF TRAINING

Practically, mother instinct and more or less of a common school education have been the only guide granted to most of the millions of mothers of our own generation. What has been the result? (1) Not less than one marriage in 12 ends in divorce; (2) childlessness is increasing at a rate that alarms economists and sociologists; (3) infanticide abounds, both through ignorance and intention; (4) the death rate under five years of age, when children are most in the mother's care, is higher than at any other 5-year period, not more than seventy children of every hundred surviving until school age; (5) more than 75 per cent. of criminals became offenders before they were old enough to vote; (6) the increasing weakness of parental influence is everywhere evident and loudly deplored.—The Outlook.

'Colds'

Don't trifle with a cold; no one can tell what the end may be. Pneumonia, catarrh, chronic bronchitis and consumption invariably result from neglected colds. Nothing can be compared with

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

Ladies of Culture and Refinement Use Salvia Hair Tonic. It makes the Hair Beautiful

At last a remedy has been discovered that will positively destroy this pest.

That Dandruff is caused by germs is accepted by every sensible person. Dandruff is the root of all hair evils.

SALVIA will kill the dandruff germs and remove Dandruff in ten days, or money back.

McDermid and Bury guarantees it. It will grow hair, stop itching scalp, falling hair, and make the hair thick and abundant. It prevents hair from turning gray, and adds life and lustre.

SALVIA is a hair dressing that has become the favourite with women of taste and culture, who know the social value of beautiful hair. A large generous bottle costs only 50c. at leading druggists everywhere, and in Peterborough by McDermid and Bury. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle.

Also sold at Payne's Drug Store.

WANT TO DO AWAY WITH TRUCK HORSES

Why should we discard horses from our trucks and delivery wagons and continue to use them with our street-sprinklers and sweepers? asks the Literary Digest. Paris is introducing motor street-cleaning machines, and New York is experimenting along the same line. In an article in La Nature (Paris, November 25), Captain Renaud tells of the service now installed in Verseilles and about to be introduced into Paris. We must recognize, Captain Renaud thinks, that the cleaning of the public streets in most of our cities has not hitherto been organized so as to answer the needs of modern life, and that especially it is not in proper relationship with the speed and intensity of urban circulation. He writes:

How Cleaning is Done.

"The general hygiene of a city depends at once on cleaning, properly so called, and on the removal of waste. We propose to note briefly how cleaning is carried on in most cities, in order to show its imperfection and inconvenience; we shall then indicate how, owing to the powerful agencies furnished by automobile traction, it is possible to organize a system of great efficiency, whose adoption is becoming daily more imperative.

"Cleaning includes in all cases watering and sweeping.

"Watering is done either with the hose or with watering carts. With the hose the waterers flush the streets very unequally; the water, falling from a considerable height, washes away the road, changes the dust to mud, makes the holes into puddles, and the street into a pond. When carried out during the day this system of watering interferes greatly with the water supply. For these reasons, in frequented streets the hose is replaced by the watering-cart.

"But this cart, drawn by a horse, has a necessarily small capacity, perhaps 250 gallons, and is soon emptied, when it must return, to be refilled, generally by a long route, losing so much time that the watered street has generally dried by its return. Again as the horse draws it along rather slowly, it actually constitutes an obstacle to all more rapid vehicles and increases the congestion.

"As for the sweeping, if it is done by hand it is desperately slow and of doubtful efficiency; if it is done with mechanical sweepers, drawn generally by a cheap horse, it stops traffic as badly as the watering-carts do and it is hard to operate with regularity.

Can Do Much More Work.

"When we consider the feverish activity of urban circulation and the ceaselessly increasing development of automobilism, we must realize that if the sweeping-machines are not to be obstacles they must themselves be motor-driven, have great working power, and a speed comparable to that of the vehicles amid which they must circulate. Thus only may they finally accomplish their purpose regularly and properly, without impeding the motion of other vehicles or being hindered by them.

"Automobile watering-machines, capable not only of carrying three times as much fluid as the ordinary cart, but also of making thrice or four times the speed, must thus do in the same time four times as much work. Also a force-pump may be operated by the motor, projecting the water under pressure and thus washing a larger area more thoroughly.

"Automobile sweepers have the same qualities of speed and regularity as the waterers; they also have the advantage over the horse sweepers of being able to include a sprinkling outfit so that the moist sweeping spoken of above may be realized.

"Several cities have already made progress along this line. Paris had a steam Dion-Bouton sprinkler as early as 1904, and now this city is about to replace with automobile sweepers all its present horse-drawn equipment. Versailles, St. Ouen, Havre, Deauville, and Monte Carlo have automobile sprinklers and sweepers. In Versailles a single motor does the same work daily as eight horse-drawn sprinklers. With sufficient means for replenishment it can water hourly a minimum surface of 20,000 square yards. It is asserted that the municipality realizes with its motor an economy of 40 per cent. The automobile sweeper, with a 14-horse-power motor, has a cylinder broom and a pressure-sprinkler . . . —the work of four ordinary horse-sweepers . . . with an economy of 66 per cent."

A Theatre Hint.

Pasteboard bottoms for bags, boxes, opera bags and book covers are generally used, but half the women who cover them do not know how to do it quickly.

Unless you have sharp knives and a straight eye it is cheaper to have the boards cut. This can be done at a box manufactory, a book bindery or a picture framer's, and the cost should be small. Do not use boards that are too light, as they warp and break. There is no necessity to sew through them, so thickness makes no difference in the covering.

Never put any material over cardboard without an interlining of cotton wadding. This is pasted smoothly on the top of form and just enough edge is left to turn in with the covering material. About a quarter of an inch is enough.

When intended for work bags, handkerchief cases, or anything that is to be scented, slip the satchet between the layers of the cotton before pasting. In this way there is no danger of the dark powder showing through the covering.

If the covering is plain, cutting it is simple. The pasteboard is placed on the wrong side of the material, and its shape traced with a soft pencil. Half or three-quarters of an inch is then cut beyond this line. Where a figured material is chosen it must be fitted to the board by slipping it under the material as it lies when finished. Hold firmly in place and reverse the material, tracing the line on wrong side and cutting beyond it as directed.

The cover may be pasted on the wrong side, but there is less danger of slipping if the edges are sewed. The easiest way to do this is to run a gathering string in the space just beyond the outline. Work on the wrong side to follow the line and put the gather—which is not drawn up in working—about a quarter of an inch beyond the pencil mark.—New York Times.

Cauliflower Algrettes.

Break up the remains of a cold, cooked cauliflower into neat little sprays, and season with salt and red pepper and grated cheese. Have ready a good light frying batter, made with two ounces of flour, a dessertspoonful of salad oil, half a gill of warm water, a dessertspoonful of grated cheese, a seasoning of salt and pepper, and the stiffly whipped white of an egg; dip the cauliflower in this, and fry a golden brown in boiling fat. Drain well and serve dusted with cheese and red pepper.

The Weak, Lame, Aching Back

Comes From The Kidneys.

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which these afflicted undergo.

On the first sign of backache Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken immediately so as to avoid years of suffering from kidney trouble.

They go right to the seat of the trouble, heal the delicate membranes of the kidneys and make their action regular and natural.

Mrs. Joseph Throop, Upper Point de Bute, N.B., writes:—"I cannot speak too well of Doan's Kidney Pills. For two years I was so tired life was a burden, and I got up more tired than when I went to bed, and my back was so lame I could hardly straighten up. I took different kinds of medicine, but none of them did me any good until a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I did so, and to-day I don't know what it is to be tired, and my lame back is all gone. I can recommend them to any person suffering with lame back and that terrible tired feeling."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

CRIME AGAINST HUMAN RACE

At the Government's colony at Molokai, Hawaii, the lepers are allowed to marry and reproduce themselves. A considerable number of the 10,000 individuals comprising the colony were born right on the island. New marriages are freely contracted among them and the colony is constantly being augmented by the issue of these unions, yet the United States has made no effort to prevent this condition of affairs.

This is a greater crime against the human race than anything I discovered even in the most unenlightened districts of Europe.

In the course of my travels I visited the chambers of horrors which every "civilized" country has to present. In Germany I saw the community of hunchbacks. In Russia I went through the National "Orphan" Asylum, where the blind and crippled illegitimate offspring of the Russian soldiery and peasant girls are committed. In every European country I studied the insane asylums, the hospitals, the homes for incurables, and similar institutions, evidencing in the most convincing manner "man's inhumanity to man." But nothing in all I saw struck me with such a strong feeling of revulsion as the conditions which I know exist at Molokai.

It may be that leprosy is not inheritable. There is, I believe, a difference of opinion among scientific men on that point. But there is no difference of opinion as to the communicability of the disease from the leprous mother to the nursing child, a proposition which is corroborated by the fact that almost every child born of leprous parents at Molokai is, or soon becomes, a leper.

In the matter of children, I believe quality, not quantity. If quantity can be combined with quality, very well: but there are altogether too many unfit children—children who would have been better off had they never seen the light of day.

When President Roosevelt preached against race suicide he made a great mistake in not pointing this out. Indeed, in making presents as he did to the mothers of large families, irrespective of the quality of the individuals composing them, he showed that he himself failed to recognize the importance of this matter.

Some time ago I had an opportunity to visit a family of twelve children, the parents of whom had come in for considerable praise from the ex-President, and yet I don't believe there was in the whole twelve of those children sufficient mentality, sufficient physical stability, or sufficient moral strength to make one child of the kind which benefits the race.

The truth of the matter is we don't need more human beings, we need a better class of them. Laws should be passed making it impossible for the unfit person to reproduce his kind. Such laws, of course, are quite out of the question at the present time when the public is not educated up to the point where the need for such regulation is generally recognized.

But the time will come. In England the students of eugenics are making rapid strides. The Eugenics Society of London conducts open meetings attended by the general public, where all these problems are frankly discussed. With all our boasted freedom such a thing is impossible here. The lecturer who dared to address the public on this most important subject in enlightened America would be arrested for using "obscene" language.

Fortunately, there is nothing to prevent our discussing the importance of living clean lives and keeping our bodies clean. That is what I have been preaching throughout the country and Europe.

Our principal vice in the United States is dissipation. By that I do not intend to limit the meaning of the word to intoxication, as generally understood. Extravagance of all kinds, to my mind, is dissipation, and may lead to intoxication just as quickly as alcohol. In this sense I have seen people get drunk on beefsteak and salad.

Pruned Canal Bill.

Ottawa, March 1.—A sub-committee of the railway committee yesterday morning eliminated from the Georgian Bay Canal bill most, if not all, of the features regarded as objectionable. The principal of these provides that the company shall not take the lands of Ontario and Quebec without the consent of the Provincial Governments, except to the extent necessary for the purposes of construction of the canal, and the necessary work incidental to and for the purpose of developing power for the operation of the canal. Another clause makes the rates subject to the Railway Commission.

Criticism having been made that the bill did not state the provisional directors, these were filled in. They are: David McLaren, president of the Bank of Ottawa; Senator Edwards, Senator Belcourt, Hon. C. R. Devlin, J. B. Klock, K. W. Hutchinson and G. P. Brophy.

The bill will come up in the full committee next Thursday.

Can't Get Hangman.

Montreal, March 1.—Reports from Fraserville, Que., state that E. Martin, sheriff of that district, is seriously ill from worry over his inability to hire a hangman. With an execution only eight days off, he cannot locate a man both willing and able to take the position, and may have to undertake the task himself. Since the passing of Radcliffe, Canada has had no official hangman, the custom being for the sheriff to secure one, paying him his traveling expenses and a fee of $75.

Mr. Martin endeavored to secure the services of Ellis, the expert executioner who officiated at the hangings of Candy and Creola in this city, but Ellis is now in the west. The man to be hung is Jules Puourde, found guilty of the murder of a neighbor named Martin last year. Sheriff Lemieux of Montreal has shipped the scaffold from the local jail to Fraserville.

Progress on Tariff Bill.

Ottawa, March 1.—Hon. Mr. White's bill for the appointment of a tariff commission was again taken up last night in committee of the whole House. The Minister of Finance added an amendment that the commission should report to Parliament within 15 days after the opening of the session; or within 10 days of the making of the report, should the House be then in session. With this amendment the bill was adopted, and now stands for third reading.

After the 6 o'clock recess Mr. White introduced an amendment to the tariff bill whereby the information gathered by the commission shall be laid on the table of the House; that is, that it shall report to Parliament instead of to the Finance Minister, and that the information will be available to the entire House. The Opposition agreed to the amendment and it was carried without discussion.

Cannibals In Portuguese Africa.

New York, March 1.—A Lisbon cable says: Serious revolt, marked by atrocities of cannibals, has started in Portuguese Guinea, Africa, and the Government yesterday rushed a transport with troops to the scene.

The bodies of four Portuguese soldiers, who were killed in fighting, were eaten by cannibals at a feast.

The natives attacked a European settlement, driving off the defenders and carrying men, women and children into the jungle. It is feared that most of them have been put to death, and perhaps devoured by the barbarous tribesmen.

Rev. Mr. Richesen's Mind Going.

Boston, March 1.—Clarence V. T. Richeson, the condemned murderer, is rapidly becoming but a shadow of his former self, according to the officers of the Charles street jail. The guards are convinced that he is losing his mind and are beginning to doubt if he will live to see the electric chair.

Can Cut Rate on Medicines.

Washington, March 1.—Patent medicines and other patented articles may be sold without reference to the prices fixed by the patentee.

This was the opinion handed down yesterday by Justice Wright in the equity court, when he refused the application of a drug manufacturing concern for an injunction to prevent a local druggist from "cutting" prices without the manufacturers' permission. The court declared that the patentee of an article could control the price by which it should be sold by a "licensee," but that once the article had found its way to the open market by outright purchase all right to fix the price passed from the patentee.

THE LIMIT IS REACHED

Britain Cannot Further Reduce Cable Tolls

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY

Ottawa, March 1.—Postmaster-General Pelletier made two important announcements in the House of Commons last evening, when the matter of further reduction in cable rates was brought up by J. E. Armstrong (E. Lambton).

He had been in correspondence with the British postal authorities, he said, and had a letter from Postmaster-General Samuels in which the latter said he could not see his way clearly to obtaining a further cut in cable rates, nor was he favorable to the plan of a state-owned cable. Mr. Pelletier said he did not agree with the British Postmaster-General and had written him, telling him so and asking him to co-operate in getting a further reduction in cable rates.

The other announcement of the Postmaster-General was that the Department was to undertake a reorganization of the whole system of rural mail delivery.

On the motion to go into supply, J. E. Armstrong brought up the question of government ownership of telephones and telegraphs.

He argued that the telephone and telegraph could be handled with great economy through the Postoffice Department. If the trunk lines of the telephone system were handled by the Government, these would be a great benefit to the country at large.

Mr. Armstrong said that the proposition of Government ownership was along the lines of the Hydro-Electric Commission. There are thirty municipalities now interested. The commission brings the wires to the municipalities, and, in like manner, the trunk lines for telephones could be built from city to city and municipality to municipality.

Mr. Armstrong pointed out that the Hydro-Electric Commission were strongly in favor of Government-owned telephone and telegraph lines, as they could more readily distribute power to the farmers by using the same poles.

Mr. Armstrong advocated that the cables should be owned by the Canadian and British Governments and quoted a number of statistics to show the feasibility and the advantages of the scheme. Wireless telegraphy, he believed, would within a few years be more in general use, and it would be of great advantage to navigation in the Hudson Bay.

In closing, Mr. Armstrong said that he sincerely hoped that the Government would appoint a commission to investigate the whole matter. Such figures, he believed, would be secured as would lead the Government to decide in favor of Government ownership.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux followed and went into an exhaustive review of the whole question, including the feasibility and possibility of the Government taking over and operating the cable systems.

The recent reduction in the rates was, he believed, a step in the right direction. Mr. Lemieux emphasized the value to the Canadian press and public which would accrue from a state owned cable and the consequent lower rates. He said that much of the news which we receive from the Mother Country at the present time is more or less tainted because of coming through American services. This gave the question an Imperial aspect.

In closing, Mr. Lemieux moved that the Postmaster-General take steps to obtain a further reduction in cable rates between Canada and Great Britain.

W. F. Maclean (South York) strongly advocated Government ownership of telegraphs, telephones and cables.

"The cable monopoly in England is to-day all-powerful," he said. "The control has now passed to the Americans, who control also the telegraphs and telephones on this continent. State competition is the only possible solution and $2,000,000 would be sufficient to establish a state-owned cable.

Parcel posts were next taken up by Mr. Maclean. Propositions were before Congress for the establishment of a parcel post system. The only way to handle these questions is to go into the business. "Let us have state competition," he said, "if we cannot get state ownership."

Hon. L. P. Pelletier complimented Mr. Armstrong on the way he had handled his subject. He had placed before the House and the country many valuable facts. His speech was so valuable that a commission was almost unnecessary, as no commission could collect more facts.

The question of cable rates had been engaging the attention of the Government. While he believed there should be reasonable cable rates, he thought the question of rural mail delivery was more important and this question was now occupying his attention. It had formerly been conducted in a very loose manner, but he planned to put it on a systematic basis.

A special branch of the Postoffice Department would be created shortly, he said, to handle this feature and it was intended to have as complete a service as possible.

Cable rates are, he thought, excessively high. He said he had negotiated with Postmaster-General Samuels of England, in regard to the still further reductions in the rates, but Mr. Samuels appeared to think that further reductions were out of the question at present.

Mr. Pelletier asked Mr. Lemieux not to press his motion. It was an academic one and could do no good, while the Department was doing all it could.

Mr. Lemieux, however, did not accede and the motion was defeated on division of 71 to 49.

BOYS IN CHAINS.

Lads at Mimico Industrial School Put on Bread and Water.

Toronto, March 1.—Charges that Wilbert Spain, a fifteen-year-old inmate of the Victoria Industrial School, was kept manacled in bed for a month, was kept for that time on a diet of bread and water, and was flogged as punishment for running away from school were substantiated and readily admitted by Superintendent Chester Ferrier at the investigation into the conduct of the school, which was opened at Mimico by Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith and Property Commissioner R. C. Harris yesterday afternoon.

The superintendent declared that in his opinion putting the boys in irons was the only cure for the running-away habit.

"After long years of experience," said Mr. Ferrier, "I have found that chaining them up is the only way to keep boys from running away. The custom was here when I came here sixteen years ago."

From January 9 to February 11, Mr. Ferrier admitted, Wilbert Spain had been subjected to this treatment.

Six other boys of the institution also told of having been punished in a similar manner for running away, the periods varying from a week to a month at a time.

That the investigation is likely to result in the realization of important reforms was suggested by a statement of Dr. Bruce Smith towards the adjournment of the inquiry.

"As a result of this investigation," said Dr. Smith, "I hope such reformation will be brought about that there will be a classification made of the inmates of such schools as these, by which the line may be drawn between those who are mentally deficient and those who are normal."

Railways Got Nothing From It.

Washington, March 1.—Operating officials of railroads, testifying yesterday in the Interstate Commerce Commissions' investigation of the express companies, declared that the railroads made no profit out of express business.

James Peabody, statistician of the Santa Fe system, insisted that revenues of the railroads from express business were wholly inadequate. He objected to the reduction of the express rates because that would have a tendency, he said, to increase the shipment of certain classes of traffic by express, reduce the revenues of the railroads from freight traffic and overload the passenger service of railroads, all of which carry express service on passenger trains.

PETERBOROUGH FRIDAY MARCH 1 1912

PETERBORO'S TAX RATE FOR 1912 IS 22 MILLS

Estimates of Expenditure for the Year Compared With Expenditure in 1911---No Discount for Prompt Payment ---Rate the Same as Last Year.

The tax rate for 1912 was fixed at last night's meeting of the Finance Committee, and remains at the same rate as last year, 22 mills on the dollar.

It was after midnight when the committee adjourned with this conclusion after a long and tedious examination of the details of expenditures and receipts for the coming year. The chairmen of the various committees have been preparing their statements of requirements during the past few weeks and the pruning hook was called into use at intervals during last night's session. On the whole, however, there remained but few alterations to be made and the estimates upon which the rate was based are as follows:

The Engineer's estimate of $20,500 for streets and bridges was pared down by Alderman Buller to $19,000, which amount includes $1,000 for the "White Elephant," the south city the "White Elephant," the south ity pumping station.

NO DISCOUNT ON TAXES

At the suggestion of Mayor Bradburn no discount will be allowed on taxes this year, no matter when paid. This will effect an estimated saving of $3400 in loss of taxes to the city's treasury by reason of the discount heretofore given to encourage an early settlement of same. It is argued that citizens will not actually suffer any loss by this change in policy as the discount given in past years had to be provided for by ratepayers indirectly. For instance the abandonment of the discount principle this year has gone a long way towards enabling the committee to strike the rate for 1912 at 22 mills instead of increasing it by half a mill or more, as was expected.

Taxes are to be paid in two equal instalments—one on August 1st, the second on November 15th, as last year. But five per cent. will be added to all taxes unpaid when due, with no option of a discount.

The Peterborough Industrial exhibition people will get an increase to their annual grant of $100.

The committee's recommendations will be presented at Monday night's council meeting and will likely be fully endorsed.

WAS BELOW ZERO ON ELEVEN DAYS DURING LAST MONTH

30 Degrees Was Coldest and 39 Above the Highest Reached in February.

FINISH WAS STORMY

The first half of February saw practically all the cold weather we had during the month, while the latter half furnished the stormy weather. There were 11 days during the month at zero, or below, as compared with but four during the same month a year ago. The coldest day was the 10th with 30 degrees below zero in the morning. The highest the temperature rose that day was to 5 below zero. Other cold days were the 4th, 14 below; 9th, 23 below; 11th, 23 below; 12th, 9 below; 29th, 10 below.

The temperature rose to 39 degrees on the 18th and 19th. This was the highest during the month. It was above the freezing point in the shade on six days.

The snowfall amounted to 26 inches; rainfall, on the 19th and 20th, .07 of an inch.

Although practically every bad storm in "the worst in the memory of the oldest inhabitant," that of the 22nd was undoubtedly the most severe we have had for a number of

Only a Few Small Mines in England are Being Operated To-day —Steamers Are Tied Up

CONFERENCES HELD

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 1.—Conservative estimates of the number of men on strike this morning place it at one million and forty nine thousand and there is not a single pick working except in Northern Wales and Warwickshire, where the miners of some small concerns are working under police protection. No trouble has occurred yet and the mine owners have made no effort to get strike breakers. Generally speaking, the strikers are taking advantage of the opportunity to have a holiday.

Public opinion generally supports the government in making mine owners admit the minimum wage. Most towns have a supply of coal on hand sufficient for a few days and the weather is mild. The first serious result was shown this morning in the tieing up of hundreds of steamers in the Thames and Mersey for lack of coal. Conferences between the government and the parties are proceeding to-day.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 1.—Far-reaching effects of the coal strike were in evidence this morning, when the news came from Hamburg and other continental cities that the prices of bunker steamship coal has been doubled.

To-morrow, unless some settlement is made, the factories employing half a million people, depending on instant supplies of coal, will be shut down in England alone. That will be only the beginning of the effect on the industrial works, for they nearly all depend on steam for power.

Judgment To Be Appealed

Special to The Examiner.

PEKIN, CHINA, MARCH 1.— Fifteen million dollars damage has been caused by incendiary fires during the last few days in this city. ASQUITH'S OPINION

TORONTO, MARCH 1.—A special cable to the Toronto Daily Star to-day says Premier Asquith has become quite convinced that the miners of England at present do not get a decent living wage. Some of them are working for three shillings per day, with large families to feed. The men are described as being prepared to win the strike or starve. It is confidently expected that the owners their defeat with a big increase in the price of coal.

RAILWAY NOTES

The G. T. R. Belleville train was delayed a considerable time at Keene this morning, owing to a wheel coming off. The yard engine was sent from Peterborough to bring the train into the city and in the meantime "Moonlight" did the local shunting.

Trainmaster McMillan of the G. T. R., was in the city yesterday afternoon and engaged a number of men to undertake the work of cleaning out the sidings, etc.

LIKE A LAMB

First Day of March Does Not Augur Well For the End of the Month.

Coming up town on a street car this morning a woman remarked to her companion, "March is very lamb-like in its entry. I suppose we may look for a stormy exit." If the old tradition means anything, the present month should "go out like a lion." The weather to-day was ideal, but one might expect to see more snow mixed with the early spring rains during the latter part of the month. Truly the weatherman is a strangely uncertain individual.

LIVE ISSUES DISCUSSED BY BOARD OF TRADE

Questions of Material Importance to the City Are Freely Discussed—The Board Shows Favourable Attitude Towards Garbage By-law.

WHAT THE BOARD OF TRADE DID.

Discussed the street paving question and, on motion of Messrs. Wainwright and Pennefather, the question was postponed indefinitely.

Discussed the Garbage by-law. It was moved by Mr. Rothwell, and seconded by Mr. Morris, that a resolution expressing the approval of the Board of Trade towards the adoption of a Garbage by-law be forwarded to the Council.

Discussed the question of hotel accommodation, for eighteen minutes, and on the suggestion of Ald. Gillespie, decided to adjourn the meeting until a future date.

A regular session of the Board of Trade was held last evening in the Council Chamber. The meeting was called to order at 8.30, with thirteen members present. Ald. Gillespie occupied the chair, in the absence of Mr. Vincent Eastwood, President of the Board. After the minutes of the last meeting were read by the Secretary, Mr. Quartermaine, and other routine business had been dispensed with, the meeting was thrown open for the discussion of several important questions that at present grace the civic slate.

Street Paving.

The chairman called upon Mr. Dobbin for an expression of opinion regarding street paving.

Mr. Dobbin said that it was almost impossible to analyse the question until it passed through the Council in the form of a by-law. The question of keeping paved streets clean, and providing the additional storm sewers that would be necessary, with paved roadways, was also worthy of consideration.

Mr. Shook corroborated the statements made by the former speaker, as also did Mr. Rodgers, Mr. Pennefather and Mr. Wainwright.

Mr. Gillespie said that the question was a little premature for the Board of Trade to deal with.

Mr. Munro, representing the Street Railway Company, said that the question was one that appealed favourably to the Directors of the Company, and that they had already been asked to furnish estimates with a view to double tracking some of the streets in event of them being paved. These estimates would be rushed through in time for the Council to act upon.

"It is all nonsense talking about paving the streets," said Mr. Wainwright. The present drainage system would be totally inadequate in event of the streets being paved and furthermore, the question of removing the poles would also have to be taken into deep consideration. All this would involve an enormous expense to the city.

Garbage By-law.

The discussion then turned to the proposed Garbage by-law.

Mr. Ruddy favoured a Garbage by-law, as also did Mr. Shook, who thought that the Council should deal with the matter without referring it to the people. The consensus of opinion was that a garbage by-law was practicable and is being considered at present, from the viewpoint of a coming necessity.

Rev. Canon Davidson expressed a few words in favour of a Garbage collecting system.

Mr. Pretty and Mr. Rothwell took a similar position in regard to the matter.

Hotel Accommodation.

The discussion on hotel accommodation was opened by Mr. Sherry. He favoured the construction of more hotels, and if the tourist trade was to be developed, more hotel accommodation was inevitable. In order that accommodation might be made more ample, the citizens would have to manifest more interest than they do at present in the matter. The question was a serious one, and the completion of the Trent Valley Canal would further augment the need for more accommodation.

He did not think that the question of licensed bars in connection with more hotels should be allowed to interfere in the matter and local option or no local option should have no material bearing on the matter.

Mr. Shook, in referring to the Fire Chief's annual report, in regard to hotel accommodation, stated that the report credited the city with having over three hundred available rooms in connection with the present hotel accommodation. He did not know whether hotels could be conducted profitably without the bars, but he did know of a great many local option towns in Ontario where hotels were being run on a profitable basis.

He thought that more rooms could be provided in the hotels that already exist in the city.

At this stage Ald. Gordon drifted into the meeting and ventured a few remarks on the subject. He was not prepared to say whether the hotel business was a profitable one or not. The local option question was becoming a live issue and would remain so whether it prevailed here or not.

"The matter of hotel accommodation appeals to me," said Mr. Rothwell. He did not think that it was a matter for the Board of Trade, or Council to deal with. It was not a municipal question, but one that would appeal to the investor, or the man with capital, and therefore felt that it was a little out of order for the Board of Trade to undertake to deal with the matter.

Among those present were Ald. Gillespie, Ald. Gordon, Mr. F. Dobbin, Mr. G. C. Wainwright, Mr. C. H. Pennefather, Mr. J. Johns, Mr. R. B. Rodgers, Mr. Munro, Mr. J. C. Shook Mr. Carruthers, Mr. Bothwell, Mr. Pretty, Mr. Ruddy, Mr. Sherry and Mr. W. R. Morris.

An Echo of the Last Provincial Elections— Registrars Appointed Deputies and Bill is Presented for $10 a Day to Both Deputies and Registrars.

OPINIONS OF ALDERMEN

An account from His Honour Judge Hayeke for registration services, connected with the last Provincial elections, was discussed by the Finance Committee at their meeting on Thursday night.

The registrars for the last election were Judge Hayeke, Magistrate Dumble, Mr. B. Morrow, and Mr. Geo. J. Sherry.

As ex-officio registrars they constituted the Board to decide upon the qualifications of those who were presented for registration under the election law. They had power to appoint deputies and as there were five subdivisions an appointment was made for the fifth sub-division. According to the points in the discussion, last night, Judge Hayeke, Mr. Dumble, and Mr. Morrow were appointed deputies to act for four days on which they were absent. The fee for the work is ten dollars a day. The Registrars have charged the city $10 a day for twelve days on which they did not personally act, and the charge of the Deputies is $120 for their work during that time.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall presented a report upon the matter as the committee did not favour the idea of paying the account twice.

MORE POLITICS THAN PATRIOTISM.

Toronto "loyalists" met in Massey Hall and passed a resolution condemning home rule for Ireland, declaring in effect that it would be a menace to the empire. It seems singular that citizens of a country that as a nominal dependency enjoys the largest measure of home rule of any country in the world, should resolve such rubbish. Granting home rule to Canada some seventy years ago was what saved Canada to the Empire. We have had home rule in this country for three quarters of a century, and instead of being separate from the mother country and the rest of the empire, Canada is connected by closer ties with the home land and more firmly impacted in the fabric of he empire than when we took our laws and our administration from Downing street. Party politics and patriotism make a sorry mixture.

THE CAPACITY FOR ASKING FOOLISH QUESTIONS.

A local newspaper which poses and "performs" as the organ of the representative of this riding, had this morning a startling head line, "Sir Wilfrid on the Grill—Mr. Burnham Springs Surprise in the House." It appears from the text, that the "grill" on which Sir Wilfrid was "roasted" was not very hot. The text under the above lurid heading is to the effect that "Mr. H. Burnham, M.P., created some considerable surprise' when he questioned Sir Wilfrid Laurier as to his opinion regarding a certain newspaper article dealing with the marriage law question. It appears that the "grill" for Sir Wilfrid consisted of the following tremendously formidable questions—"Does he approve of the sentiments in the article? If not, wherein does he disapprove of the same, speaking generally."

The record does not state how Sir Wilfrid came through the ordeal, but no doubt is left of the aptness of the proverb that informs us that "a fool can ask more questions than a wise man can answer." It is to laugh.

CONSULTING THE PEOPLE.

At the time of the municipal elections, last December, the Examiner insisted that, as a condition of making the Hydro-Electric by-law acceptable to it and the people, Hon. Adam Beck should give the assurance that any money by-law proposed under it, before it became effective, should be submitted to the people for approval, or otherwise. Hon. Mr. Beck gave this assurance, and it seems that the circumstances emphasized in his mind the soundness the principle of the right of the people to pronounce on matters that affect their rights and interests. On Wednesday, Hon. Mr. Beck introduced into the Legislature a bill, whose principle is the same as that guaranteed by him, as applying to money by-laws proposed under the Hydro-Electric by-law—that the people should have the "say". Mr. Beck's bill requires that no municipality can give a franchise to a public utility corporation, without the consent of the people obtained by vote. The same principle applies to the renewal of existing franchises. The proposal of Mr. Beck seems to be a wise one. In the past, when the power of franchise-giving was in the hands of municipal councils, corporations have found them "easy," and as a result, municipalities have been saddled with vexatious franchises. A corporation might find a municipal council easily "worked," but it would have a good deal of trouble in "working" the electorate, as a body.

LOYALTY BEGINS AT HOME.

The Orangemen of Toronto were perfectly within their rights in protesting against Home Rule for Ireland and in promising moral and material aid in promoting the fight against it. They are consistent with their past in this, but they would be more consistent if they would unite in opposing something at home more hostile to Canada and imperial unity. Nationalism in its outspoken opposition to the letter and spirit of Imperialism and British connection, fostered and encouraged as it is by the ruling powers in Canada, has more possibilities for mischief than local self-government for Ireland. It has in its hands a weapon to strike a deadly blow to imperial unity and Canadian honour. In the Canadian Senate on Wednesday, Senator Lavergne in discussing his bill for the repeal of the Naval Act, said that he had the promise of Mr. Borden that the Naval Act would be repealed and the opponents of the bill had declared in the election campaign that if Mr. Borden were elected, Mr. Bourassa had only to hold up his hand and the Canadian navy would "fade away." Now the good Orangemen of Toronto know that Mr. Bourassa is the head and front of the Nationalist movement, which stands for a policy, that is in deadly opposition to Canadian unity as well as the imperial spirit, not to speak of all that Orangeism stands for. If Mr. Borden is under pledge, as Senator Lavergne asserts, to abolish the Naval Act, passed with the object of Canadian cooperation in the defence of the empire, why do not the Toronto loyalists pass some resolution to crush the head of seditious influences and tendencies at home? With Canada under a government with three "Nationalist" members in its cabinet, the Toronto loyalists would seem to have some missionary work at home in the interests of the supremacy of British ideals and Canadian and imperial unity. Loyalty, like charity, should begin at home.

AN EASY REMEDY.

A correspondent of the Globe, discussing the question of the danger of level crossings, relates an incident, showing how public carelessness contributes to level crossing accidents, and makes this the basis of a sensible proposal. The writer says:

For two years past, through the friendship of two high officials on a Canadian railway, I have possessed an informal engine permit, by virtue of which I have ridden many thousands of miles, from one end of Canada to the other, on the locomotives of our leading express trains. I have a vivid memory of no less than nine narrow escapes from crossing tragedies, and as the whole nine are alike in one particular, may I describe one characteristic case? I will not choose the most flagrant, for fear you might doubt my fairness of mind. One bright summer day we approached, at a high rate of speed, an acute-angled crossing near a city. The crossing had a clear view, I should judge, of one and a half miles in both directions. Going in the same direction as the train, on the right side, was a buggy. As we neared the crossing the horse was lazily accelerated, and the driver managed to beat us across, but not by more than a yard. The engineer was so startled that he jumped across to the fireman's side, where, owing to the angle of the crossing, he could look back into the buggy. What we three saw was a young man with his arm around a young woman. They never paid the slightest attention to us—did not even glance up—but, had they been killed, it would have been another case of "the deadly level crossing." Not one of the nine cases that have come to my personal knowledge, under these unusual circumstances, has been indicative of less carelessness than that.

Based on his experience and observation the correspondent suggests a simple remedy by which he claims ninety per cent., if not all of level crossing accidents, would be averted, and the simple remedy is:

"Make every vehicle, automobile and person, about to cross a railway track, come to a full stop before crossing, to see that there is no danger."

This may be annoying at times, but what is a delay of a few seconds or minutes compared with the loss of human life? The majority of travellers by highway, on foot or in vehicles, have no such pressing business as to make a few seconds detention as important a matter as the risk of life. They have no schedules to keep to, and it is better for them to be prevented from crossing a railway track at all than to risk the death of one or more persons and the agony of mind that comes to every engine driver, whose engine destroys life, even though he be not one whit to blame. Street railway cars, that need every second to make connections, are required to halt at all railway crossings, and it is the duty of the conductor to see that the railway track is safe before he signals the motorman to cross the tracks. If the law were so framed as to compel halting at all railway crossings, before attempting to cross, there would not be one level crossing accident where there ar enow a hundred. It is practically impossible to protect with gates all level crossings, but if the precaution suggested were made legally obligatory, a great and burdensome expenditure to both railways and municipalities, and an appalling loss of human life, would be avoided.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Hon. A. G. MacKay says that in the Ontario boundary matter, Ontario did not get a "square deal." No; it got a three-cornered deal, by which Manitoba is given 27 million acres of the territory of Ontario that Oliver Mowat fought for and won.

We are accustomed to regard the old country as slow, effete and as an undesirable place to live in. The St. John ((N.B.) Telegraph presents a contrast in the price of bread that suggests thought:

A twenty-four-ounce loaf of bread is sold in Toronto for five and six cents. In St. John the ordinary consumer pays eight cents for a loaf of that size. The Montrealer gets, on an average, about twenty-four ounces for seven cents. In England, where a large part of the total wheat supply is carried from Canada, Russia and Egypt, the consumer pays four cents for a thirty-two ounce loaf.

BIG-MAN PELLETIER.

By the time spring comes and they are released from their bonds of ice, the people of the Magdalen Islands will have come to regard Pelletier the Postmaster-General either as a king or a god.

The Magdalen Islands are far out in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, midway between Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland. They are cut off from the mainland for six months — from November to May.

Up to last week they were also absolutely cut off from the world because there are no cables touching the Island. But Big-man Pelletier has taken pity on the be nighted islanders. Big-man Pelletier s going to give them some news once a week by wireless, which news is to be read in the churches on the Sabbath.

Big-man Pelletier has turned news editor for the electors of the constituency of Gaspe which is represented in the House of Commons by one Dr. Gauthier ,Conservative. Every week Big-man Pelletier will flash them one thousand words at the public expense. Just to start the service right, the first week's budget contains an extra 600 words for good measure.

An analysis of the initial despatch by Big-man Pelletier is interesting. Gadsby of the Toronto Star has subjected it to the Roentgen rays, with this result:

Take the items as they come!

Item No. 1.—The editor's salutatory, 130 kind words for Postmaster-General Pelletier and Dr. Gauthier.

Item No. 3.—Trifling accident on a jerkwater railway branch, nobody killed, 265 words.

Item No. 4.—World-shaking news concerning an ancient dynasty dethroned, and the awakening of four hundred million people, 110 words.

Item No. 5. — Government icebreaker succeeds in breaking ice, 100 words, mostly for Pelletier.

Item No. 6.—Quebec harbour prospects 130 words. Mr. Pelletier sits for Quebec county.

Item No. 7. — Graving dock for Quebec, 110 words, sly boost for Postmaster-General.

Item No. 8.—Home rule for Ireland, a hundred-year-old grievance near settled, 175 words.

Item No. 9.—The health of His Holiness, the Pope, 220 words.

Item No. 10.—Shipwreck, legitimate news, almost local, very interesting to fisher folk, who are accustomed to shipwrecks, 220 words.

To be brief, one-quarter of the first news letter to the Magdalen Islands sings the praises of Postmaster-General Pelletier.

The question that arises in Mr. Gadsby's mind is: "What will the next Magdalen Island budget say about South Renfrew?"—Ottawa Free Press.

Hon. Mr. Pelletier is the Nationalist Postmaster-General in the Borden government and the good loyalist of Canada. Grit and Tory alike are made to pay their good money to sound the praises and boom the political interests of the representative of Mr. Bourassa in a loyal Conservative government of the good loyalists of bearing the tab of the party goes.

LAKEFIELD YOUTH THE VICTIM OF A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

As a result of the accidental discharge of a shot gun, a Lakefield youth by the name of White lies in a dangerous condition at St. Joseph's hospital with a gaping gunshot wound in his left leg. The young man, who is of Italian descent, was out shooting with three companions along what is known as the River road, running a few miles south of Lakefield. About 1:30 in the afternoon as the quartette were wending their way along a pathway with White leading, the gun of his companion to the rear was accidentally discharged, the contents striking the unfortunate man in the leg.

Medical aid was immediately summoned and temporary treatment was administered to the injured man upon the arrival of Dr. Graham of Lakefield. After consultation it was decided to have him removed to the city hospital. Belleghem's private ambulance was sent for and the victim was conveyed to St. Joseph's hospital last evening, where he lies in a precarious condition.

Upon enquiry at the hospital this morning, the Examiner was informed by Dr. McNulty, who is in charge of the case, that it was found necessary to amputate the leg above the knee, in order to save the young man's life.

Last reports received from the hospital gives White's condition as very serious. He is verging on a state of collapse and is extremely weak from loss of blood. This is the second accident that the unfortunate young man has figured in within the last couple of weeks. On the former occasion he sustained a painful injury to his hand. He is about twenty years of age and resides with his brother in Lakefield.

HARRY BURRIDGE HERE AFTER MANAGER'S BERTH

Former Peterboro' Player Applicant for Position at Head of Local Canadian League Team.

KNOTTY LEE WITH HIM

Harry Burridge, the former Peterborough Midland League player, is in the city in connection with his campaign for the managership of the Peterborough Canadian League ball team. Harry has a host of friends in the city who will pull strongly for him and who claim that his experience with the Youngstown club of the P. and O. League, and with Edmonson team of the Western Canada League will just about fit him for a position at the head of the Petes. Burridge, however, has keen competition for the job, among the other applicants being Hugh A. Shannon, of Buffalo; Addie Johnston, manager of the Guelph team last season; Jo Jo Keenan, Brantford's 1911 leader, and "Old Folks" Templin, second baseman of the champion Berlin team. The latter has been very strongly recommended to the Peterborough management.

Knotty Lee, the well-known Hamilton manager, is here with Burridge and has promised to give him every assistance should he land the berth. This is a valuable offer, as Lee has some thirty players on the string, half of which he will have to dispose of. Knotty has a host of friends among the managers in other leagues, and has no difficulty in picking up players. Last year he was presented with Shortstop Grieves by the Lawrence Club and near the end of the season disposed of him to Philadelphia for $1,500.

Discussing Canadian League affairs with the Examiner, Lee said that he was delighted with the prospects. The first year had scored a success far beyond what the most optimistic of the promoters had dared to hope and now that the League has passed the experimental stage, is increased to eight clubs, and has had its rating raised, everything looks rosy.

The higher rating means the clubs will get $750 for every man drafted, instead of $300, under Class D rating.

INFORMATION ABOUT THE JUNIOR O.H.A. ALL STARS

(Toronto Star)

The announcement to-day of the personnel of the All-Star junior O. H. A team to play the champion Toronto Canoe Club team at the Exclsior rink on Saturday night made the fans sit up and take notice, as the list includes the most brilliant hockey players in Ontario in that series. Look them over for yourself:

Hainsworth—is credited with being the finest goaltender developed in junior hockey in years. His brilliant work in the Canoe Club game with the Dutchmen at Ravina rink is still fresh in the memory of followers of the game.

Denison—the point, can hold his own in any kind of company. He is the best defence hockey player developed in Peterborough since the days of Harold Armstrong.

Armstrong—who will play cover-point, is described as the cleverest all-round player in the O. H. A., bar none, junior, intermediate, or senior. All the referees praise him to the skies. "Chaucer" Elliott says Fred Taylor, in his palmiest days, as a junior, never had anything on this lad. All the East swears by Armstrong, and the success of the Trenton team this season was due mainly to his efforts.

Sandercock—who will play rover, is a western star and declared by Wood stock people to be another Jerry Laflamme. He is equally as good on the defence as on the attack, and when either Denison or Armstrong makes a rush he can go back and help out the defence.

Butterfield—is captain of the Orillia team, runners-up for the championship and one of the best stick-handlers in the game. His work is sensational in the extreme. In centre ice he is a very spectacular performer.

Jupp—is probably the best right wing seen in action around these parts this winter. His great work for Orillia on Tuesday night turned the tide in favour of his home team and enabled them to give Canoe Club its first defeat. Good right wings are scarce, but here is a jewel.

Soloman—left wing, is known as the Flying Dutchman, and will be remembered by [illegible] as the swiftest and c[illegible] on the Berlin team. Soloman will be right there all the way, and should fit in splendidly with the other speed merchants on the line.

BOTH TEAMS CONFIDENT

The fastest ice of the season is ready for to-night's battle between the two hand-picked Peterborough sevens—the Mutts and Jeffs, selected from the Intermediate and Junior O. H. A. teams, and everything points to a red-hot game. Considerable rivalry, good-natured, but nevertheless warm, has developed among the players over this contest and they can be depended upon to go the limit. Both teams look strong, the Mutts, perhaps, stronger on the attack, while the Jeffs will prove superior in defensive methods, with Derocher, Bond, and Bearss as a rear guard and the systematic back checking the Bear Cats forwards always show. The admission fee will be 15 cents to any part of the rink, and no doubt there will be a big crowd on hand to see what should prove one of the most interesting games of the season. Referee Ernie Wasson will send the following two teams away at 8.15 o'clock:

Blame It All On Hern

The Orillia Packet says: For the second year in succession the Orillia junior hockey team has reached the finals and been within reach of the championship. But upon both occasions they lost enough goals on their opponents' ice to more than overcome the lead that they had obtained at home. Last season they felt more satisfied with the result than this year. They then were rather surprised to get to the finals, and hardly expected to win from their older and more experienced rivals, the Frontenacs. This year they expected to win the coveted prize. Unfortunately the Orillians do not feel this time that they lost to a better team on their merits. Both the players and the supporters who accompanied them were dissatisfied with the work of the referee in the game at Toronto on Saturday evening. "Wally" Hern may have been doing his best, but he impressed players and spectators with the idea that his judgment was, to say the least, erratic, and that the Orillians were the chief sufferers from his aberrations. The natural result was that the team did not play with their usual confidence, since they were never sure what to expect next, and were in constant fear of penalties. It is, generally speaking, poor sport to blame the referee. But the feeling on this occasion is too general and too strong to be entirely ignored And there is no question that, in the return game on Tuesday evening, Orillia had distinctly the better of the play, at least to the extent indicated by the score. Had it not been for poor shooting (a weakness which has hampered this team in more than one match) they would probably have overcome the lead gained by the T.C.C. at Toronto.

LAKEFIELD AND T.A.S. MEET IN THE SEMI-FINALS

The T.A.S. and Lakefield teams will meet in the semi-finals of the Trent Valley League, the first game here on Monday night and the return game in Lakefield on Wednesday night. The winners will play the Marmora-Stirling winner in the finals, which will commence next Friday night.

Monday's game should be the feature of the Trent Valley season. The Lakefield team showed good form in their game against Hastings and they will give the Abstainers one awful argument for the honours. The local team is going along nicely, however, and are confident that they can put the Cementville boys away. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance. The Abstainers, probably due to the excitment over the O. H. A. race, have not received the support they are deserving of and now that the O.H.A. games are over, the fans should turn out to encourage the Trent Valley Leaguers. The game will be worth seeing.

FAN SUGGESTS ALL STAR JUNIORS AND INTERMEDIATES

Considerable interest is being taken in the game at Toronto to-morrow night between the All Stars and Toronto Canoe Club, especially on account of the fact that Fred Denison has been picked for the Stellar aggregation. A local fan sends in the following line-up of a second All Star junior team with the intimation that they would give either the Canoe Club or the hand-picked seven which will oppose the champions to-morrow night an awful argument. Here is Mr. Fan's line-up:

Goal—Dwyer, Peterborough.
Point—Burkhart, T.A.A.C.
Cover—Frechette, Oshawa.
Rover—Denison, Lindsay.
Centre—Burritt, Seaforth.
Right wing—Cunningham, Cobourg.

The same fan has tried his hand at selecting an All Star intermediate team and the seven he has doped out would surely be the original Speed Boys. He lines them up as follows:

Goal—Derocher, Peterborough.
Point—Pete Spratt, Lindsay.
Cover—Eddie Gould, Midland.
Rover—Etherington, Preston.
Centre—Chase, Midland.
Right wing—Rahn, Preston.

This line-up might give the above mentioned team a busy evening:

Goal—Scott, Midland.
Point—Bowman, Preston.
Cover—Bernhardt, Preston.
Rover—Fryer, Collingwood.
Centre—Park, Peterborough.
Right wing—Beaty, Midland.

Progress Of The Local Bonspiel

Interest in the local Bonspiel has been somewhat diverted by the advent of numerous public functions in the city. This has served to deplete the ranks of the curlers to such an extent as to cause a temporary suspension in the heretofore rapid progress of the Bonspiel, with the result that the event will probably cover a longer period than was at first anticipated. Two more rinks entered the third round of the Primary fixture last evening, and as yet no one has dared to try for a place in the fourth round.

Skip Lang, in a well-balanced game got his opponent, Skip Taylor, away, with a 13-10 score, while the game between Skips Harsone and J. H. Ferguson, furnished the sensation of the evening. It was a see-saw game right through to the finish, and up to the end it was anybody's game, when at this stage, a lucky draw shot by J. H. Ferguson's rink, gave them a chance to pull out ahead with one point to the good. The score which, at the finish, stood at 9-7, indicates the closeness of the game.

The competition for the Lindsay-Peterborough Cup opened this afternoon at the Charlotte Street rink. Four rinks from Lindsay are here with the object of looking after the Bungog town's interests in the competition.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

The Bugle Band hereby challenges No. 3 Company to a game of hockey.

The South Central and Queen Alexandra Schools played an exciting game at Brock street rink last night, winding up in a 1 to 1 tie. The youngsters battled for forty minutes without a score. The Southerners were the first to annex a counter but the Queen Alexandra bunch quickly equalised and the figures remained unchanged until the finish. M. Kenneally refereed.

The Brinton Carpet Company team accept the challange of the Grand Opera House seven to a game of hockey, the Opera House team to make the necessary arrangements for the rink.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

IT was brought out by a social investigator recently that a great many divorces are caused by the wife's extravagance, and that in many cases the wife is not to blame because she does not have any idea what her husband's income really is.

The investigator suggested that the husband should take his wife into confidence on this subject. I have a further suggestion — and that is that he also give his children some idea of the family income and outgo.

I happened to hear some children the other day accusing their father of extravagance, because he did not seem to be able to keep out of debt. I am pretty sure those children did not know their father's income. I am very sure they did not have any idea what it cost to keep up the establishment of which they were a part. Now, if these young people had been taken into the father's confidence, admitted to the family financial council, made to understand more about what it cost to live, I feel sure that they would not only have known better than to make such cruel, unjust criticisms, but would have been willing to help their father keep expenses down.

In his father's absence, John, the fifteen-year-old son of a certain family, tends the furnace. Often he puts on more coal than is necessary ,or forgets to close the draughts, thus wasting a great deal of fuel. He is sometimes scolded for this, but he knows that somehow or other father will buy more coal when this is gone, and the scoldings roll off him as water from a duck's back, or rebukes from a fifteen-year-old boy's back always do. Now, if John were taken into the family council, shown jjust how much coal father has to buy in a winter and how much it costs, made to realise the relation of more coal to his father's salary, and to the possibility of a new suit for himself or a new hat for mother, I maintain that that would have more effect upon him, and make him more anxious to run the furnace economically, than many scoldings. It would arouse his pride and a sense of responsibility, and, believe me, these are stronger motives, even in a fifteen-year-old boy, than many of us realize.

In like manner, if his sister Jane, who is eighteen, fond of fun, and hospitably eager to entertain continually, should be introduced to the weekly grocery and provision bills, and made to understand that fancy cakes and good meats and cream and grapefruit and all the good things she wants for her guests, may not be procured merely by lifting the receiver off the telephone, and then eaten and forgotten, but have an ugly way of appearing on the weekly bills and swelling them to painful proportions she, too, might be a little more thoughtful.

Many of the children of to-day have absolutely no idea of the limits of the buying power of money, until they begin to earn it. It seems to me that we cannot better advance their education, develop their sense of responsibility, and at the same time enlist their co-operation in the difficult task of making a limited income cover unlimited desires, than by taking them into the family confidence, showing them the family budget and frankly asking them to help us in this matter.

Applications For Position No Appointment Was Made

List of Names of Those Who Applied for Sanitary Inspectorship —Property Committee to Get Information Regarding Cost of Incinerator.

KING EDWARD PARK PLANS

WHAT THE PROPERTY COMMITTEE DID.

Read applications for position of sanitary inspector. Action deferred.

Decided to secure prices on incinerator for garbage disposal.

Approved of plans for King Edward Park.

Practically decided not to use dumping method for garbage disposal

A meeting of the Property Committee was held last night, with Ald. Duncan in the chair, and Aldermen Brown, Morgan, Graham and Mayor Bradburn present.

"The matter of the King Edward Park plans for this year was left with Ald. Brown and myself," Ald. Duncan stated, "and we have here a plan prepared by Mr. Frank Wise."

The plan, which was gratuitously presented to the committee by Mr. Wise, was submitted to the members who expressed themselves as much pleased with it. The park, as laid out, leaves the centre for a playground, with driveway on several sides, and the trees to be planted in a systematic arrangement, as to location and kind of tree around the outside. This latter will be seeded. Thus the idea of a park and playground are combined. There are 225 trees in all, and they are specified and marked out.

Moved by Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Brown, that the park be laid out according to the plan submitted by Mr. Wise, and that the committee express their thanks to him for his work.—Carried.

Ald. Brown—We should specify the height of the trees. There is a difference in the height of two and threee year stock. I would suggest that they be from 7 to 10 feet high.

When tenders are being called for the trees, this will be included in the contract.

Applications Opened.

The next order of business was the opening of the letters from applicants for the position of Sanitary Inspector. The time for their reception expired at 4 p.m., on Feb. 4th. One was received at 9 a.m., on the 5th.

Ald. Duncan—"What shall we do with this?"

Ald. Brown—"Would you think of objecting. The time was very close.

Ald. Morgan—"I would consider it with the rest."

The letter was, therefore, received with the rest.

Altogether there were twenty-nine applications, and by the time Ald. Duncan had read them all, he had quite a pile of correspondence before him. The applications were received from the following:

Geo. W. Johnston, 528 Water St.
Arthur E. Sims, 734 George St.
Frank Armsby.
W. A. Paskins, Byersville P. O.
Wm. H. White, 193 Dalhousie St.
Heber M. Dobbin, Gladstone Ave.
John Fraser, North Bay.
C. E. J. Spence.
Wm. A. Robertson, 532 Gilchrist.
Chas. E. Wiley, 205 Sherbrooke St.
H. Pearson, 157 Antrim St.
David Patterson, 513 Cedar St.
John Meharry, 10 Victoria Ave.
Ralph Watson, 69 Hunter St.
R. A. Peters, 69 Hunter St.
N. J. Pitchford, 13 Cluxton St.
George Naylor, Clariday P. O.
John J. Wright, 306 Lewis St.
John O. Moss, 59 Aylmer St.
Jos. Crowe, Cross St.
A. Hope, 309 Pearl Ave.
Wm. Sharman, 38 Stewart St.
John Clancy.
J. E. Sharpe, 461½ George St.
Wm. F. Harris, 109 Smith St.
Chas. R. Jenkins, 98 Gladstone Ave
John Hurcley, 344 McDonnel St.
Wm. D. Ketcheson, 88 Douro St.
Wm. Crowe, 43 Sophia St.

The Salaries Asked.

The majority of the applicants asked for $700. There were a few exceptions. Mr. Dobbin asked $800 if the city intended to provide a conveyance. He asked for $700 and he would provide it. Regarding Mr. Fraser of North Bay, Ald. Brown said: "If we have a good thing keep it at home." Mr. Fraser sent his picture with his letter.

Mr. Watson wrote that he would accept $600; Mr. Peters, who said he was a cheese and butter maker, $675. while Mr. Pitchford staggered the committee with $850. J. J. Wright's willingness to accept $600 revived them somewhat. Mr. Ross mentioned $650 in his application. Many of the applicants were comparatively newcomers, from the Old Country, and most of them presented extensive qualifications in the form of recommendations.

Discuss the Appointment.

Mayor Bradburn—"Have you made up your mind as to what you are going to do about the garbage by-law? Have you determined upon an area? Settle the garbage by-law first—then take up the appointment.

Dr. McPherson—What difference does it make?

Mayor Bradburn—No material difference, after all, but it seems to me to be this should be decided.

Ald. Morgan—Settle what the boundaries of the district are to be first and then decide how you will go about the work.

Ald. Duncan, upon the suggestion of the Mayor, gave a review of how Guelph' system works.

In that city the initial area was about the size outlined for Peterborough's beginning. A man was engaged at $5.50 a day, he to supply a team, waggon, and man. Now, they have three waggons, and three dumping grounds. A man at the "dump" picks out the paper, wood, etc., and burns it, and the ashes are spread over the other refuse. The City Clerk said there was no stench and the system was giving good satisfaction. Those who objected at first are now wanting to be included in the area. The cost is put on the taxes. Every householder pays 15 cents a month: stores, butcher shops, fruit stores, hotels, etc., pay 40 cents a month. They have one and one-half square miles covered. They did not collect from factories, the latter drawing their refuse away with teams. The money is collected with the taxes.

Ald. Morgan—That would put it up to the landlord, wouldn't it, Mr. Mayor

There are now three waggons and five men, with the first man mentioned. The work is done every day, except Sundays and holidays.

How to Dispose of it.

The discussion then veered to the question of how the garbage would be disposed of here.

Mayor Bradburn—"Where are you going to put this stuff?"

Ald. Duncan—It would be dumped in the "Goose Pond" near at the end of Charlotte street.

Dr. McPherson—It must not be dumped into the "Goose Pond."

Mayor Bradburn—"You would not get ashes enough to cover the garbage in summer.

Ald. Morgan—"I thought that the Mayor and Chairman were to have this all worked out."

Mayor Bradburn—"You can't. If you will tell me how we can dispose of it—

Ald. Duncan—"We ought to get an incinerator and burn the stuff. That's the way they handle it in Rochester.

Mayor Bradburn—"It would be foolish to dump that refuse near the centre of the city.

Ald. Brown—I believe we ought to have an incinerator.

Dr. McPherson concurred with this idea and said it might be well to try to arrange with the Peterborough Lumber Co. to burn it.

Ald. Duncan.—They don't run in the winter time.

It was moved by Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Brown that the City Clerk write to J. G. Pickard for information regarding the cost of an incinerator for a city of this size.—Carried.

Appointment Postponed.

Ald. Duncan—"Now, what shall we do with these applications?"

Ald. Brown—"I think we might as well wait until we get this other question in better shape.

Ald. Morgan—"We want the man whether we get the incinerator or not

Mayor Bradburn—"When shall his duties commence?"

Ald. Duncan—"The 1st of April."

Ald. Brown—"Why not the 1st of bage by-law ready. We might be able bage yb-law ready. We might be able to get a good man for $800."

Moved by Ald. Graham, seconded by Mayor Bradburn, that the matter of the appointing a Sanitary Inspector be left over.—Carried.

The Mayor said that owing to the large number of applications he would like to look over the list and consider the matter.

"I am strongly opposed to dumping the garbage into a hole," he said. probably up against the property of others. I would like to see if an incinerator cannot be built at a fair price, first".

Ald. Gordon's Letter.

The following letter was read from Ald. Gordon:

"On several occasions I have learned that milkmen in the city have taken dirty milk bottles which they have brought from a house, and refilled there and handed them out to other customers. I think that, if possible, it should be provided that a penalty be imposed in a case of this being done, and I would suggest that this be embodied in the by-law you have directed to be drafted."

Moved by Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Graham, that this suggestion be embodied in the by-law with provisions made for the penalty to be imposed.—Carried.

An adjournment was then called.

BUILDING PERMITS

February has been a rather lean month in building permits. The total would have been light had it not been for the improvements made to the T. C. Elliot's store. The records at the City Clerk's office show the following industrial movement for the month:

Geo. Billing, ice house	$50.00
Ambrose Jones, verandah	15.00
P. J. Grady, porch	20.00
J. H. Gray, green house	50.00
T. C. Elliot, alterations	1000.00

The month has been anything but satisfactory for outside building work but with the expected break in the weather during the next three weeks, the prospects should begin to brighten.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. H. W. Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her. And on recommendation of a friend, I used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made a complete cure. With a grateful heart I write you this letter."

CHOIR ENTERTAINED.

Mr. and Mrs. Best Proved Splendid Hosts.

The Charlotte Street Methodist Church Choir held their weekly practice at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Best, 426 Donegal street, last night, and afterwards were entertained. During the evening an essay contest was engaged in, and after dainty refreshments were served the balance of the evening was spent in song.

A most enjoyable evening was spent, and the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Best was very much appreciated by the choir.

SOCIAL EVENING.

Enjoyable Evening Spent at the Residence of Mr. Geo. Carter.

A very enjoyable social function took place last evening at the home of Mr. George Carter, Sr., of 310 Aylmer street, the occasion being the wedding of his son, George S. Carter to Miss Hesba Jackson, of Bolivar street, which took place in the afternoon at St. Paul's church.

After a dainty wedding repast had been participated in the evening was spent in music and song. Refreshments were served at 10.30 and the assembly dispersed shortly before midnight. The happy couple were the recipients of many costly and beautiful presents. The gift of the groom to the bride was a magnificent silver tea set. There were present at the ceremony Mr. Roy Jackson of Utica, N.Y., and Miss Eleanor Jackson of Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter will reside on Murray street.

HELPFUL HINTS ON HAIR HEALTH

Scalp and Hair Troubles Generally Caused by Carelessness.

Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a microbe which also produces baldness. Never use a comb or brush belonging to some one else. No matter how cleanly the owner may be these articles may be infected with microbes, which will infect your scalp. It is far easier to catch hair microbes than it is to get rid of them, and a single stroke of an infected comb or brush may well lead to baldness. Never try on anybody else's hat. Many a hat band is a resting place for microbes.

If you happen to be troubled with dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair or baldness, we have a remedy which we believe will completely relieve these troubles. We are so sure of this that we offer it to you with the understanding that it will cost you nothing for the trial if it does not produce the results we claim. This remedy is called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We honestly believe it to be the most scientific remedy for scalp and hair troubles, and we know of nothing else that equals it for effectiveness, because of the results it has produced in thousands of cases.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is devised to banish dandruff, restore natural colour when its loss has been brought about by disease, and make the hair really silky, soft and glossy. It does this because it stimulates the hair follicles, destroys the germ matter, and brings about a free, healthy circulation of blood, which nourishes the hair roots, causing them to tighten and grow new hair. We want everybody who has trouble with hair or scalp to know that we think that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is the best hair tonic and restorative in existence, and no one should scoff at or doubt this statement until they have put our claims to a fair test, with the understanding that they pay us nothing for the remedy if it does not give full and complete satisfaction in every particular. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Peterborough only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

LAID TO REST

The funeral of the late Mrs. (Dr.) Coughlan took place on Tuesday morning to St. Peter's Cathedral, where a solemn Requiem High Mass was celebrated by her brother, Rev. A. E. Hurley, assisted by Rev. Fr. Hayden, C.S.B., of St. Michael's College, Toronto, as deacon, and Rev. P. McGuire, Bowmeyville, as subdeacon. Rev. Fathers Macauley and McCarthy were also in the sanctuary. The choir rendered the Mass in a very solemn manner. At the offertory, Mrs. Geo. Ball sang the "De Profundi" and at the close, "Face to Face" was beautifully rendered by Miss A. Simons.

The pallbearers were: Messrs. B. Morrow, J. C. Sullivan, T. P. Owens, D. O'Connell, J. Coughlan, M. O'Brien. On the arrival of the train at Hamilton the remains were met by Rev. Fr. Brethenson, and a very large number of the friends of the deceased. All places of business were closed out of respect to the deceased, who had spent her childhood as well as her married life, among them.

AFTER GRIP

So many people are asking how to recover their strength after the grip that we are publishing this information for their benefit.

After grip, pleurisy, pneumonia or any exhausting illness what you need is new strength and better blood.

The most certain way to get this is by using our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil, called Vinol. It positively does create strength, make the blood rich, sharpen the appetite and increase vitality.

Mrs. Hettie Elms of Queensbury, N. Y., says: "Last spring I had a hard case of la grippe and was very slow about getting over it. I was almost discouraged. Vinol was recommended to me and I began using it. Now it has done me so much good that I must tell you about it, for I have regained my strength and appetite and feel well again."

Try Vinol with the certainty that if it does not benefit you we will give back your money. McDermid and Jury, druggists corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

TORONTO TO HAVE LARGE ARENA GARDENS

TORONTO, MARCH 1.—(Special).—Toronto will soon be able to boast one of the finest Arena Gardens in America. The extensive construction work on the combination skating rink and flower show building, is now being rapidly pushed to a finish by the Arena Gardens of Toronto, Limited. The Company is backed by a strong group of Montreal and Toronto capitalists, and the large amount of capital which they have had at their disposal has resulted in it being possible for them to carry through the enterprise on a scale that is sure to make the Arena Gardens one of the most attractive spots in Toronto.

For years past the necessity of such a building has been felt very keenly, just as much in winter, in connection with the big hockey events, as during the summer time for the horse shows, flower shows, food fairs, and other such entertainments.

The Arena Gardens Building is being erected on the block of land between Mutual, Shuter and Dalhousie streets, and is within five minutes of the centre of the city. Owing to the fact that ice at many periods of the winter is somewhat uncertain in Toronto, the Company has undertaken the installation of a hundred-ton artificial ice plant. This will not only maintain the skating ice during the winter, but will also manufacture 50 tons of ice per day for family consumption during the summer months. This ice plant will also make it possible to have, regardless of weather conditions, a cool building right through the summer season. The seating capacity will include two tiers of boxes of about fifty on each side, and seats for over 6,000 spectators in ph form all around the arena. In this connection it should be pointed out that the seating capacity of the Montreal Arena, which has been the largest in existence in Canada up to the present time, is 4,000, so that the new Toronto building will be able to take care of even a capacity crowd at championship events.

The capitalization of the new company comprises $250,000 of 7 per cent preferred stock, $250,000 of common stock, and $300,000 of thirty-year 6 per cent. First Mortgage Sinking Fund bonds.

Mr. Lawrence Solman, who has made such a success of Hanlon's Point and the Royal Alexandra Theatre, in Toronto, is managing director of the Arena Gardens.

$500.00 REWARD

The above reward will be paid in cash to anyone who will give information that will lead to or cause the arrest and conviction of the party or parties who set fire to the LILLICRAP-TATE SAWMILLS at LAKEFIELD, causing its total destruction on the night of January 23rd last.

Absolute security is the first essential in Fire Insurance. Cost is a secondary consideration. You may save a trifle on the premium but as a rule it does not pay in the long run. Strength Of Regt. To Be Increased

Lieut.-Col. Sylvester, commanding the 45th Regiment, is in receipt of Militia Orders from the Militia Department containing information not only of interest to, but very flattering as well to the crack regiment. The strength of the regiment is to be increased by 136 men — 17 men for each company, bringing its total strength up to 540. This applies only to one other regiment in Canada — the 43rd Regiment of Ottawa, and the increase will be made on condition that the regiment puts one week in camp this summer.

The strength of the 45th Regiment has been made owing to the fact that the regiment has been well reported to the Militia Department.

IS THIS TRUE?

Peterborough, Feb. 29., 1912.

The Peterborough Examiner, City—

Dear Sirs,—Did it ever occur to the people of Peterborough that on the charity orders given by the Charity Board of this city, the people who get them buy such things as jelly rolls, peanuts, high priced eggs, candies and things that are not the necessities of life. One case I heard of 40c. tea being purchased, and if these orders were looked over they would be very interesting reading for the people of the city. In my opinion the Board should decide what is to be purchased under the order, and not allow the individuals to decide what they should buy for themselves or their friends.

Yours truly,

CHARITY.

ST. JOHN'S BROTHERHOOD.

A meeting of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of St. John's church will be held to-night at 7.30.

County Council

County Committee Rooms,
Peterborough, Feb. 24.

The Reeve, and Councillors May, Forster and Robson being present.

Mr. John McBride of Millbrook, came before the Council with a proposition for them to buy a snow plough for clearing the deep snow off the roads after the severe winter storms.

Mr. McBride has a superior kind of a snow plough which makes travelling possible after such storms as we have had this winter, by using the plough on the drifted roads opening them up so that a horse and cart can trot right along as if it were a race track.

The only other method of getting through the country after these storms is to take a flying machine. However, the Council decided to see Mr. McBride's snow plough work before expressing themselves regarding the purchase of one of these machines.

Mr. Lillico was appointed road commissioner in Mr. Robt. Fowler's place, he having resigned owing to lack of time to attend to such duty.

On motion of Messrs. Forster and Robson, the collector's roll was accepted as completed and the collector's salary was ordered to be paid.

The declarations of Mr. John McIntosh and Alex. Laing for refund of dog tax 1911 was received by the Council and granted, and in the future the Council only intends to refund such amounts as are applied for only at the Court of Revision. After that time no refunds will be made.

years. On the previous evening the barometer began to fall rapidly, and in the morning stood at 28.11 inches (the lowest I ever saw it.) This presaged something out of the ordinary routine was on the way, and later on in the day a genuine old-fashioned blizzard began to rage. Country roads were filled to the level of the fences, and trains stalled all over the district.

At the end of the month there was much more snow on the ground than usual. At the same date last year the sleighing was poor around the town.—W. P.

FINANCE COMMITTEE REFUSE TO PAY

as paying Mr. Sherry twice. He did the work himself, the other registrars secured deputies on four days, and now we are asked to pay both deputies and the registrars, too.

Ald. Duncan—"Let them sue for it."

Ald. Buller—"They will beat us, anyway."

Ald. Johnston—"Beat or no beat, it's not right."

Mayor Bradburn—"It seems to me the city gets stuck every time."

Ald. Duncan—"It is not a square deal."

Moved by Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. Buller, that no further action be taken with the account.—Carried.

That is, no allowance is made for what the committee considered a double charge.

Ald. Buller—"In my opinion we will have to pay it anyway."

Ald. Johnston—"I'm not in favour of law suits, but this looks most unjust to me."

Mayor Bradburn—"I think, gentlemen, you are taking the right stand. The Solicitor has stated that he does not think we are liable to pay it. This will come up at next election, and they will do the same thing over again."

A WEAK CHESTED BOY

"My boy Frank seemed weak-chested, and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Rings, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

WEDDING BELLS

HOWSON—LOCHEED.

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon at 5.30 at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Locheed, 148 Markland street, when Miss Laura Adele Locheed, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Locheed of Centreville, Ont., was united in marriage to Ernest Henry Howson of Peterborough. Rev. Dr. Lyle conducted the ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives. The brde was given away by her brother, Dr. Locheed, and wore a very handsome gown of white messalin satin, with Irish point lace and pearl garniture. She also wore a wedding veil and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. Little Miss Isabelle Locheed, in a dainty white frock, attended as flower girl.

The house was prettily decorated with roses and smilax. Miss May Moore played the wedding march.

Mr. and Mrs. Howson left in the evening for points east, and on their return will reside in Peterborough. The bride wore a very becoming tailored suit of navy blue, with hat to match.—Hamilton Times.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT THE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

Scholarships And Prizes Awarded to Successful Pupils Last Evening.— Results Not Equalled in The Province Says Mr. John Crane.

The commencement exercises of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute took place in the Assembly Hall of the Institute before a large gathering last evening. The meeting opened with an address by Mr. John Crane, chairman of the Board of Education, who said:

"They say that the Peterborough Board of Education is very proud of this Institute. The Board has for years adopted the policy of supplying the best equipment and the best teaching staff that can be procured, and the results of last summer's examination justify the action of the Board. It seems to me that the results of last summer's examinations are not equalled in the Province. Ninety-two per cent. of the pupils who tried the examinations at that time were successful and twenty-five per cent. out of these won honours. I think this is a reputation of which the school may justly be proud, and the Principal and his staff are to be congratulated on this result.

But we must not forget that though the city supplies through the Board a good education, it will be of no use unless the scholars take advantage of these privileges and use them in after life. Should you not do that, it would be to your regret. Everything is provided here that will aid you in after life."

Interspersed with the various presentations of scholarships and prizes were musical items. The Collegiate Institute Glee Club, a bevy of charming girls, sang choruses in a surprisingly artistic manner. The piano and crescendo displayed in the various movements was superb and denoted a careful and assiduous training. Mr. W. McIlroy, who, possessing a voice of exceptional quality, uses it to great advantage, sang with marked effect "Mary of Argyle," and on being recalled was equally good in "Goodbye, Sweetheart, goodbye." Miss Sophie Elliott delighted the audience with a well rendered pianoforte solo.

A list of the successful scholars is subjoined:

1. Herbert Clark, $5; presented by Dr. Burnham.
2. Amy Halpin, $5; presented by Dr. Burnham.
3. Lionel Wilson, $4; presented by W. G. Morrow, Esq.

Mr. E. L. Goodwill, B.A., president of the Canadian Club, who presented the Canadian Club prizes said:

"The executive members of the Canadian Club are proud of this Institute. Some three years ago the Canadian Club wished to add some inducement to the scholars of the Institute and were advised by the Principal that a fit and proper thing would be to offer prizes for history. That was taken up last year, and prizes were awarded. We have been gratified by the manner in which the pupils acknowledged this, and this year it will be enlarged and extended to the pupils of the Public and Separate schools."

In the absence of Mayor Bradburn Mr. John presented the Nicholls scholarships, and the athletic prizes were presented by Mr. Firth, B.A. Following a valedictory address by Miss M. Anderson, the evening closed with a chorus by the Glee Club and the National Anthem.

YOUR GRAY HAIRS QUICKLY VANISH

A Surprise Nobody Minds From Garden Sage, Restores Colour to Every Hair

A feeling of sadness accompanies the discovery of the first gray hairs, which, unfortunately, are looked upon as heralds of advancing age. Gray hair, however handsome it may be, makes a person look old. We all know the advantages of being young. Aside from the good impression a youthful appearance makes on others, simply knowing that you are "looking fit" gives one courage to undertake and accomplish things. So why suffer the handicap of looking old on account of gray hairs, when a simple remedy will give your hair youthful colour and beauty in a few days' time?

Most people know that common garden sage acts as a colour restorer and scalp tonic as well. Our grandmothers used a "Sage Tea" for keeping their hair dark, soft and luxuriant. In Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy we have an ideal preparation of Sage, combined with Sulphur and other valuable remedies for dandruff, itching scalp and thin, weak hair that is split at the ends or constantly coming out. A few applications of this valuable remedy will bring back the colour, and in a short time it will remove every trace of dandruff and greatly improve the growth and appearance of the hair.

Get a fifty cent bottle from your druggist to-day, and notice the difference in your hair after a few days' treatment. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented. Special agent, the Warne Drug Co.

MEETING OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE

WHAT FINANCE COMMITTEE DID

Fixed Tax Rate for 1912 at 22 mills.

Give Increase of $100 to Industrial Exhibition.

Grant $200 to Sick Children's Hospital.

Decide to offer no discount for prompt payment of taxes.

A meeting of the Finance Committee was held on Thursday night, with Ald. Anderson in the chair and Aldermen Buller, Duncan, Johnston and Mayor Bradburn present.

An account for $86 was presented from the Union of Canadian Municipalities. Mayor Bradburn stated that the city had always belonged to the Union. The officers looked after the welfare of the various municipalities in the matter of legislation at Ottawa and in other particulars. If all the municipalities did not belong it would cease to exist.

Ald. Duncan—I think these things are all right. The price seems a little high, though.

Moved by Mayor Bradburn, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that the account be paid. Carried.

The account from the Peterborough Light and Power Co. was left over for further information.

A communication from Tax Collector Green stated that the collections from the registered list totalled $951.09 with $8 spent in postage.

INCREASE FOR S. A. BAND

A request from J. H. Merrett on behalf of the Salvation Army Band for $350 instead of the usual grant of $150.

Ald. Johnston—The other band gets $500.

Ald. Duncan—To my mind we might raise the grant to the Salvation Army Band and take the amount from the old band's grant.

Ald. Johnston—We get good music all the year round from the Salvation Army Band, even on Sundays.

Ald. Buller—Some people may think they get a little too much.

Ald. Duncan—They should have $300 more.

Ald. Buller—I would not take the money from the old band. They have always been here, and they are a good band. The Salvation Army Band is all right, and I believe they should be assisted.

Moved by Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. Buller, that the grant to the S. A. Band be $300 under the same terms as last year.

Mrs. C. Rose, 320 Water street, asked that her license of $5 for a restaurant be refunded.

Mayor Bradburn—If we grant that we'll have John James and all the others in with the same request. Last year we made a standing rule for everybody.

Moved by Ald. Buller, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that no action be taken. Carried.

Ald. Buller—I would willingly give the woman a dollar.

Mayor Bradburn—So would I.

Ald. Duncan—I would too, but if the city cannot give five dollars I don't think any of the Aldermen should. Still it necessary.

No action was taken with a request from Commissioner Ross of the Salvation Army for a grant toward their social work.

Moved by Ald. Buller, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that the usual grant of $60 be given the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto.—Carried.

The report from the Hospital showed that there were seventeen children from Peterborough County treated last year.

Ald. Anderson—"I think there is no work in the Province more worthy than this."

What Did it Cost?

Unless intelligible data is to hand, Mr. Chipman and his engineers will be asked to report what the construction of the Romaine street sewer and drainage work has cost the city, as compared with what the expenditure would have been had Mr. Conroy carried out his contract.

Police Magistrate Dumble will be requested to name Medical Health Officer Dr. McPherson, one of the examining physicians, when it is found necessary to examine patients as to their mental condition. Dr. McPherson will be notified that this will be considered one of his official duties.

SPLENDID WORK DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE DOING.

Mrs. Norman L. Dow Tells What They Have Done For Her—People Talking of Them on Every Side.

Port Daniel West, Bonaventure Co., Que., March 1.—(Special.)—Bonaventure County is ringing with the great work done by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and on every side people are telling their neighbours of aches relieved and ills cured by the great Canadian kidney remedy. To the great mass of evidence already published is now added that of Mrs. Norman L. Dow of this place:—

"I can recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills as an excellent remedy for rheumatism and palpitation of the heart," said Mrs. Dow. "After using one box I was greatly benefitted."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure rheumatism and palpitation of the heart, because they both come from the same cause—impure blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make the kidneys right, and when the kidneys are right they strain all the poison and impurities out of the blood. Cure the kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills and you can't have such diseases as rheumatism or palpitation of the heart.

SCIENCE NOTES.

Telephones which have been supplied to the Berlin police and which may be used with circuits scattered throughout the city are so compact they can be carried in a vest pocket.

A Connecticut inventor has mounted an ash can on wheels and equipped it with handles, which can be locked to hold the affair stationary when they are not required for moving it.

A metal backed ring of rubber, fastened out a few inches from the wheel of an automobile, is claimed by its inventor to prevent the splashing of mud on pedestrians and other vehicles.

The Government of the Soudan has equipped a shallow draft boat as a floating laboratory so that experts can study tropical diseases where they occur instead of having specimens brought to them.

In Germany a Government engineer has devised a new system of canal traction, rails laid on the bottom of a canal engaging rollers on the bottom of a boat, which can be driven by either steam or electricity.

Automatic apparatus, which lights an electric lamp in the motorman's compartment when every door has been closed, has been installed in New York's subway trains to save time in giving train starting signals.

With a view to making farmers' daughters more content to remain at home, the Government of the Netherlands has established in various parts of the nation schools in housewifery, to which other branches eventually will be added.

A Stevenson Prayer.—Give us courage and gaiety and the quiet mind, wrote R. L. Stevenson in one of his beautiful prayers. Spare to us our friends, soften to us our enemies. Bless us if it may be in all our innocent endeavours. If it may not, give us the strength to encounter that which is to come, that we may be brave in peril, constant in tribulation, temperate in wrath, and in all changes of fortune, and down to the gates of death, loyal and loving one another.

AFTER 7 YEARS SUFFERING

I Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Waurika, Okla.—"I had female troubles for seven years, was all run down, and so nervous I could not do anything. The doctors doctored me for different things but did me no good. I got so bad that I could not sleep day or night. While in this condition I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and began its use and wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. In a short time I had gained my average weight and am now strong and well."—Mrs. SALLIE PRUETT, R. F. D. No. 3, Box 31, Waurika, Okla.

Another Grateful Woman

London, Ont.—"I feel as if I could not tell others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was so weak and tired that I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I have other women who have taken it for their illness frequent and they intend to keep it."—Mrs. Wm. A. HARVEY, 265 Dufferin St., London, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has surely cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, and nervous prostration.

POINSETTIAS

"A remarkable man!"

It was not my husband speaking, but some passer-by. However, I looked up at George with a smile and found him looking down at me with much the same humour. We had often spoken of the odd phrases one hears in the street, and how interesting it would be sometimes to hear a little more of the conversation.

"That's a case in point," he laughed, as he guided me through the crowd of theatre-goers which invariably block this part of Broadway at the hour of eight. "We shall never know whose eulogy we have just heard. 'A remarkable man!' There are not many of them."

"No," was my somewhat indifferent reply. It was a keen winter night and snow was packed upon the walks in a way to throw into sharp relief the figures of such pedestrians as happened to be walking about. "But it seems to me that, so far as general appearance goes, the one in front answers your description most admirably."

He was remarkably well built. I noticed him when he came out of the Clermont." This was a hotel we had just passed.

"But it's not only that. It's his height, his very striking features, his expression——" I stopped suddenly, gripping George's arm convulsively in a surprise he appeared to share. We had turned the corner immediately behind the man of whom we were speaking, and so had him still in full view.

"What's he doing?" I asked in a low whisper. We were only a few feet behind. "Look! look! don't you call that curious?"

My husband stared, then uttered a low, "Rather." The man ahead of us, presenting in every respect the appearance of a gentleman, had suddenly stooped to the kerb and was washing his hands in the snow, furtively but with a vigour and purpose which could not fail to arouse the strangest conjectures in any chance onlooker.

"Pilate!" escaped my lips, in a sort of nervous chuckle. But George shook his head at me.

"I don't like it," he muttered with unusual gravity. "Did you see his face?" Then as the man rose and hurried away from us upon the street, "I should like to follow him. I do believe——"

But here we became aware of a quick rush and sudden clamour round the corner we had just left, and turning quickly saw that something had occurred on Broadway which was fast causing a tumult.

"What's the matter?" I cried. "What can have happened? Let's go see, George. Perhaps it has something to do with our man."

My husband, with a final glance down the street at the fast disappearing figure, yielded to my importunity and possibly to some new curiosity of his own.

"I'd like to stop that man first," he said. "But what excuse have I? He may be nothing but a crank with some crack-brained idea in his head. We'll soon know; for there's certainly something wrong there in Broadway."

"He came out of the Clermont," I suggested.

"I know. If the excitement isn't there, what we have just seen is simply a coincidence." Then as we retraced our steps to the corner—"Whatever we hear or see, don't say anything about this man. It's after eight remember, and we promised Adela that we would be at the house before nine."

"I'll be quiet."

"Remember."

It was the last word he had time to speak before we found ourselves in the midst of a crowd of men and women, jostling one another in curiosity, in the consternation following a quick alarm. All were looking one way, and as mine was towards the entrance of the Clermont it was evident enough to us that the alarm had indeed had its origin in the very place we had anticipated. I felt my husband's arm press me closer to his side as we worked our way towards the entrance and presently caught a warning sound from his lips as the oaths and confused cries everywhere surrounding us were broken here and there by articulate words and we heard:

"Is it murder?"

"The beautiful Miss Challoner!"

"A millionairess in her own right."

"Killed, they say."

"No, no, suddenly dead; that's all."

"George, what shall we do?" I managed to cry into my husband's ear.

"Get out of this. There is no chance of us reaching the door, and I can't have you standing round any longer on this icy slush."

"But—is that right?" I urged in an importunate whisper. "Should we go home while he—"

"Hush! my first duty is to you. We will go make our visit; but to-morrow—"

"I can't wait until to-morrow," I pleaded, wild to satisfy my curiosity in regard to an event in which I naturally felt a keen personal interest.

He drew me as near to the edge of the crowd as he could. There were new murmurs all about us.

"It's its a case of heart failure why send for the police?" asked one.

"It is better to have an officer or two here," grumbled another.

"Here comes a cop."

"Well, I a going to vamoose."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," whispered George, who, for all his bluster was as curious as myself. "We will try the rear door where there are fewer persons. Possibly we can make our way in there, and if we can Slater will tell us all we want to know."

Slater was assistant manager of the Clermont, and one of George's oldest friends.

"Then hurry," said I; "I am being crushed here."

George did hurry, and in a few minutes we were before the rear entrance of the great hotel. There was a mob gathered here also, but it was neither so large nor so rough as the one on Broadway. Yet I doubt if we should have been able to work our way through it if Slater had not, at that very instant shown himself in the doorway, in company with an officer to whom he was giving some final instructions. George caught his eye as soon as he was through with the man, and ventured on what I thought a rather uncalled for plea.

"Let us in, Slater," he begged. "My wife feels a little faint; she has been knocked about so by the crowd."

The manager glanced at my face, and shouted to the people around to make room. I felt myself lifted up, and that is all I remember of this part of the adventure. For, affected more than I realized by the excitement of the event I no sooner saw the way cleared for our entrance than I made good my husband's words by fainting away in earnest.

When I came to, it was suddenly and with perfect recognition of my surroundings. The small reception room to which I had been taken was one I had often visited and its familiar features did not hold my attention for a moment. What I did see and welcome was my husband's face bending close over me, and to him I spoke first. My words must have sounded oddly to those about. "Have they told you anything about it?" I asked. "Did He—"

A quick pressure on my arm silenced me, and then I noticed that we were not alone. Two or three ladies stood near, watching me, and one had evidently been using some restorative, for she held a small vinaigrette in her hand. To this lady, George, made haste to introduce me, and from her I presently learned the cause of the disturbance in the hotel.

It was of a somewhat different nature from what I expected and during the recital I could not prevent myself from casting furtive and inquiring glances at George.

Edith, the old known daughter of Moses Challoner, had fallen suddenly dead on floor of the mezzanine. She was not known to have been in poor health, stil less in danger of a fatal attack and the shock was consequently great to her friends, several of whom were in the building. Indeed, it was likely to prove a shock to the whole community, for she had great claims to general admiration, and her death must be regarded as a calamity to persons in all stages of life.

I realized this myself, for I had heard much of the young lady's private virtues, as well as of her great beauty and distinguished manner. A heavy loss, indeed, but—

"Was she alone when she fell?" I asked.

"Virtually alone. Some persons sat on the other side of the room, reading at the big round table. They did not even hear her fall. They say that the band was playing unusually loud in the musicians' gallery."

"Are you feeling quite well now?"

"Quite myself," I gratefully replied as I rose slowly from the sofa. Then as my kind informer stepped aside, I turned to George with the proposal that we should go now.

He seemed as anxious as myself to leave and together we moved toward the door while the hum of excited comment which the intrusion of a fainting woman had undoubtedly interrupted, recommenced behind us till the whole room buzzed.

In the hall we encountered Mr. Slater, whom I have before mentioned. He was trying to maintain order while himself in a state of great agitation. Seeing us he could not refrain from whispering a few words into my husband's ear.

"The doctor has just gone up—her doctor, I mean. He's simply dumbfounded. Says that she was the most healthy woman in New York yesterday. I think—don't mention it—he suspects something entirely different from heart failure."

"What do you mean?" asked George following the assistant manager down the broad flight of steps leading to the office. Then as I pressed up close to Mr. Slater's other side, "She was by herself, wasn't she in the half floor above?"

"Yes, and had been writing a letter. She fell with it still in her hand."

"Have they carried her to her room?" I eagerly inquired, glancing fearfully up at the large semi-circular opening overlooking us from the place where she had fallen.

"Not yet. Mr. Hammond insists upon waiting for the coroner." (Mr. Hamfond was the proprietor of the hotel.) "She is lying on one of the big couches near where she fell. If you like I can give you a glimpse of her. She looks beautiful. It is terrible to think that she is dead."

I don't know why we consented. We were under a spell I think. At all events we accepted his invitation, and followed him up a narrow staircase open to very few that night. At the top, he turned upon us with a warning gesture which I hardly think we needed and led us down a narrow hall flanked by openings corresponding to those we had noted from below. At the furthest one he paused and beckoning us to one side, pointed across the lobby into the large writing room which occupied the better part of the mezzanine floor.

ODDITIES IN PRINT.

An enterprising exchange has collected the following oddities in print:

A butcher's sign out west reads as follows. "John Jacobs kills pigs like his father."

A tailor had a bill in his window to the following effect: "Wanted, several thin coatmakers." This is a fine chance for spare tailors.

One advertisement was headed: "Two sisters want washing." So do a good many brothers.

Another advertisement was: "Wanted, a boy to sandpaper."

An advertisement in a Boston newspaper appeared as follows: "Wanted, a young man in the dry-goods trade; to be partly outdoors and partly behind the counter."

The following extract from a medical advertisement is perhaps correct: "Consumptives, cough while you can, for after you have taken one bottle of my mixture you can't."

To the correspondent who inquires whether there has been any sudden drop in drygoods this week, a commercial writer says: "We have noticed but one. She said, when we picked her up, that people who ate grapes ought not to throw their skins on the sidewalks."

A farmer wrote as follows to a distinguished scientific agriculturist to whom he felt under obligations for introducing a variety of swine: "Respected Sir,—I went yesterday to the cattle show. I found several pigs of your species, a great variety of hogs, and I was astonished at not seeing you there."—American Thresherman.

GIFTS OF CHINA.

With China flaming before the wondering eyes of the world, the Manchu dynasty tottering, and the civilization of Republicanism causing the Yellow Dragon to sit up aghast at the knots that are being tied in his tail, anything about the vast and perplexing nation is of interest just now. China may fitly be described as the cradle of civilization. In fact, China may be said to have been a nation before history began. While the British Isles were wildernesses, inhabited by wild animals, and still wilder men, China was basking in the sunshine of a civilization of so advanced a nature that it has not been eclipsed by many nations—it has, indeed, enjoyed and forgotten more things in the way of civilization than we have yet been blessed with.

Indeed, we owe so many things to the "Heathen Chinee" that he must be surprised, if he ever thinks of it at all, that we Britishers should continually be inventing articles that his forefathers invented so long ago that they have been forgotten. For instance, bells originated in China and were copied by western countries. And when the first Chinese, somewhere between four and five thousand years ago, immigrated from beyond the Caspian Sea to the country their descendants now occupy, they took with them a knowledge of writing and astronomy, and were the first to describe meteors and shooting stars, while in them literature had early patrons, for they compiled the first dictionary about eleven hundred years B.C.

As the Chinese were early acquainted with writing, it seems but natural for the world to be indebted to them for the art of paper making, which they introduced about one hundred and seventy years before the Christian Era. And so one might go giving illustrations of the numerous things which sprang from China. But the great majority of such things would never have revolutionized the world or have been of any great service to mankind if, when they reached Europe, the crude ideas they embodied were not fertilized and developed by the ideas of thinkers. Take, for example, three toys which the Chinese people played with for centuries and still do. They are little wooden blocks on which figures and characters are cut; a little machine with a needle that, when moved about, always turns to the north, and was found useful in sailing up and down the Chinese coast; and, lastly, a fire-cracker. From these blocks of wood came the printing press, from the curious toy of junk sailors was obtained the mariner's compass, while from the fire-crackers were evolved the cannons that, in the course of centuries, have played such havoc in the world.

But, above all, civilization must ever be under an obligation to the Chinese for having introduced the "cup that cheers," for they claim the origin of the use of tea as a drink, the virtues of which the yare said to have discovered two thousand years B.C. There are many legends extant concerning the birth of this popular beverage, one of the most interesting being that relating to a daughter of the then reigning sovereign. This girl fell in love with a young nobleman whose caste excluded him from marrying her. They managed to exchange glances, and he occasionally gathered a few blossoms and had them conveyed to her. One day in the Palace garden the lovers met, and the young man endeavoured to give her a few flowers, but so keen was the watchfulness of her attendants, all she could grasp was a little twig with green leaves. On reaching her room she put the twig in water, and, toward evening, she drank the water in which the twig had been kept. So agreeable was the taste that she even ate the leaves and stalks; every day afterwards she laid bunches of the tea tree brought to her, which she treated

Pat's Brother.—A clergyman, who was appointed to a small church on the West Coast of Ireland, took into his employ as "odd man" a labourer who had formerly lived with the Catholic priest of the parish. One day Pat was driving his new master round the district, and on passing a field remarked, "Oi nivver pass this field but what Oi think of what Father Whoo once said whin Oi was drivin' him this way." "Indeed, and what was that, Pat?" queried the cleric. "Well, your riverence," responded Pat, "just as we were passing the field a donkey that was in it brayed, and the Father said, "Pat, do ye hear yer brother?" "Well," said the master, "and what did you reply?" "Skure," said Pat, "I only answered, 'Yes, Father.'"

This Coffee Pot FREE

Why Dalton's French Drip Coffee is so Wholesome, Delicious and Economical

When you have once tasted Dalton's delicious French Drip Coffee, made in a Dalton's French Drip Coffee Pot, you will never be tempted to drink ordinary boiled Coffee again.

The Coffee berry, as grown, is protected by nature from the insect world by a tough outer shell or husk which contains tannin and other acid, bitter principles which are poisonous to insects and certainly not wholesome to the human system.

Other roasters of Coffee do not remove this bitter husk, and this is why many people find that ordinary Coffee does not agree with them. Not only that, but the usual way of roasting Coffee in cylinders over coke or gas-fire, drives off the volatile essences, so essential to aroma and flavor.

Dalton's French Drip Coffee

The DALTON way is to throw the Coffee berries against an intensely hot flame. This roasts them in half the time and prevents the volatile essences being driven off. Then the Coffee is cooled by a special process, during which a strong suction air-blast blows off all foreign substances. Next comes the grinding, during which another powerful air-blast removes the poisonous, bitter outer shell. The Coffee contains absolutely no chicory and is packed in sealed tins, which preserve all the delightful flavor.

We make Dalton's French Drip Coffee in two strengths Mild Blend and Strong Blend. You cannot tell however which you will like the best until you try both and that is why we ask you to buy two tins in our special offer.

SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER

We feel so sure that you will find either Dalton's Mild Blend or Strong Blend French Drip Coffee, and the Coffee Pot, you have been looking for that we have authorized your Grocer to give you one of these handsome pots (worth $1.00) absolutely free of charge, first purchase of a two pound tin of Dalton's Mild or Strong Blend. If you buy two tins of our Coffee—one of each blend—at the one time, to give it a fair trial, we give you the means of testing it FREE, satisfied that you will use nothing but Dalton's French Drip Coffee thereafter.

KIT'S COLUMN

Madame la Mode is in her most capricious mood. She is not quite sure that women will follow her latest decrees. From the inner sanctuary where she sits enthroned like a Jessop, surrounded by her manikins, stylists, women, designers, and the rest of that large army dependent upon her, a whisper comes that we are to be driven, like sheep to the fold — back to waistlines, peplums, panniers and—bustles. We are asked, to put it plainly, to submit to being made quaintly ugly.

If then, you wish to be arrayed in the new style you will buy a gown of figured taffetas—not the harsh silk we used to call by that name—the sort that rustles and cuts, but a soft shoony fabric with half a dozen different "lights" in it, blue and golden and ruby. You will have this made up in a straight narrow skirt, but you will have three vandyked frills placed round the bottom of it. The bodice will be merely a surplice of silk edged with the peaked frills, and the yoke will be of shadow lace. The sleeves are of the type termed "cut in," and they have a frill dropping over the shoulder. The hat to go with this will be low and broad, and covered with paradise plumes. This is a fashion word straight from Paris sent to the writer from one who lives in the inner sanctuary.

Now, the danger of taffetas is that it will be easily imitated in a much cheaper quality, and will be eagerly seized on by those to whom a "showy" costume appeals. In other words it will become common. The time to get a taffeta gown, house gown or tailored—for silk street suits are the spring vogue—is now. Get it made during Lent, and wear it on Easter Day. You will see it on everybody before the summer is over, and, of course, you would not like to dress like the Common People—aristocrat that you are in the matter of fashion.

Meantime, dear soul, you may be content to trot about along with this poor scribe, in last winter's suit — dyed and made over of course so that nobody but your own dearest friend could recognise it. And your dearest friend would never tell anyone else, would she? She is such a faithful, true soul, she is. What? Very rude of you to wink like that!

Beauty as a profession is dead. The old days have passed away and there are no longer crowds waiting in the parks of the world's great cities to see pass the procession of beautiful women. Time was when not to have seen Langtry take her constitutional in Hyde Park was to miss the sensation of the year. The London shops were filled with portraits of Mrs. Cornwallis-West, and the exquisite Lady Dudley. In still more ancient days people gathered in mobs in Dublin to see the beautiful Gunnings. Many a head was smashed in a riot caused by the crush around the carriage which held one or more of the lovely sisters. To-day no man would cross Stephen's Green to see the most beautiful woman in Ireland. Is it that beauty is at a discount, or that it has become common? Men no longer toast "the belle of the season." Has the advance of women into the industrial and commercial world made its appeal to the mind masculine which in the old days appraised woman for her beauty of body only. If so, we have advanced a step towards better things. After all worth is what counts. We cannot all develop beauty, but we can character. The race is not growing uglier. On the contrary, have you ever noticed the plentifulness of good looks when you take your walks abroad? You meet scores of pretty girls if none of surpassing beauty. And intelligence beams on every face. The fact is that these days beauty is not enough. The struggle for wealth and power has become acute. We have scarcely left ourselves time to observe. In every walk of life there is pressure as never before. Science has made that London- Bridge- New- Zealander our neighbour, and we are next door to happenings the world over. Then to live nowadays we must have brains. In the old times when the men did all the work, we women had time to be beautiful. It was expected of us, and we cultivated charm. Those were the days of the still-room and lavender-scented linen; of Watteau fans and perfumes and petticoats, and the languishing air that went with those things. To-day beauty is not enough, and the languishing airs have blown away. Women are out in the thick of the battle of life. And some of them are thinking more of the vote than of making pot-pourri, of money than of marriage. Beauty has not declined, but it is not the all-important matter to woman that it was. She is learning how to live; she is developing character and exercising her by no means dull brains. This is her age. The age of woman. And she is younger than ever. You will hear good people deploring that "there's not so many old women." It is comforting to reflect over. It shows that woman is bent on using life to the last ounce that is in her. She does not, three times, put on a cap and 'fetch' and retire to the inglenook there to remain for the rest of her days, and take snubs from everybody. Instead she flips her fingers at the old joker with the scythe, and plunges into the whirl whether it be of business, social work, club life, or society, with pluck and vim, and renews her vitality instead of placidly surrendering it. And she is making good, too. She is a more capable manager, a better mother, a more interesting wife for it. And she is all the time doing more good in this old world. Old-fashioned as one may be in many ways, I admire woman immensely in her new rote. She is an inspiration to many of us who toddle along with her in the race doing the day's work, cheered and encouraged by her to keep still enkindled upon the hearth of the heart a spark or two of the divine fire of youth. For, believe me, it is not mere beauty that is the best, the finest gift a woman may hold; it is the preserving within her breast of the heart of a child, and the spirit that will sweep her fighting to the last ditch, and dying there upon her guns.

A withered rose gray with the touch of time: A bundle of papers that almost fell to pieces at the first feel of a hand, an end of faded ribbon; these are what a breaking wall, rudely torn open to the street, revealed the other day. Did you ever watch house wreckers tearing down an old building? How irreverent seemed the hands that opened to the gaze of the street some little sanctuary of home. A small chintz papered room, perhaps, where some girl dreamed the rosy dreams of life's springtide, or the living room where all the family sat about the fire on chilly evenings. It was in the cranny of just such a wall that the workmen found the crumbling rose and the packet of yellow papers. These bore the date of 1859, and told the story of a wedding—one of those brilliant be-jewelled weddings over which the little saleagirl pores in the corner of the six o'clock street car when she is going home in the evening.

The fyles of old newspapers of that date gave the story. The bride was young, rich, exquisite! The groom was a nobleman, and a millionaire. The rose was worn by the girl upon her marriage morning. The wedding gown alone cost many thousands of dollars. The jewels were entirely diamonds and pearls—tears and laughter. The affair was the most brilliant function of a great city. It was attended by everybody of note. The decorations, flowers, banquet, etc., cost immense sums. The happy couple departed under a shower of rose-leaves and rice which was the custom of the time.

Then life began for them under rosy auspices. They travelled, saw the world, returned and lived between their city home and country residence. The house the wreckers were tearing down was settled on the bride. It was a great rambling old mansion. Built in with its walls were the newspapers of the day with their account of the wedding. The girl tossed her bridal rose among them "for luck." The years came and sped. The times changed. The city grew, and cast its long tentacles north and south, east and west. Death made merry harvest among men and Life, as always, laughed at him.

To-day, deaf, old, feeble, befriended only by a few good-hearted people who know nothing of her story, the bride of long ago, she whose slender body could scarcely bear the weight of the marriage jewels, lives in an asylum. Death, who took all from her, passed her by. Life forgot her. Like the rose of her girlhood, she lies withered and gray, tucked away in one of life's crannies. With the tearing of the wall the story fell into the rough hands of the workman, and was told again. But no one remembered having heard it before. Fifty-three years is a long time, and the world is always hurrying. There is no time to recall yesterday. There are many stories. The big Human Magazine is filled with them. But we rarely read them. We prefer to turn to the little pages of fiction. The roses that bloom and fade there are far more interesting than those human flowers which fall and wither in the Garden of Life. As always, we grasp at shadows.

And talking of Time and its jokes, it appears that Sarah Bernhardt, thirty-one or two years ago, felt that she was growing old. She then made up her mind that it was time to retire from the stage. "I only earn," she said in an interview, "£1200 a year. That is sufficient for an artist who intends to go on acting all his or her life. But I do not intend to go on acting all my life. In twenty years I shall be an old woman, and I hope to have retired by then. That is why I am leaving the Comedie Francaise." That was in 1880, and to-day the Divine One is preparing to appear in a more youthful role than ever. Did I not tell you just now that this was Woman's Age, and that she is younger than she ever was before? Evidently Bernhardt has learnt the lesson, and has kept her fires burning. Her expressed desire is that she may meet her hour upon the stage—go out in the middle of her work. Is not this the best way to live—and die?

A correspondent asks me to write "a little more" of Paderewski, who, as I said last week, is again about to drive the footlights. At first the great pianist played to very small audiences. He travelled about Russia, poor and unknown, thence went to Servia, and Roumania, and to bleak Siberia. Most of his hearers listened coldly. Of applause there was none. Here and there one caught the meaning of his god-gift of music, among them a girl of seventeen. Her name was Rose Hassal, and she was the daughter of a very rich Roumanian. Paderewski declared always that he had felt her eyes on him that first night, and they drew the music from his soul. In more prosaic words—the young man had fallen in love. Later he met the girl with her father, and both thanked him for his music. Rose had the divine gift of sympathy, and the very soul of the musician was starving for a crumb of it. They met again. The father frowned. The girl blushed. One day they both held hands, and walked away together into the world, and left the father frowning.

She turned his music for him when he played. Her eyes were his inspiration. His music grew always sweeter his touch more caressing. Still the audiences remained deaf and dull. There was little money, and life grew very hard. He had to practise eight hours every day, and at the end had little to eat. The young wife, used to good living, could not stand privation. Her father refused to help, and his could not. One night a year later two angels entered the little home of the poor musician. They were the angels of Life and Death. Each brought his gift, and departed, and there by the bed where his dead wife lay knelt Ignace Paderewski. The neighbour women took the little child and cared for it. The musician went quite mad for a while with grief. The child was a cripple.

I do not know if this child be yet living, but he lived to be 20 years of age. He never walked, and never used his arms. He sat and looked at Paderewski with his mother's eyes. The musician began to believe his dead wife was with him when he played. It was this thought that kept him alive. But he was thereafter an old man. Riches came his way, and fame, as all the world knows. He retired to his estate in Galicia, and busied himself in composition. He helped everyone in trouble who came to him. He gave widely—with both hands. He has suffered, and worked more than men twice his age. It was said that he would never marry again. He did though, an estimable woman of whom he is very fond. But there is no more fire and hope. His life ended the night the poor crippled human atom was laid in his arms.

And now he has to earn again, as I said last week. Some day when you are listening to his golden notes—i such happiness comes your way—remember his story.

What is your particular madness in the matter of numbers? Nearly everyone has a "madness." I know a woman who has to count eight on the eight last things she touches before going to bed. She is quite sane in other respects. I know a man who always tries to get berth No. 5 when he travels. T. P. O'Connor once told me that his magic number is three. He takes three steps, for instance, this way or that when departing upon a journey. If he forgets to count three, he begins all over again, and starts off—one, two, three—then he proceeds upon his unchecked way. Many persons swear by the number 9, and we all know what we think of 13. The numeral 7 is called the Divine number, since it is conspicuous in biblical lore, occurring over 300 times in the scriptures. Please don't contradict, and write telling me I've told a story. I shall not contradict you. Another divine favourite is the number 3, the Trinity. This is determined by a remarkable combination of figures. If, therefore, you have no particular figure madness, cultivate one with either a 7 or a 3 in it. The number 6 woman and 5 man are always unlucky.

The White House shadowgraphs are in action again. Faces of the dead and gone presidents are chasing each other on the solid stone columns of the first House in the land of American States. Outlines of living politicians are discerned playing at hide and seek with one another. Some magic joker is at work, and big Bill Taft is seen at times lurking behind a pillar peering out at the doughty Teddy, who is on the chase with his Big Stick. There is a Pointing Hand, too, and nobody can discover who it is. From out the uncertain past rise the profiles of Messrs Patterson and Fielding, followed as they flit past by that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in full cry. So flit the shadowgraphs on the White House. But there is one shadow that never plays there. It is that of William Jennings Bryen.

LICOME'S LUCK

(Short Story.)

Fred Licome rubbed his heavy eyelids violently. It was hard to tell whether this was a waking reality or a vision stepping out of his dream. Having decided that this dainty little figure who stood before him with sunset glow upon her cheeks was a reality, he sprang to his feet as she stammered an apology.

"I am awfully sorry," she said tremulously, "but really the back of your head looked so like my brother's that I supposed he had come out on an early train, and I—I—"

"And you kissed me," he concluded for her, "which requires no apology at all, unless in the form of an encore."

She stamped a trim foot angrily. "I think you are horrid to suggest such a thing," she stormed. "You know very well that coming up from behind you, I could not see that I was making a mistake."

"For which the gods be praised," he interpolated fervently.

"You don't suppose I would have kissed you knowing it to be you, do you?" she demanded.

"Not yet," he returned hopefully. And at that she stamped her foot again and fled. Clearly it was defeat to argue with this good-looking young fellow. And Licome went back to his dreams.

But sleep was not for him that afternoon, for presently a gentle shake on his shoulder aroused him, and there was the dream lady again.

"You won't tell anybody?" she pleaded prettily. He assumed a judicial air.

"Now, really," he protested, "it seems to me that it would really be a public benefaction to this deserted place to give them something to talk about."

"No, no," she wailed. "I won't have it. Promise me you won' tell—anyone."

He pretended to ponder a moment, and she, unused to his humour, hung breathlessly on his deliberation. Finally he turned to her. "I think it might be arranged," he suggested.

"How?" He smiled at the evident relief in her tones.

"I think," he declared, "that if you are very nice indeed to a poor city stranger, and give him a lot of your time, that—well, friends shouldn't tell on each other, should they?"

With a fervent "thank you," she ran away, but his voice arrested her at the door: "Don't you think," he asked, as she went slowly toward him, "that you ought to shake hands on the bargain?"

He held the tiny palm a fraction longer than is considered good form, then for a second time he went back to the easy chair he had occupied practically ever since he had been driven up from he station a few hours before. This time it was not to sleep, but to meditate on the sweet face of the girl who had kissed him as he slept, mistaking him for her brother.

When Gerald Hunter arrived on the later train, Licome readily understood how Geraldine had made the mistake. They were of the same clean-cut, blonde type, much of height, and with many little tricks of gesture in common. Those who did not know declared that it must be Licome's resemblance to Hunter which accounted for the liking Geraldine had apparently formed for Fred. She kept her word, as he had his, and not a whisper of her blunder had reached the ears of the gossips who nightly thronged the front piazza of Glendon's boarding-house. But while she was frankly friendly, the memory of the unsought kiss seemed to stand between them.

As Licome was sincerely in love with her, it was not always easy to ramble over the hills at her side, holding her hand, as he assisted her over rocks and rivulets, and yet restrain the desire to crush her in his arms and place back upon those sensitive lips the kiss they had bestowed upon him.

Licome was no much of a philosopher to sacrifice to one momentary madness his chance of ever winning her love. Besides, Licome's luck was proverbial among his friends, and somehow he felt that a way would be shown him before his month's vacation was up.

And then there entered upon the the scene a brindle bulldog, rejoicing in the name of Mike, which had been separated from his master. Heat and other little annoyances had added to his misery, and in due course Mike with foaming jaws, set forth to revenge himself upon society.

Down in the little ravine back of the big meadow he ran across a tiny child, playing beside the brook. She was too young to understand this madness, and with a cooing speech invited the "nice doggie" to share her play.

With a growl that half warned the child of her danger, he sprang down the bank just as she started up the other side. A second later he would have sprung upon her had not Licome created a diversion by shouting as he came into view through the thicket upon the further bank.

With a frightened cry the child ran toward him. Hastily putting her behind him, he turned to face the maddened beast. He held the wrestling championship of his club and was quick upon his feet. As the dog sprang at him he stepped aside and, like a flash, grasped the thick folds of skin at the back of the neck. It was a daring thing to do, but there was no time for anything else, and with a desperation born of the knowledge that to relax his grip meant death for himself and the child, he clung to the massive shoulders, skilfully shifting his position to keep from the drooling jaws.

For a moment Geraldine, following slowly behind, was paralyzed at the sight. Then she roused to action.

"What shall I do?" she shouted.

"I've a light gun in the right hand pocket of my overcoat," he called. "It's a small calibre, but it may get us out of this. Come up behind me, and for God's sake be careful."

Quickly, but without a trace of nervousness, she went up to him and deftly slipped the gun from his pocket. Then, while Licome put forth all his strength to hold the brute still, she placed the revolver to Mike's ear and fired twice.

With a mighty bound that tore Licome's hold loose, Mike sprang forward and fell to earth dead. Licome staggered a few paces and fell in a faint from sheer exhaustion. Ten minutes later, when he opened his eyes again, his head lay in Geraldine's lap, and there was a look in the moist eyes that told him that "Licome's Luck" had prevailed. Then she stooped and gave him her second unsought kiss. And this time there was no mistake.—George Henry in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Quest of Gentle Hazard

Being the Adventures in Love and Chivalry of Lord Richard Jocelyn.

By H. M. Egbert

Master and Man

(Copyright, 1911, by W. G. Chapman.)

Within Lord Richard Jocelyn's service was the apartment on Madison avenue, New York, in preparation for his master's return after a week-end vacation. Everything was finished save the final touches; the books were back upon their shelves, the mirror was spotless, even the solitaire board, with which Lord Jocelyn was wont to assuage his moments of ennui, shone like ebony. Satisfied at last with the results of his labor, Talbot put down his duster and sighed heavily.

"It's a bad business," he said sadly. "What 'is father will say to it I don't know. But it's 'im I'm sorry for."

He caught sight of his disconsolate visage in a mirror over the mantel and shook his fist at it.

"Silly 'ass," he cried, pounding his temples; "why didn't you save 'im from that 'ussy? Answer me that, Talbot, or 'old your 'asted tongue for never."

Suddenly, as though seized with an inspiration, he went to the writing desk, opened a drawer and pulled out a bundle of letters, from some of which he removed the envelopes.

"'My darling Dick,'" he read with disgust. "'Dick!'" he muttered. "Fancy the likes of 'er calling 'im Dick! A common shop girl, that's what she is, the minx. Wrapped up 'is packages and found 'e was a lord an' set 'er cap at 'im! Talbot, it's hup to you to act, as the Yankees say."

He turned the sheet and read on, his features contorted with various emotions in which disgust predominated.

"'When we are one, my darling, my love shall be yours for ever. Though you are of humble birth, and poor'—so 'e's been stringin' 'er, 'as 'e?—'you are a hundred times too good for me. But my love shall shield you'—"

Talbot thrust the letter back into its envelope, tied up the package again and replaced it in the drawer; then closed the desk.

"The fact is, Talbot," he soliloquised, "Lord Richard, 'is gone batty hover a designing shop 'ussy, what ain't worth wiping 'is boots hon. An' hit's gone too far now. Talking of getting married next week, 'e is. An' then—then wot? 'E's ruined, that's wot. An' so, somethink's got to be done an' you're a-goin' to do it."

He sank into a chair and buried his head in his hands, remaining silent for an appreciable interval. At last he rose abruptly and betook himself into the hall. He came back, holding a letter, which he carefully placed away in his breast pocket. Then, taking the telephone receiver from its hook, he called up a district messenger office.

"Send me a boy at once," he said. "Can you 'ave 'im 'ere inside of fifteen minutes?"

The answer was evidently satisfactory, for Talbot's face became more composed. He began striding up and down the room noisily.

"It's touch and go," he muttered to himself. "But there's nothink else to be done. Talbot, you've got to do it."

Within the period of time stipulated the messenger boy arrived and found Talbot fingering one of his master's visiting cards. "Give this to Mrs. Schmidt, 848 East Ninety-first street," he commanded. "And tell 'er to bring 'er daughter round 'ere right away. Tell 'er—" he paused to think of the message most likely to succeed in its purpose—"tell 'er it's a matter of matrimony," he blurted out.

"Yessir," said the boy, grinning.

"And 'ere's a dollar and you can keep the change," Talbot pursued. "Now beat it."

The boy popped out of the door and Talbot watched him scurrying down the stairs. He had calculated his time to a minute, for hardly had he disappeared through the front door when Talbot heard his master's step upon the hall and withdrew into the sitting-room. A minute afterward Lord Jocelyn entered, flushed with the exertion of running up five flights of stairs.

"Talbot, Talbot," he called briskly, "where the devil's the letter?"

"There's no letter come, sir," said Talbot.

"No letter? There must be a letter. Are you sure you didn't take one in?"

"Quite sure, sir," Talbot rejoined steadily.

"Which I'm sorry, sir," said his servant respectfully. "I remember sir, when Mrs. Talbot an' I, sir—"

"Shut up, you silly old fool," cried his master in exasperation. "Do you understand what this means to me? There won't be another English mail for a week now, and I haven't five dollars to my name. That's the first time my remittance has been late. I shall have to postpone my wedding, and what am I going to say to Lena? How can I get married and spend my honeymoon on four dollars and a quarter?"

"Which would be difficult, sir," responded Talbot.

"I tell you what," cried his master, starting up in excitement. "Talbot, you must lend me something. You're richer than Croesus. Talbot, lend me five hundred for a week."

Talbot remained discreetly silent, his eyes cast down.

"Talbot, you won't refuse me," said his master. "Talbot, it would break her heart to have to wait now, when she's got all her gowns completed. Talbot, I never knew what it meant to be in love before," he cried rapturously. "To think of winning the love of such a good, innocent, beautiful girl! What if she does work in a shop? Her father was a retired Dutch army officer—she told me so herself. And she doesn't know I'm a lord; she thinks I'm plain Mr. Jocelyn, and poor. Oh, Talbot, you wouldn't have the heart to refuse me?" said his master reproachfully.

"No, sir," answered Talbot, raising his eyes. "But there's Mrs. Talbot I've got to think of, sir."

"What do you mean?" his master cried indignantly. "D'you think I won't repay you?"

"Which I do not, sir," answered Talbot. "But what if you was to die, sir, before the hend of the week, sir?"

"Don't be a donkey, Talbot."

"Them honeymoon journeys is hapt to be dangerous, I'm told, sir," persisted Talbot. "I wouldn't trust myself in no American trains without a life hinsurance, sir. An', if you was to come to anythink, I could never get my money, sir."

"I'll give you an I. O. U., then."

"Which wouldn't be no use, sir, seeing as the remittance would be haddressed to you an' I couldn't collect it, sir. But I'll lend you five 'undred dollars if you'll write out a bill of sale for your furniture, sir. And sublet your apartment to me for one month from today, sir."

His master looked at him in astonishment.

"Talbot, you're a financial wonder," he said. "Here, give me a pen and ink and a couple of sheets of notepaper. Now, what do I write? 'I hereby agree that the furniture in my apartment at'—what's my number?—'shall, in consideration of five hundred dollars, become the property of Frederick Talbot.' Is that right? Now for the lease."

"And the receipt, sir," said his servant, when he had concluded. "That's to show that the money has been delivered, sir." He passed out into his bedroom and presently returned, bearing with him five bills of the denomination of one hundred dollars each, which he placed respectfully upon the table.

"Where—why—do you keep your money in your stocking, Talbot?" asked his master, pocketing the bills slowly.

"Yes, sir," answered Talbot, respectfully. "I never trusts no banks, sir. When Mrs. Talbot—"

But this time Jocelyn did not attempt to cut his servant's story short.

"An' now, sir," continued Talbot, when his narration was concluded, "I beg to hoffer you my resignation, sir."

"What for?" cried Jocelyn.

"A mere matter of form, sir. Hotherwise, sir, some doubt might harise as to the validity of these papers, sir. Henceforth, sir, so long as hour harrangement lasts, I'll hask you to be my guest, sir."

"Talbot, you're a wizard," cried Lord Jocelyn enthusiastically. "That's the enterprise and initiative of America coming out on your stolid British demeanor, Talbot. What?"

"Yes," answered Talbot indifferently.

"So we're to be equals for so long as our arrangement lasts," said Jocelyn. "That suits me, my dear fellow. I'm positively sick of playing master and bein 'sir'd' by you, and I'm going to give you as good a time as I know how. We'll dine together and take in a few theatres—" he paused a moment. "I mean, after my return from my honeymoon, of course. Oh, Talbot, if you knew how I adore her!"

"And meanwhile," said Talbot, "if I might make the suggestion, suppose we start to prepare a little dinner."

"I'll help you, Talbot," answered Lord Jocelyn. "Positively, Talbot, you're giving me more fun than I've had in a year. How do I lay the table? We want a cloth, don't we?"

"Yes, sir—I mean, yes, friend," answered his former servitor. "Take off your coat and roll your sleeves up. Now put on that apron that's hanging there. That's to keep the grease off your clothes. That's right; let me fasten it behind. Now suppose you get the plates and cutlery out of that cupboard, and I'll go down to the 'all and hask the janitor whether that letter's got into the wrong box by accident."

Leaving Lord Jocelyn busily employed at his new diversion, Talbot went into his bedroom and quietly abstracted his frock coat and silk hat from a cupboard. Donning these, he made his way out of the apartment, first placing a piece of paper under the clapper of the electric bell. His calculations had been as close as they were shrewd, and he knew that the message which he had sent would bring Lena Schmidt and her mother post-haste to the Madison avenue apartment in order that the marriage might be completed before the opportunity could slip through their fingers. Talbot had seen the young woman on several occasions. Her blond, Teutonic beauty which Jocelyn raved over had seemed to him the transient prettiness of the dairymaid; that she was coarse-minded and calculating he knew; at all hazard he was resolved to save his master from the fatal error he contemplated, and he was ready to go all lengths in order to achieve his purpose. Talbot's English blood was "up," and once the phlegm of the British butler is aroused, little short of an earthquake or an avalanche can quiet it.

Talbot quitted the hall and, opening the door of the vestibule, peered into the street. He had fitted his calculations to events admirably, for there, just rounding the corner of the block, he perceived Lena Schmidt, accompanied by an older woman, horrible example of her daughter's physical destiny, and both dressed in astonishing finery. Talbot hastened back into the apartment house, gained the head of the stairs and, standing there, heard the faint whirr of the electric bell. Against the paper under the clapper.

"My Gawd, it's now or never," said Talbot, gathering his master's frock coat over his ample bosom. He went back into the apartment.

"Any letter?" sang out Lord Jocelyn from within. "I've set the table. Come and see if it's right."

"One moment," Talbot responded. "Don't come out of the kitchen—there's somebody coming up the stairs; it may be a tradesman."

"Righto," Jocelyn answered. "I shouldn't care to be seen in my shirt-sleeves. Talbot, you were right about the grease; the butter fell down over my trousers."

"Hindeed!" said Talbot, his heart beating as he heard the heavy footfalls of his visitors upon the stairs. He heard Jocelyn stamping around in the kitchen as he sought the articles for the table; then two women turned the corner of the passage below and started to ascend the flight. Talbot closed the door softly.

Ping—gr—gr! went the electric bell within. Talbot strode to the door and stood before the visitors, to all appearance a heavy, prosperous Englishman, wearing the dignity acquired by many years of service in the fourth Viscount Jocelyn's family.

"Is Mr. Jocelyn in?" inquired Mrs. Schmidt sweetly.

"I believe Jocelyn is in, although it isn't his afternoon off," answered Talbot haughtily. "Walk in please. Go straight through, ladies; you'll find him in the kitchen."

"In the kitchen?" echoed Lena, rolling her ox-like blue eyes. "What is he doing there?"

"I really cannot say, madam," replied Talbot. "He doubtless knows his own business better than I do. He is probably washing my dishes."

"Washing your dishes?" re-echoed mamma. "And who are you, pray?"

"I have the honor to be Hearl Talbot," replied Talbot haughtily.

"Why Dickie didn't tell me he was living with an earl!" exclaimed Lena in astonishment.

"Really, madam, I am not responsible for what my servants may or may not choose to say," Talbot answered with hauteur. "If you want to go in, you may."

What answer the petrified women would have returned cannot be ascertained, for at that moment Jocelyn, hearing the voice of his betrothed, came hastening out of the kitchen, still wearing his apron.

"Lena!" he cried ecstatically.

"Young man," said Talbot pompously, "you will please defer your love-making until you get into the park. Go and make yourself decent and take your friends away."

"What does this mean?" screamed Mrs. Schmidt. "Dicky, who is this man?"

"It would be more to the point if you would tell me what this means, madam," said Talbot. "I am not in the habit of entertaining my valet's visitors, and I do not encourage his receiving females here."

"We ain't females, we're ladies," screamed Mrs. Schmidt.

"Talbot, have you gone crazy?" demanded Jocelyn. "What are you doing in my frock coat? Get out of here. You're discharged."

"Ah!" said Talbot, shaking his finger. "Young man, you've been drinking again and this time you'll 'ave to go. Understand me? Pack up and go or I'll call in the police."

He turned to the women, who, wholly overcome by this astonishing scene, were retreating toward one corner of the apartment.

"I see now that you have been under an error," he said. "This foolish young man of mine hevidently meant to hentertain you 'ere while I was away. I came back unexpectedly from a holiday this afternoon and—"

"I thought he was a lord," sobbed Lena, covering her face.

Talbot roared with laughter.

"So 'e's been himpersonating me, as 'e? Why, ladies, Jocelyn's father was a stable boy, and—"

He got no further, for Jocelyn, at last recovering possession of his senses, seizing the handiest object, which happened to be a bottle of seltzer water, flung it at Talbot's head. Talbot ducked just in time and the bottle smashed against the wall behind him, breaking the glass of a picture and deluging the carpet with bubbling water. Then, as Jocelyn sprang toward him, Talbot snatched up a chair and adroitly parried his former master's assaults with it. At last, gasping for breath, Jocelyn desisted and stood facing Talbot, white with impotent rage.

"Poor fellow, poor fellow," said Talbot compassionately. "I took 'im from the Hinebriates' 'ome, ladies, hon his solemn promise never to touch liquor again. So 'e's been masquerading has a lord 'as' 'e? Well, well, well, well!" He struck a dramatic pose. "The word of a Henglish heart 'as 'itherto been unquestioned," he said, "but being as you're furriners—I mean Hamericans—perhaps you don't know that. If you will permit me, ladies, I will produce my lease of this apartment, hand halso the bill of sale for this 'ere furniture, hin proof of what I claim."

But the ladies, tossing their heads proudly, were already at the door.

"No, I thank you, Earl Talbot," said Lena Schmidt. "The disgraceful scene which I have seen—I should say witnessed—has altogether destroyed my once proud confidence in that monster of infamy. O, Mr. Jocelyn," she went on with a sob, "how could you have deceived me so?"

"As a rule," added her mother loftily, "we prefer not to mix up with common servants. Earl Talbot, I wish you a happy good afternoon."

"Stop! Stop!" cried Jocelyn, springing toward his inamorata. "Lena, for heaven's sake listen to me!"

"Back, misguided young drunken man," said Talbot, interposing a massive hand. "Trouble my guests no more. Your punishment is a fit reward for your perfidy."

"And I thought he was a lord," sobbed Lena, passing through the door, which Talbot held open for her.

"A narrer escape, my dear," her mother answered. "These fake lords is thicker than blackberries. It's back to the shop—I mean—my daughter has some purchases to make, you know, Earl Talbot." She wrung her hands. "O, if she hadn't been and bought such a big trousseau," she moaned, and so passed weeping out of the room.

Talbot stood beside the door, looking at his master, who, wholly overcome, had sunk dejectedly into a chair. He waited for him to speak, but since Lord Jocelyn said nothing, he drew from his pocket the lease of the apartment and the bill of sale, as well as the receipt. He tore them into four pieces and deposited them at Lord Jocelyn's elbow. Then, still silent, he removed the frock coat, took up the silk hat and, passing into the bedroom, replaced them in the cupboard. Next he donned his outdoor coat, put together a few articles of his property in a battered suit case and came back, carrying it in his hand. He paused beside Lord Jocelyn's chair, took an envelope from his pocket, and handed it to him.

"Your letter, sir," he said.

Then Lord Jocelyn looked up and Talbot saw tears in his eyes.

"Good-bye, sir," said Talbot, gulping, and moved toward the door. But as he placed his fingers on the handle Lord Jocelyn called him.

"Where are you going, Talbot?" he asked.

"I'm going 'ome to Hengland, sir," answered his servant.

"Wait a minute, Talbot. Aren't you going to work for me any more?"

"You wouldn't want to re-engage me, sir?" Talbot stammered huskily.

"By the lord, Wouldn't I?" cried Jocelyn, springing to his feet. "Talbot, you've done me a better service than any man has ever yet done for me."

"I'm glad to 'ear you say-so, sir," said Talbot, dropping his suit case. "Them was—pardon me—'unches, sir. They knew you was a lord, sir. Hit was honto their games, sir."

"Talbot," said Jocelyn, "why am I such a damned donkey?"

"O, not that, sir. Per'aps, hif I might make so bold, a little bit of a—er—mule, sir. Hit's just Henglish hobstinacy, sir. Do you wish me to stay, sir?"

"You bet I do," said Jocelyn, grasping him by the hand. "And now Talbot, you old jackass, just wipe that seltzer water off the carpet and pick up those broken pieces of glass."

SEEMED TO FILL THE BILL

Young Suffragette Appeared to the Youth's Mother to Be Suitable as His Wife.

The young suffragette who had insisted on marrying the young man with whom she had fallen in love, approached the young man's mother in fear and trembling.

"Can you support my son," asked that lady sternly, "in the style to which he has been accustomed?"

"I cannot, madam. He will have to supply all the cash."

"Um. Are you able, in spite of your advanced views, to keep him badly in debt?"

"I am. That is my specialty."

"Do you know how to nurse him if he should fall ill?"

"Haven't the remotest idea. My childhood has been spent in attending cancelous."

"Ha! Will you guarantee to kiss him good-by every morning?"

"If I happen to remember it—but I can't guarantee anything."

"What time do you expect to come in at night?"

"O, anywhere from 12 to 8 in the morning."

"Do you rehearse your speeches at home?"

"Yes, as a rule."

The mother's face relaxed.

"We must be cautious in these matters," she said sweetly. "But, on the whole, I think you will do."—Life.

A Nautical Christening.

Some years ago a slow sailing vessel, when some 600 miles from Liverpool, picked up a lusty youngster of five years lashed to a mast.

The captain took a great liking to him, called him his son and decided that the little chap must be christened—one of the few things which he knew must be attended to in the case of children.

Of course there was no chaplain aboard, so the captain himself undertook the ceremony. He gathered the men about him, and with a mixed knowledge of his duties, he glared about him and asked whether any one knew just cause why the boy should not be christened.

"If there is," he roared, "speak up like a man or forever hold your tongue."

Then he suddenly cracked a bottle of wine over his head and christened him.

The ocean waif is now settled down—a steady longshoreman, but he still relates with satisfaction the story of his christening.

The Iron Crown of Italy.

The historic iron crown of Italy has played a romantic role in the history of the peninsula. It was made in the year 594 by the command, it is said, of Theodolinda, the widow of a Lombard king, on the occasion of her marriage to a duke of Turin.

The crown is of iron overlaid with gilt. Its significance was supposed to lay in the fact that the weight of royalty could never be lightened by its splendid exterior. The iron of the inner portion was traditionally held to be one of the long nails used at the crucifixion.

For a long time the crown was in the keeping of the famous monastery at Monza. In 774 it was brought forth to be placed upon the head of Charlemagne as "King of the Lombards," and on later occasions it figured in the triumphs of Frederic IV and Charles V. Finally in the presence of all the representatives of state, the foreign envoys and princes and officers, Napoleon Bonaparte solemnly united it to the crown of France.

The crown belongs to the state, and the custodian of it is the legitimate representative of the destinies of Monza. The title of "grand custodian," however, pertains to the head of the order of Cavaliers.—Harper's Weekly.

Solace in Books.

A woman who used to drag through the day in a vainglorious effort to "kill time" was persuaded to take recourse to a circulating library near at hand. Until this solution of the time problem was virtually thrust upon her she was as ignorant of books, especially current editions, as she was of the fourth dimension, though she had been something of a reader in girlhood days. After forcing herself to wade through three volumes, the old love of books, lying dormant, suddenly awakened to renewed activity, and the life of the woman, from being one of many humdrum days, given to watching the clock and aimless wandering through the house, has come to be one of an endless succession of exciting and interesting events, while her hours are peopled with an ever-varying procession of unusual personalities which march through the pages of good fiction. For her books have given a new zest to living, and she is anxious to pass along the suggestion to her sister "stay at homes" who have more time than they can sensibly spend.

WHY HE LIKES WATERMELONS

Colored Man Discourses Philosophically on These Soothing, Cooling and Filling Fruits.

A well-known lawyer, who is spending his vacation at home doing nothing, or, as he says, "loafing with all his might," tells of a talk he had recently with his colored hired man.

"Why is it, John, that colored people are so fond of watermelons?"

"I don't know," he replied, grinning, "'less its jes' because dey's people. I knows a heap o' white folks 'at likes 'em, too. I likes 'em 'cause dey's soothin', an' coolin', an' fillin', an' I spose dey 'similates dat a-way wid white folks. I reckon dey ain' much difference 'tween white folks and culled folks' insides."

"Perhaps not. Do you consider the watermelon a fruit or a vegetable?"

"Well, now, it's jes' like this: Watermelons ain' no vegetable, cause dey won't stan' cookin' like cabbage nor candy' like beans, nor dryin' like red peppers, an' dey ain' no fruit, 'cause dey 'pears grow on trees an' you can't put 'em in your sockets like apples and peaches. Looks to me like dey's jes' watermelons."

"How would it do to call it the fruit of a cucurbitaceous vine, distinguished for interior pulpiness and copiousness of watery juice?"

"Dat's it, 'sactly," said John; "dat's jus' what I was goin' to say."—Indianapolis News.

Pit Brow Lassies.

How difficult it is to make laws to suit everybody is illustrated again in the tale which comes from England about the lassies of Lancashire. The poor slaves! They spend their young lives pushing heavy coal tubs to the pit brows of the mines. No decent civilization would permit its women to be so injured! So the philanthropists argued, and straightway a bill was passed forbidding the employment of women at the pit brows. But were the beneficiaries grateful? Not at all. They protested. A deputation of them traveled to London under the aegis of the mayor and mayor's wife of Wigan to urge the repeal of the law! "They all looked healthy," says the report, "and well dressed for their station." They are quite able to do the work, they protested, and do not want any benevolent Parliamentary intervention in their behalf.

A Tender Tidbit.

Indeed, my dear, you ought to give up this idea of becoming a missionary to convert the heathen."

"I am sure I could get them to like me."

"Oh, they'll like you, all right. As soon as they lay eyes on you, they'll see you are sweet enough to eat."

Dismal Swamp Water.

Many interesting observations were made during a recent excursion into the Dismal Swamp of Virginia, sent out by the Washington Academy of Sciences. The swamp is divided into two parts, as far as the character of the vegetation is concerned—the "black gum" and the "juniper" areas. The juniper area is of particular interest. Juniper is the local name for the Southern white cedar. Swamp blueberry, white alder, inkberry, fetter bush and other species of the heather family are intermingled with the juniper trees. The water of the juniper swamp contains a remarkable small quantity of mineral matter and has the color of tea. It is antiseptic, and before the days of distilled sea water it furnished the favorite supply of drinking water for ships starting on long voyages from Norfolk. The natives called it "juniper water," and were very fond of it.—Forest Conservation.

TEMPERANCE IN SWEDEN
BY JOSEPH MALINS.

who visited Sweden, in 1904 expressly to investigate the Gothenburg System at the instance of the then Home Secretary of the British Parliament, Sir William Harcourt, and was received in private audience by King Oscar II. In 1908 he was summoned by Lord Peel to give evidence on the system to the British Royal Commission on Licensing, then sitting in Queen Victoria's Robing Room at the Parliament House. After the discussion of the Gothenburg System at the Stockholm Congress in 1907, he prepared a written discussion of the system which was pronounced one of the fairest and most judicial that had ever been given to the public.

The first promise of a brighter day was flashed from the United States to Sweden by way of Scotland. In 1831 the Royal Patriotic Society of Sweden wrote to Scotland for the American temperance publications, and in that year the first society was formed in Sweden. Very soon an American temperance champion, in the person of the Rev. Dr. Robert Baird, visited Sweden, and the Swedish king, at his own cost, had Dr. Baird's "American History of Temperance" translated and circulated among the people.

By 1835 the National Parliament decreed the suppression of the system of domestic distillation, and within about a decade the liquor consumption had dropped to 22 litres per head. But its consumption was still so enormous that the legislature had to close the distilleries for a couple of years at a time to prevent famine resulting from the destruction of so much grain; and hundreds of men walked hundreds of miles to throw themselves at the feet of the king and pray him to instruct the Parliament to crush the traffic or give the people power to do so.

The king urged action, and the Parliament, in 1855, passed a tremendous temperance act giving to the administrative areas throughout the land an almost absolute control over the liquor traffic.

In a single year from the passing of the act (during 1856) the rural districts so voted as to leave only 587 drink-shops in all rural Sweden. Inasmuch as some districts had two or more of these drink-shops, this means roughly that among the nearly 2,400 rural districts about 2,000 had closed every liquor shop. No doubt these 2,000 rural districts then comprised four-fifths of the entire population of the country. Thus the most deeply cursed drink nation in the world no sooner acquired the power to cast off the drink shackles than it freed itself at a stroke, and became one of the most sober nations upon earth. We speak of rural Sweden only; and it may be at once said that rural Sweden has never gone back on its action of the year 1856.

WHEN THE NATION WENT ON STRIKE.

Such was the situation when a matter arose which had no relation to the liquor traffic, but which conduced to a revolution in the status of liquordom. In 1909 the principal employers' association in Sweden, wearied by local strikes, and having accumulated considerable stock to go on with, suddenly declared a lockout of about thirty thousand men, a large number being in and around the capital of Stockholm. The Workingmen's Unions retorted by declaring a national strike, which ultimately brought out 300,000 work people, being about one-tenth of the adult population of the country!

The tramway authorities and the publishing houses had endeavoured to secure themselves by giving a satisfactory wage and binding their employees not to strike, but the national movement swept these employees off their feet, and they broke their contracts and joined the strikers. The result was that at first the paralysis of the printing-presses seemed to freeze the national life and render it inarticulate, while the broad roadways appeared desolate when only casually pocupied by private coaches containing their owners, and grim hearses conveying the dead to the cemetery.

The strike seemed a menace to public order, inasmuch as the strikers included some known anarchists; but the principal leaders urged abstention from violence. The authorities feared that the water supply might be cut off, and the food supply checked. As a precaution against violence to person and property all stores of explosives used for blasting operations, etc., were put under guard; special constables were sworn in, soldiers were stationed at precautionary points, and practically a state of siege was contemplated.

The Federated Temperance bodies felt that the principal danger lay in the open liquor-shops, where non-abstainers daily partook of their modicum of ardent spirits, and our friends memorialised the government to close these houses throughout the strike. The government responded by empowering the local governors to check, or stop, the traffic wherever needful, and almost throughout the country the ordinary drink-shops were shut up, and the restaurants and hotels, etc., were only allowed to sell under limited conditions.

In Stockholm, within a month, the takings for liquor dropped by more than £60,000. What were the results? There was no material public disorder. The men were seen neatly attired, and sober, promenading the streets; fishing from bridges; walking out with their families; and gathering in tens of thousands in the beautiful Deer Park, where lectures on temperance, etc., were delivered by able advocates. Many days passed without a drunken person being seen! The pawnbrokers were sadly disappointed of an expected harvest. Many Police Courts were open without a single case being brought before them, and repeatedly the judges were presented with white gloves in token of this freedom from lawlessness.

In the whole country the total cases brought up before the courts throughout the strike month numbered less than 500, and as Herr Wavrinsky (who has for 20 years been a parliamentary representative for Stockholm) testified in my presence, the whole nation reached a higher standard in moral conduct than ever before!

The strike lasted just one month—from August 4 to September 4. When it was nearing its end, the Good Templar Grand Lodge sent to the King a deputation of members of the Upper and Lower House to urge the continuance of prohibition after the strike. Thousands of workmen at a park demonstration voted for the same. But conservative newspapers and liquor Bolags held that no national mandate existed for undue continuance of prohibition.

More than one hundred of the Swedish newspapers (including two daily newspapers in the capital) are in the hands of temperance men, who refuse all liquor advertisements.

Explaining the Test.—A member of a church in Edinburgh, who was given to the habit of discussing the subject of Sunday's discourse, was asked one Monday morning what topic his minister was on yesterday. "Oh, he was on the parable of the barren fig tree," was the reply. "He wad mak' a grand job o' that!" said the other. "Oh, 'deed no, man," was the answer. "He hackit and hackit awa' at it an' wrocht awir, but he cu'd mak' naething but firewood o't in the end."

DOCTORS ADVISE MEDICATED AIR

to Cure Catarrh, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Throat Troubles, Hoarseness.

For diseases of the lungs, throat and nasal passages mountain air has always been deemed salutary because of its pureness and freedom from disease germs. The air of pine forests, laden with minute particles of volatile germ-destroying principles, has enjoyed an almost unexampled reputation in these diseases also.

A MARVELLOUS DISCOVERY.

After years of exhaustive study a chemist devised a means of supplying right at home a healing balsamic remedy that is even more effective in catarrhal diseases than the air of the pine woods. Of course, this remedy was copyrighted in every civilized country and was at once offered to the public under the name of "Catarrhozone." Its success has been phenomenal.

Just think of it! A healing, soothing substance capable of destroying these noxious organisms which excite and maintain disease. Capable, also of allaying congestion and of stimulating the healing processes of nature, which are combined in that invaluable compound so well and favorably known to the medical world as "Catarrhozone."

CATARRHOZONE CURES.

Catarrhozone is simply the concentrated qualities of the air of pine woods. If you breathe it you will derive more benefit in one hour than you could possibly get from the woods in a year.

This great advantage arises from the fact that, in addition to those healing emanations from pine, other ingredients distilled from the vegetable kingdom are so united as to give results that could not possibly be derived in the simple form in which nature supplies medicated air.

20,000 PHYSICIANS ENDORSE IT.

For all diseases of the nose, ear throat, bronchial tubes and air passages—for catarrh in every form—cure is certain with Catarrhozone, which is not a nostrum, but a high-class scientific treatment. Large size, sufficient for two months' use (guaranteed), price $1.00; smaller size 50c, at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

DOCTORS HAD GIVEN UP ALL HOPE

"Fruit-a-tives" saved my Life

RIVIERE A PIZARE, Q., May 9, 1910.

"I look upon my recovery as nothing short of a miracle. I was for eleven years, constantly suffering from Chronic Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

I was treated by several doctors and they simply did me no good. During the latter part of my illness, I was so thin that I weighed only 90 pounds, and I vomited everything I ate.

The doctors gave me up to die as the stomach trouble produced heart weakness and I was frequently unconscious. I received the Last Rites Of The Church.

At this time, a lady strongly urged me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. When I had taken one box, I was much better and after three boxes, I was practically well again, and had gained 20 pounds. I have taken 13 boxes in all and now weigh 150 pounds and am well."

Madame ARTHUR TOURANGEAU.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of intensified fruit juices and always cures Indigestion.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

HOME CIRCLE

The social neighbour is not always the useful neighbour, yet each in her place has special influences to exert of equally beneficial consequences. The sympathetic neighbour is also a popular one, but she has to exercise continuous tact, lest her soothing influence may occasionally be overdone or utilized at untimely periods. The inquisitive neighbour is always a dread to everybody within the reach of her inquisitive curiosity, as she does not seem to have any intuitive respect for others' feelings as regards their divulgence of personal affairs to an outsider.

* * *

Let home stand before all other things! No matter how high your ambition may transcend its duties, no matter how far your talents or your influence may reach beyond its doors, before everything else build a true home. Then from its walls shall come forth the true woman and the true man, who shall together rule and bless the land. Is this an overwrought picture. We think not. What honour can be greater than to found such a home? What dignity higher than to reign its undisputed mistress? What is the ability to speak from a public platform to large, intelligent audiences, or the wisdom that may command a seat on the judge's bench, compared to that which can insure and preside over a true home, that husband and children "rise and call her blessed?" To be the guiding star, the ruling spirit in such a position is higher honour than to rule an empire.

* * *

"Good morning," with a heartful wish for blessings in the tone of its utterance, cheers the heart of faint and fearful ones, and softens many a hard spot that has place by inheritance or cultivation, in the breasts of humanity. The love-light, that beams from the eye when one is greeted by such words as "Good night" lights many a weary spirit to a chamber of rest and peace and to a land of pleasant dreams.

* * *

Man, like the fire, is apt to torment women by going out at night.

* * *

* * *

Of all places, praise should be most lavishly used in the family circle. How many of us keep all our words of kindness for strangers, for those in whom we have not one spark of vital interest; and to the hearts dependent upon us for sympathy and appreciation, have scarcely one cheery word.

* * *

Make every home where there are boys, cheerful, comfortable and enjoyable. Remember the good example, taught us by the best of books, let us kill the "fatted calf" for the prodigals. Then they will not frequent billiard and drinking saloons, but will love and enjoy the friendship of the fireside.

* * *

If the little child gets a bump or a fall, or a cut or a skinned finger, mother will say: "Come to your mother and let her pet you," and she will kiss the bumped head and wrap up the hurt finger with a few kind words. Then the child knows you love it, and it will love you and always respect you, and when years have passed and gone and they have grown to manhood and womanhood they will look back to their childhood days as the happiest days of their lives.

A word of comfort kindly spoken
Will many a moment cheer;
A word of scorn to a heart that's broken
Will cause grief for many a year.

* * *

We help our children most when we help them to take an honest view of themselves, and this we can never do by flattering their too easily flattered self-conceit.

* * *

The best way to keep the boys at home is to make it an object for them not to go out to seek amusements, for these they will have. Every farm home ought to be made a very heaven on earth to its inmates.

* * *

A cheerful countenance is a duty we owe to our neighbors, and how much more is it necessary in the home! Our friends can get out of our way if we are not good companions, but our family cannot. They are helpless victims, shut up in the same house with us. For the sake of the children, for the sake of the elders, for the sake of all humanity, let us cultivate a pleasant smile, a hearty laugh, and a habit of cheerfulness.

* * *

The woman is the heart of the home. If she is cross, miserable and dispirited, there will be little life and true happiness within. Let her do her part, but let her refuse to labour beyond her strength. A wise, tender mother is of more importance than anything else in the world to young children. Let every mother train herself to a wise neglect of unimportant things that she may be to her own the embodiment of sympathy, hope, gentleness, charity, wisdom and love.

* * *

Let us take time to be pleasant. The small courtesies, which we often omit because they are small, will some day look larger to us than the wealth which we coupt, or the fame for which we struggled.

* * *

Be neighbourly, be obliging, be kind and courteous, and then when sorrow and sickness come you will have sympathy and help.

Ad. Club

Since the announcement was given out yesterday in regard to the meeting of the Peterborough Ad Club, arrangements have been completed to again hold the meeting in Hooper's Palm Parlours. Mr. C. H. Ashley, of the Toronto Saturday Night, who will be present at the principal speaker, will address the gathering, immediately after the dinner, which will commence at 6.15 sharp Tuesday evening next, March 5th.

The capacity of the accommodation is limited to fifty. Tickets will be issued to others as well as to the members, until the limit is reached. Members of the Programme and Entertainment committee of the Club may not find it possible to see all of the interested local business men to provide them with tickets, and they will therefore appreciate the saving it will effect in their time if those wishing to hear Mr. Ashley on Tuesday evening will phone the secretary, Mr. J. McNichol, at 1333. Tickets may also be had by phoning 606.

Mr. Ashley's wide experience in sales work and his present connection as an apostle on real salesmanship, in print, by virtue of the position he holds with the Saturday Night, assures the members of the local Ad Club something of real worth, which will be theirs for the taking next Tuesday evening.

ONLY 13 MARRIAGES.

Satisfactory Statement of Vital Statistics For February.

The vital statistics for February as compared with the same month a year ago show the following figures:

	1911	1912
Deaths	24	20
Births	37	44
Marriages	24	13

The Old Keeper has been performing consistently, but Hymen must be hungering for sacrifice with only 13 marriages this month. The much talked of Roosevelt would, however probably smile appreciatively at the above list.

A Parson's Funeral.—A searcher among old parish records has unearthed the fact that a century ago it cost £30 12s. to bury the parish minister of Balfron, this sum including over £12 for rum, wine and brandy, and 24s. for shortbread. If death was then a luxury almost beyond the reach of the poor, on the other hand, one could be kept alive at a very cheap rate; for the Balfron doctor charged 9d. a visit when he attended a child professionally in Fintry, five miles away. Presumably this was on parochial board work; he would take it out of the well-to-do by charging them a shilling, or perhaps even eighteenpence.

The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet

For Schools, Hotels, Banks and Private Residences

Heretofore it has been impossible to install a Sanitary System of inside closet without water works and sewage, and you will agree with us when we say that the present outdoor system of closets are not only very insanitary, but are at the same time one of the most fruitful sources of both moral and physical ills.

The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet is constructed principally for families and public bodies who live in a district where it is impossible to have waterworks and sewage. It can be placed in any part of a Residence, Store, School, Hotel, Bank, etc.

We have secured the Agency for this valuable Sanitary Closet, and invite investigation of its merits.

TEMPERANCE IN SWEDEN
BY JOSEPH MALINS.

who visited Sweden in 1894 expressly to investigate the Gothenburg System at the instance of the then Home Secretary of the British Parliament, Sir William Harcourt, and was received in private audience by King Oscar II. In 1898 he was summoned by Lord Peel to give evidence on the system to the British Royal Commission on Licensing, then sitting in Queen Victoria's Robing Room at the Parliament House. After the discussion of the Gothenburg System at the Stockholm Congress in 1897, he prepared a written discussion of the system which was pronounced one of the fairest and most judicial that had ever been given to the public.

The first promise of a brighter day was flashed from the United States to Sweden by way of Scotland. In 1851 the Royal Patriotic Society of Sweden wrote to Scotland for the American temperance publications, and in that year the first society was formed in Sweden. Very soon an American temperance champion, in the person of the Rev. Dr. Robert Baird, visited Sweden, and the Swedish king, at his own cost, had Dr. Baird's "American History of Temperance" translated and circulated among the people.

By 1855 the National Parliament decreed the suppression of the system of domestic distillation, and within about a decade the liquor consumption had dropped to 22 litres per head. But its consumption was still so enormous that the legislature had to close the distilleries for a couple of years to give time to prevent famine resulting from the destruction of so much grain; and hundreds of men walked hundreds of miles to throw themselves at the feet of the king and pray him to instruct the Parliament to crush the traffic or give the people power to do so.

The king urged action, and the Parliament, in 1855, passed a tremendous temperance act giving to the administrative areas throughout the land an almost absolute control over the liquor traffic.

In a single year from the passing of the act (during 1856) the rural districts so voted as to leave only 537 drink-shops in all rural Sweden. Inasmuch as some districts had two or more of these drink-shops, this means roughly that among the nearly 2,400 rural districts about 2,000 had closed every liquor shop. No doubt these 2,000 rural districts then comprised four-fifths of the entire population of the country. Thus the most deeply cursed drink nation in the world no sooner acquired the power to cast off the drink shackles than it freed itself at a stroke, and became one of the most sober nations upon earth. We speak of rural Sweden only; and it may be at once said that rural Sweden has never gone back on its action of the year 1856.

WHEN THE NATION WENT ON STRIKE.

Such was the situation when a matter arose which had no relation to the liquor traffic, but which conduced to a revolution in the status of liquordom. In 1909 the principal employers' association in Sweden, wearied by local strikes, and having accumulated considerable stock to go on with, suddenly declared a lockout of about thirty thousand men, a large number being in and around the capital of Stockholm. The Workingmen's Unions retorted by declaring a national strike, which ultimately brought out 300,000 work people, being about one-tenth of the adult population of the country!

The tramway authorities and the publishing houses had endeavoured to secure themselves by giving a satisfactory wage and binding their employees not to strike, but the national movement swept these employees off their feet, and they broke their contracts and joined the strikers. The result was that at first the paralysis of the printing-presses seemed to freeze the national life and render it inarticulate, while the broad roadways appeared desolate when only casually occupied by private coaches containing their owners, and grim hearses conveying the dead to the cemetery.

The strike seemed a menace to public order, inasmuch as the strikers included some known anarchists; but the principal leaders urged abstention from violence. The authorities feared that the water supply might be cut off, and the food supply checked. As a precaution against violence to person and property all stores of explosives used for blasting operations, etc., were put under guard; special constables were sworn in, soldiers were stationed at precautionary points, and practically a state of siege was contemplated.

The Federated Temperance bodies felt that the principal danger lay in the open liquor-shops, where non-abstainers daily partook of their modicum of ardent spirits, and our friends memorialised the government to close these houses throughout the strike. The government responded by empowering the local governors to check, or stop, the traffic wherever needful, and almost throughout the country the ordinary drink-shops were shut up, and the restaurants and hotels, etc., were only allowed to sell under limited conditions.

In Stockholm, within a month, the takings for liquor dropped by more than £60,000. What were the results? There was no material public disorder. The men were seen neatly attired, and sober, promenading the streets; fishing from bridges; walking out with their families; and gathering in tens of thousands in the beautiful Deer Park, where lectures on temperance, etc., were delivered by able advocates. Many days passed without a drunken person being seen! The pawnbrokers were sadly disappointed of an expected harvest. Many Police Courts were open without a single case being brought before them, and repeatedly the judges were presented with white gloves in token of this freedom from lawlessness.

In the whole country the total cases brought up before the courts throughout the strike month numbered less than 500, and as Herr Wavrinsky (who has for 20 years been a parliamentary representative for Stockholm) testified in my presence, the whole nation reached a higher standard in moral conduct than ever before!

The strike lasted just one month—from August 4 to September 4. When it was nearing its end, the Good Templar Grand Lodge sent to the King a deputation of members of the Upper and Lower House to urge the continuance of prohibition after the strike. Thousands of workmen at a park demonstration voted for the same. But conservative newspapers and liquor Bolags held that no national mandate existed for undue continuance of prohibition.

More than one hundred of the Swedish newspapers (including two daily newspapers in the capital) are in the hands of temperance men, who refuse all liquor advertisements.

Explaining the Test.—A member of a church in Edinburgh, who was given to the habit of discussing the subject of Sunday's discourse, was asked one Monday morning what topic his minister was on yesterday. "Oh, he was on the parable of the barren fig tree," was the reply. "He wad mak' a grand job o' that!" said the other. "Oh, 'deed no, man," was the answer. "He hackit and hackit awa' at it an' wrocht mair, but he cu'd mak' naething but firewood o't in the end."

DOCTORS ADVISE MEDICATED AIR

It Cures Catarrh, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Throat Troubles, Hoarseness.

For diseases of the lungs, throat and nasal passages mountain air has always been deemed salutary because of its pureness and freedom from disease germs. The air of pine forests, laden with minute particles of volatile germ-destroying principles, has enjoyed an almost unexampled reputation in these diseases also.

A MARVELLOUS DISCOVERY.

After years of exhaustive study a chemist devised a means of supplying right at home a healing balsamic remedy that is even more effective than the air of the pine woods. Of course, this remedy was copyrighted in every civilized country and was at once offered to the public under the name of "Catarrhozone." Its success has been phenomenal.

Just think of it! A healing, soothing substance capable of destroying these noxious organisms which excite and maintain disease. Capable, also of allaying congestion and of stimulating the healing processes of nature, which are combined in that invaluable compound so well and so favorably known to the medical world as "Catarrhozone."

CATARRHOZONE CURES.

Catarrhozone is simply the concentrated qualities of the air of pine woods. If you breathe it you will derive more benefit in one hour than you could possibly get from the woods in a year.

This great advantage arises from the fact that, in addition to those healing emanations from pine, other ingredients distilled from the vegetable kingdom are so united as to give results that could not possibly be derived in the simple form in which nature supplies medicated air.

30,000 PHYSICIANS ENDORSE IT.

For all diseases of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes and air passages—for catarrh in every form—it is certain with Catarrhozone which is not a nostrum, but a high-class antiseptic treatment. Large size, sufficient for two months' use (guaranteed), price $1.00; smaller size 50c, at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

"Fruit-a-tives" saved my Life

RAYMOND J. PERRAS, Q., May 9, 1910.

"I look upon my recovery as nothing short of a miracle. I was for eleven years, constantly suffering from Chronic Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

I was treated by several doctors and they simply did me no good. During the latter part of my illness, I was so thin that I weighed only 90 pounds, and I vomited everything I ate.

The doctors gave me up to die as the stomach trouble produced heart weakness and I was frequently unconscious. I received the Last Rites Of The Church.

At this time, a lady strongly urged me to try "Fruit-a-tives". When I had taken one box, I was much better and after three boxes, I was practically well again, and had gained 20 pounds. I now weigh 13 lbs. in all and now weigh 150 pounds and am well."

Madame ARTHUR TOURANGEAU.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Get from your Pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

ONLY 13 MARRIAGES.

Satisfactory Statement of Vital Statistics For February.

The vital statistics for February as compared with the same month a year ago show the following figures:

	1911	1912
Deaths	34	20
Births	37	44
Marriages	24	13

The Old Reaper has been performing consistently, but Hymen must be hungering for sacrifice with only 13 marriages this month. The much talked of Roosevelt would, however probably smile appreciatively at the above list.

A Parson's Funeral.—A searcher among old parish records has unearthed the fact that a century ago it cost £20 12s. to bury the parish minister of Balfron, this sum including over £12 for rum, wine and brandy, and 24s. for shortbread. If death was then a luxury almost beyond the reach of the poor, on the other hand, one could be kept alive at a very cheap rate; for the Balfron doctor charged 9d. a visit when he attended a child professionally in Fintry, five miles away. Presumably this was or parochial board work; he would take it out of the well-to-do by charging them a shilling, or perhaps even eighteenpence.

The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet
For Schools, Hotels, Banks and Private Residences

Heretofore it has been impossible to install a Sanitary System of inside closet without water works and sewage, and you will agree with us when we say that the present outdoor system of closets are not only very insanitary, but are at the same time one of the most fruitful sources of both moral and physical ills.

The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet is constructed principally for families and public bodies who live in a district where it is impossible to have waterworks and sewage. It can be placed in any part of a Residence, Store, School, Hotel, Bank, etc.,

We have secured the Agency for this valuable Sanitary Closet, and invite investigation of its merits.

A GREAT CRIME AGAINST HUMANITY

(BY H. L. R. BAKER)

"It is characteristic of the girl of the period," began the mother of two grown-up sons, "to sit up in company and recite the requirements she demands of the suitor who would win her hand. She may herself be a pert young thing, possessed of the most superficial attractions, let alone attainments, but she confidently expects that the best will be only too ready to fall at her feet. She declares that she would never dream of marrying a man with less than such-and-such an income a year—such income, by the way, being more than her father has ever made in his whole hard-working life. And as for her expecting to do any housework, not she! Catch her marrying a brute of a man who would permit his wife to wash dishes like a common servant! As for children, she might graciously favour her liege with one or two, provided there would be always an adequate supply of competent nurses on hand.

"Now, we older women who overhear such statements know that they are not only foolish, but unfair to the true character of the girl who makes them. We know that, although while she is heart whole and fancy free, she enjoys talking loudly and laying down the law concerning the things she will and will not have, once the right man appears upon the scene she will gladly bow her head to the yoke and accept bravely whatever destiny shall mete out to them twain. Even the girl herself has a dim perception that she is talking nonsense and that did only young Lochinvar that moment dawn on her maidenly horizon she would be only too ready to change her tactics. But in the meantime she likes to think she is enhancing her value in the eyes of all masculines within reach, causing them to feel that she is a girl to be striven for.

"As a matter of fact, she wofully fails in her endeavour, for every man, whether he be eligible or ineligible, cherishes deep within his heart a vein of sentiment and the desire to be loved for himself alone. Yet many a nice girl who will sit up and bold forth as if a man's bank account would be the sine qua non in her acceptance of an offer of marriage would be horrified at a man cold-blooded enough to assert that he would not marry a girl who was not a good cook and laundress or who was too sickly to bear children. Yet why should the girl expect to enjoy a monopoly of practicality when considering the matrimonial question?

"Now, the man of to-day has as high standards of living as, if not higher than, has the type of woman whom he would wish to marry. He has no desire to live in cheap quarters, subsist on cheap food and forego all luxuries and amusement, and he perhaps looks forward to the day when he can retire and live on his income. Yet at the outset of his career he is acutely conscious of the struggle before him, and the wife he selects must be a helpmate and not a pampered doll. The girl who airs her views in his hearing may be very attractive and very alluring, but if, as she says, she is unwilling to take any chances on the future, but insists that her husband shall be a finished product, with steam yachts and automobiles, like a modern society novel, then she is not for him and he does not give her the chance to refuse him. He may even grow coldly critical and conclude that she is nothing very wonderful, anyway, and then turn his attentions away from the seemingly unattainable goddess to the quiet little mouse in the corner, who smiles her welcome on all alike, eligible and ineligible, and keeps her own counsel until she sees fit to announce her engagement to perchance the only really desirable man in town.

"My advice to maidens matrimonially inclined would be: Don't shout your prohibitive requirements abroad, with the expectation that a throng of eager suitors will thereby be led to storm the citadel. And the woods are only too full of the type of girl who demands everything, though having nothing to offer but herself, and that self really not very well worth while."—New York Tribune.

TO TRAIN MONKEYS

An attempt is to be made in the United States by French cotton experts to teach monkeys to pick cotton. If the experiment succeeds, a colony of monkeys will be imported and put to work. The idea was suggested by the antics of a pet chimpanzee carried by a farmer's boy into the fields. The little animal, after frisking around for a time and watching the negroes at work, began of its own accord to pick the cotton with almost incredible rapidity. Animal trainers find it very easy to teach monkeys to perform any manual trick or labour. By utilising monkey labour the cost of cotton harvesting would be infinitely less than with human labour.

SOME LINCOLN ANECDOTES

Shortly after he was inaugurated, when office-seekers were besieging him, and important news of the outbreak in the South was coming to him hourly, he said: "I am like a man so busy in letting rooms in one end of the house, that he can not put out the fire that is burning the other end."

To his Cabinet, who asked him whether it would be right to allow the Confederate commissioner, Jacob Thompson, to slip out of the country disguised, Mr. Lincoln replied: "Well, let me tell you a story. There was an Irish soldier here last summer who wanted something to drink stronger than water, and stopped at a drug store where he espied a soda fountain. 'Mr. Doctor,' said he, 'give me, plase, a glass of soda water, and if you can put in a few drops of whisky unbeknown to anyone I'll be obleeged.' Now," continued Mr. Lincoln, "if Jake Thompson is permitted to go through Maine unbeknown to anyone, what's the harm So don't have him arrested."

When a friend brought to his attention the fact that a member of his Cabinet was seeking for the nomination, while Mr. Lincoln was candidate for re-nomination, the President accepted the announcement with the utmost good humour and said: "My brother and I were once plowing corn on a Kentucky farm, I driving the horse and he holding the plow. The horse was lazy, but on one occasion rushed across the field so that I, with my long legs, could hardly keep pace with him. On reaching the end of the furrow I found an enormous 'chin fly' fastened upon him, and knocked him off. My brother asked me what I did that for. I told him I didn't want the old horse bitten in that way. 'Why,' said my brother, 'that's all that made him go.' If Mr. —— has a presidential 'chin fly' biting him, I'm not going to knock him off, if it will only make his department go."

An anecdote showing Lincoln's merciful nature is the one of the sleeping sentinel, William Scott, a Vermont boy, whose life Lincoln saved after he had been condemned to be shot. Lincoln personally saw Scott and talked with him a long time. Scott would not talk to his comrades of the interview afterward until one night, when he had received a letter from home, he finally opened his heart to a friend in this wise: "The President was the kindest man I had ever seen. I was scared at first for I had never before talked with a great man. But Mr. Lincoln was so easy with me, so gentle, that I soon forgot my fright. . . . He stood up and he says to me, 'My boy,' he said, 'you are going to be shot to-morrow. I am going to trust you, and send you back to your regiment. I have come up here from Washington, where I have a great deal to do, and what I want to know is how you are going to pay my bill' There was a big lump in my throat. I could scarcely speak. But I got it crowded down and managed to say 'There is some way to pay you, and I will find it after a little. There is the bounty in the savings bank. I guess we could borrow some money on a mortgage on the farm.' I was sure the boys would help, so I thought we could raise it, if it wasn't more than $500 or $600. 'But it is a great deal more than $500 or $600,' he said. Then I said I didn't see how, but I was sure I would find some way—if I lived. Then Mr. Lincoln put his hands on my shoulders and looked into my face as if he were sorry, and said, 'My boy, my bill is a very large one. Your friend cannot pay it, nor your bounty, nor your farm, nor all your comrades. There is only one man in all the world who can pay it, and his name is William Scott. If from this day William Scott does his duty, so that if I was there when he comes to die he can look me in the face as he does now, and can say: 'I have kept my promise and I have done my duty as a soldier!' then my debt will be paid. Will you make that promise and keep it?' I said I would make the promise and with God's help I would keep it. He went away out of my sight for ever. I know I shall never see him again, but may God forget me if I ever forget his kind words or my promise."

The Winner's Test.—Who are the winners in life? Some of them will be found among those who have won wealth or gained fame, but their winning will not be because they have gained these things. The Greeks had a foot race in which speed and endurance were not the only tests. Each man at the start was given a lighted torch, and the laurel wreath was for the one who came in first with his torch light. As we strive for the victory let us at any cost, keep the fire of honour, truth and kindness alight in our lives.

Marriage is a feast where the grace is sometimes better than the dinner.

Of all the actions of the human life marriage least concerns others than the principals, yet of all the actions of our life it is most meddled with by other people.

First get an absolute control over thyself, and then thou wilt easily govern thy wife.

BOOKS FOR BABIES

A bounty for babies is, the newest variant on the motherhood pension measure so strongly advocated by H. G. Wells, the English novelist and social philosopher. From Mason City, Ia., comes the premium plan for each addition to the family. A member of the New York State Tax Commission has drafted a new income tax measure whereby it is proposed to relieve a father of taxation on $200 for every child he has.

Only men with an income of over $1,000 a year will benefit by the bounty as the new tax will not be levied on incomes below that sum. "It is hoped," declares the Iowa philosopher, "that the man whose earning capacity is duly increasing will be encouraged to rear a family and that the State will be preserved from the perils of race suicide.

"What do you think of the idea?" Mrs. George W. Hodges, president of the New York City Mothers' Club, was asked.

"It's perfectly absurd and ridiculous," exclaimed Mrs. Hodges. "One may be quite certain that the father of such a strange scheme is not himself the father of children.

On Love with Wolf Pelt.

"Suppose, in the first place, we try to look at the matter from his point of view. He is apparently endeavouring to secure larger families by promising parents financial assistance from the State to offset the added expense of a number of children. Suppose we grant—which I don't—that the State has the right to give such aid, and the parent to accept it, how will the measure proposed actually work out? The father is to be relieved from taxation on $200 for each child. At the regular 3 per cent. tax rate he would be in pocket six dollars each year!

"That is a large sum, is it not? How far would it go in helping out the annual expenses necessary for rearing a child? I believe it is the same bonus that is offered in some places for bringing in a wolf pelt. According to this Iowa statesman, giving a child to the State is exactly as valuable a service as killing a wolf."

"Then you think a larger bonus should be given?"

"No, indeed," corrected Mrs. Hodges. "I've just been trying to show the futility of this particular measure from the viewpoint even of the people who think the State should take over the duties and privileges of the individual. For that is exactly what lies at the base of any child compensation or motherhood compensation act, and it's nothing in the world but Socialism.

Paid Socialistic Plan.

"The great trouble with the Socialistic theories concerning family relations is that they are the product of the head and not of the heart.

"They entirely omit to consider the natural human instincts and affections. Their plans work out beautifully on paper; the fatal flaw is that the normal human being will have none of them.

"In the current number of a magazine a writer carries this 'baby bonus' idea a step or two further. He would have the State not merely assist parents to care for their children, but take entire charge of them after the age of six years. He coolly observes that at that tender age the infants will have conceived no strong affection even for their mothers, and can therefore be easily transferred to large schools, where the State can see that they receive the best of care and education.

"Did ever one hear of such perfect nonsense?" broke off Mrs. Hodges. "How many fathers and mothers could be induced to put aside all their natural feelings and resign possession of their babies in earliest childhood? And the father or mother of the best type would be almost as averse to accepting alms from any outside source, including the State.

Spirit of Sacrifice.

"One of the finest and truest human instincts is that which prompts man or woman to work and sacrifice and suffer for children. It is the basis of self-respect; it is the antidote of selfishness.

"It seems to me," Mrs. Hodges continued earnestly, "that insistence to-day should be placed on the acceptance of parental responsibilities and not on their evasion. Only the other day I saw that a well-known public school teacher declared that fathers and mothers were expecting the schools do all he work of training and educating their children, and that a great many boys and girls were receiving little or no 'bringing up' at home.

"If the State wishes to make things easier for parents, and to support larger families, why not direct attention to industrial conditions or the high cost of living? Such economic problems bear very directly on the size of the average family. Why should the State sidestep them and resort to artificial aims-giving of a kind which is a direct menace to the home and all it stands for?

"Often the thing that holds husband and wife together is a common impulse to keep the children from suffering. In a New York slum or on a New England farm one hears the same refrain from a hard-working father. 'I want my boy to have things better than I had.' One of the biggest incentives to achievement and right living would be removed if the State ever should say to the parent, 'Oh, don't bother about working for the children. I'll give you money enough to take care of them.'"

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN

The Nightdress of Fashion.

You read in the papers just now
What fashions are likely to be,
And one is expected to bow
To novelties, that you'll agree
It's trying to bow to somehow,
In fact they are apt to appal,
Yet you're bound to look happy,
though inwardly snappy,
Not liking the prospect at all.

The feet must be full into view
In a way that Chicago won't like;
The shoes must be brilliant of hue,
The clocks on the stockings must strike.
In colours of green, red, or blue,
Which may make a few of us blush.
Still the mode is Parisian, and, being Elysian,
To buy them you'll have to be flush.

Vegetarian hats we're told,
Resembling the gay artichoke,
Will appear in many a mould,
And really it's more than a joke
To look at the shapes manifold,
And not be allowed to deride,
With their crowns of ratine, whate'er
that may mean,
And heaven knows what else beside.

And that's not the worst of it yet,
For photographs even are barred,
The substitute's a silhouette,
Cut out from a little black card,
Which makes you look inky as jet—
For this there's no earthly excuse,
Still, if woman says so, well, let the thing go,
She'll have her own way—what's the use?

LENGTHEN CHILDREN'S SKIRTS

When to Add the Proper Number of Inches to Clothes.

Mothers are often perplexed to know just how long to make their children's and girls' skirts.

For the tot of 1 year the little skirt must be cut to the top of the tiny shoes. Any longer than this would interfere with progress when the little one learns to walk.

At 18 months, when the sturdy tot is running about, let the hem come half way between the shoetops and the knee. When the third milestone has been passed, let the skirt be shortened so as just to show the bend of the knee and keep this length until the little lady is 6 years old.

The average child between the ages of 7 and 12 years should have her dresses cut long enough to cover the knee.

At 13 add an inch or two to the length of the dress, and should she continue to develop, drop the skirt length to a point halfway between the knee and ankle.

As she reaches 15 years let the skirt be about two inches above her shoe tops; at 16 a skirt that comes to the top of the shoe is correct.

When she is 18 she is a young lady, and should be allowed to choose the length skirt she likes best; but if she is a wise girl she will cling to ankle length, or about four inches from the ground. These rules, of course, are subject to modification, according to the development of the girl. Some girls are much larger or smaller than others at a given age and should be dressed in keeping with their size.

Until a girl is past 21 she should not wear long skirts. Even the debutante, out for her second or third season, can wear with propriety a dance frock that escapes the floor by three inches.—Boston Herald.

A Bright Future.—A local preacher, who was in the habit of taking his wife with him to his preaching appointments, said, on arrival at the chapel, "My dear, you go in there, you will be all right. I must go round to the vestry." In the vestibule the wife was met by a kind-hearted steward, who gave her a hearty welcome, a hymn book and conducted her to a comfortable seat. At the close of the service the same kind-hearted steward gave her a hearty shake of the hand, adding how pleased he would be to see her at the services each Sunday. Then whispering, he said, "But, let me tell you, we don't get a duffer like this in the pulpit every Sunday."

A Keiso Story.—A half-crazed character near Keiso was removed, much against his will, to an asylum. Here he was ordered to plant several rows of cabbages, which he did, putting, however, the heads of the plants in the ground with the roots uppermost. The governor, on examining the work, proceeded to give the supposed madman a sound rating, when he said, "I'm daggin'd if I can see what you're blethering' about. If I'm to be shut up in the daftheuse I'm surely expected to act like a daffy. Na, na maister, ye'll no put me in here to set yer cabbages like a wise man."

BEAVER CONSOLIDATED

The new mill of the Beaver Consolidated Co. was officially placed in operation last week, and now that this plant has started on the treatment of ore, the mill will be able to do big work.

The starting of Beaver's mill means a tremendous addition to the earnings of the Company through the treatment of its low grade ore, and it is anticipated by Supt. Moffatt that the returns will show an 85 per cent. recovery.

It is anticipated that operation of this mill will place Beaver among the leaders in the shipping list, and it is also probable, through increased earnings of the company, that something in the way of larger dividend disbursements may be expected in the very near future.

We regard Beaver Consolidated on present conditions as worth not less than $1 a share, and, believing that its increased earnings, as well as its immense demonstrated ore reserves, will shortly warrant its selling at that figure, we strongly advise its purchase at prevailing low levels.

Truth About Labby

Candid Reminiscences in the Paper Which He Founded.

The adage that no man is a hero to his valet was never better exemplified than in the extraordinary reminiscences published in Truth of Mr. Labouchere, who founded and controlled it. Truth dwells on his un-Englishness, his hatred of sport, his abstemiousness and his shabbiness. It declares that he had little or no connection with Truth beyond drawing the profits and reaping the praise of work done by other men.

The writer remarks that many of the Labouchere anecdotes might be traced to the hero of them, and they "have probably lost nothing in the telling." He adds that the better you knew Mr. Labouchere "the more he astonished you, until you got to the point where your capacity for astonishment was exhausted. . . . Is not 'freak' really the right word for him?"

He was most unlike the average Englishman, "and constitutionally disdainful of all things that Englishmen prize most highly and hold most sacred." He detested all sport, and "never could understand how anyone could take an interest in such a stupid beast as a horse. . . . He had no sympathy with the British man on any subject.

"But with a cynic's tongue and brain Labouchere combined a genuine kindliness of disposition. This odd combination helped to make him the strange character he was and to give him the unique position he occupied for so long.

"It can hardly be asserted with truth that the real Labouchere was a generous man in the ordinary sense of the term. The habit of giving away money, which is what I suppose is meant by calling a man generous, was quite at variance with his general scheme of existence. And one cannot forget that what he gave away he gave away out of a huge superabundance. Probably he never spent half his income. For many years what he drew from Truth alone would have well covered all his expenses, and he was a rich man independently of Truth.

"The only two men against whom I ever knew him display strong animosity were Joseph Chamberlain and Lord Rosebery. What they ever did to incur his hostility beyond all living politicians I have not the slightest idea.

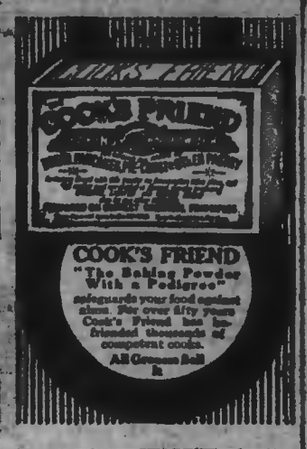
"When Labouchere came back from Florence (all alone) to attend his last two Parliamentary sessions, he took a modest couple of rooms in Queen Anne's Mansions. He related to us with great pride and satisfaction how cheaply he was doing it. The mansions gave him a cup of coffee and a slice of toast in the morning for sixpence. He had found a delightful place for lunch—the Aerated Bread shop at the corner of Parliament St. Here a particularly choice delicacy could be obtained for which he had taken a great liking—two cold sausages, price 4d. 'So, you see,' he said triumphantly, 'as I don't often take any dinner, I generally get through the day for tenpence.'

"He came in one morning and complained of feeling a little out of sorts. 'I think I must have had something for dinner that disagreed with me,' he said. 'What did you have?' asked Voules. 'Well, I went over to the Reform Club about nine o'clock and feeling rather hungry I thought I'd have some dinner. I couldn't see anything that I fancied except Christmas pudding. It was rather good, so I had a second help.' 'I don't wonder you are a bit off colour,' said Voules. 'I am not sure that it was the pudding,' continued Labby. 'The fact is that just as I was finishing, some man I know in the house came to my table and ordered some oysters. They looked very good, so I told the waiter to bring me some. I don't know how many he brought, but we got talking and I finished the lot. He was then seventy-three.

"For many years it was his habit to drop in at Truth office on a Monday or Tuesday morning and order lunch. The meal usually consisted of a chop just warmed through. He ate it without bread, salt, pepper, or drink of any kind, and smoking a cigarette all the time. I have seen him with the chop in one hand and the cigarette in the other, pausing to crack some joke. Voules, who had to sit on the other side of the table while he was refreshing himself, used to be horribly upset by the performance.

"But the climax was reached when Labby, at the conclusion of the repast, took out his teeth and laid them beside him on the table while he corrected his proofs. Voules came into my room one day after this had happened, on the pretence of business. 'I can't sit there any longer,' he said, 'with those confounded teeth grinning at me. They get on my nerves.'

"As soon as he felt the slightest inconvenience from his teeth he had them out and set to work on them with the first implement that came to hand. I have seen him prodding them about with the office scissors or battering them with a ruler. 'Have you got a hammer in the office, Voules,' he inquired one day, and, the caretaker having produced one, he destroyed about fifty pounds' worth of dentist work in a few minutes. People tell you that some of Dickens' characters are overdrawn and impossible. There is no character in all Dickens' collection so full of apparently impossible comic extravagance as was Henry Labouchere in real life."



SOOTHING MIXTURES DANGEROUS TO CHILDREN

Mixtures sold under the name "soothing" are usually dangerous to the life of the little ones whom they are supposed to help. They contain opiates and narcotics and any sleep promoted through their use is false sleep—to be plainer the little one is drugged into insensibility. The only absolutely guaranteed remedy for little ones—the only remedy backed by the guarantee of a government analyst to contain no opiates, narcotics, or other harmful drugs is Baby's Own Tablets. They cannot possibly do harm—they always do good. Thousands of mothers have learned their value. They help not only the newborn babe but also the growing child Stomach and bowel troubles; worms, colds, simple fevers are all banished by them and they promote that refreshing sleep so helpful to little ones. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EAVESDROPPERS

BY SUSANNE GLENN.
(Short Story.)

Mabel Pierce settled herself comfortably in the hammock back of the arbour. She had many pleasant things to think about in case she cared to stay awake. But the breathing of summer winds in the maple boughs and the sing-song of bees among the flowers soon soothed her to unconsciousness. She awoke with a start to hear voices in the summerhouse.

"Will you be seated here for a few minutes, Miss Tracey?" Alan Little's unmistakable voice was saying, "I have something very special to say to you."

"To me, Mr. Little?"

"Do not think me too abrupt, dear Miss Florence, if I beg you to become my wife," he continued, without further preamble. "Every young man should marry when he can maintain a home. And I have long felt the stirrings of love—Florence!" He paused eloquently. "Will you?"

"Oh, Mr. Little, you can have no idea how surprised I am. I never had such a thought. I esteem you very highly and appreciate the honour you confer, but—truly, this is impossible." Mabel crouched among the cushions, too stunned to think of stirring.

"You have dealt most kindly with my presumption," said Little gently. "Will this make any difference with our friendship, Miss Florence?"

"I trust we may always be friends," said the girl. Mabel heard them walk away, as if in a dream. "How could he do it? How could he do it?" she thought over and over. "I can never believe a man again." Through her stunned mind passed a remembrance of the hours spent with him, of his devotion to her, of his fine strong face that she had learned to trust, of the strange happiness his presence brought her. She pressed her fingers over her dry eyes to shut out the mocking beauty of the afternoon. Presently she heard someone again approaching the summerhouse. Mabel crouched miserably in the hammock, too shattered to attempt flight or to chance encountering anyone.

"Will you be seated her for a few minutes, Miss MacWayne? I have something very special to say to you."

Mabel sat up suddenly, rigidly at the sound. Alan and Mary MacWayne!

"To me—Alan?" faltered the astonished young lady.

"To you, my dear Mary. Do not think me too abrupt if I beg you to become my wife. Every young man should marry when he can afford to maintain a home, and I have long felt the stirrings of love." He paused.

"Will you," he finished, impressively, "be my wife?"

"Oh, Alan," wailed poor Mary, "are you crazy? I never dreamed of such a thing. I thought you cared for——"

"Then you refuse me?" he interrupted, gearly, but firmly.

"Oh, yes, yes," she said, "and I'm so sorry Alan, if you are really sincere."

"You have dealt most kindly with my presumption, Mary," he said, quietly. "Will this make any difference in our friendship?"

"I shall always want you for a friend," answered the girl.

"Then we will forget all about it, dear girl," he concluded, with unmistakable relief in his voice.

Mabel sat motionless long after they had left the summerhouse. "Can he possibly have gone crazy?" she thought.

When Mabel encountered Alan on the hotel verandah after dinner that evening she studied him critically. His smooth, tanned face looked serene and healthy. His steady, sane eyes looked into hers with a tenderness that made her dizzy in spite of her overpowering fear and indignation. "Mabel," he said in his brief, compelling way, "come with me for a walk." The girl rose reluctantly.

"Not far," she stipulated.

"Only to the arbour," he said. A sudden daring entered her heart: Would he ask her, too? It is rather an unusual experience to be proposed to in words as familiar as those in which this proposal would undoubtedly be versed. "I may as well see it through," she thought, bitterly. In the fragrant twilight of the arbour he made her comfortable in silence.

"There is to be a little variety this time," she thought with strange humour.

"Mabel," he said huskily, taking her cold little hands in his big comfortable ones. "I love you—I love you so, because I have loved you so long, and it seems as if you must have known it. I could not ask you to marry me before, dear, when I had nothing to offer you. I have just got the new position that I've been working for—I've only been reasonably sure of it for two hours, and now I can take care of you, Mabel, as I would wish. Will you marry me, darling? I offer you a clean record and as great a love as a man can give a woman."

"A clean record," cried Mabel. "Alan Little, I was in the hammock back of the arbour this afternoon; I heard every word. How can you come to me this evening with a tale of love? Do you suppose I would marry——"

"Wait!" commanded the young man sharply "Do not say another word, I beg. You in the hammock, Mabel? Oh, good heavens!" He dropped her hands. "Only trust me a few minutes longer, Mabel," he pleaded at last. "I can explain the whole accursed thing, black as it looks against me. Do not say another word. Come!" She followed him silently.

'Stay here," he whispered, seating her beside a window on an upper verandah. Then he tapped lightly on the winodw and stepped inside. "MacGregor," he said to the man seated at the table, "you offered me that position on a peculiar condition. You wanted a married man?"

"I do, Alan."

"And since I am neither married nor engaged, you stipulate that I am to propose to three eligible young ladies, the first two of whom are to reject me and the third accept—that this is to be done without any explanation of any sort to the young ladies. Those are the conditions?"

"You are right, my boy. Any young fellow who has the nerve to pull off a stunt of that sort is just the fellow I want."

"Very well, sir. At 4 o'clock this afternoon I proposed to Florence Tracey. She refused me. At 4.30 I proposed to Mary MacWayne, with similar results. Half an hour ago," his voice grew suddenly tender, "I asked the dearest girl in the world to marry me."

"And she accepted you?"

"She is going to," he answered.

"I only wish," said MacGregor admiringly, "that she knew the sort of fellow she is getting. Come up in the morning and we'll fix up the papers." MacGregor's usually gruff voice was very cordial.

Alan Little, stumbling through the window, held out his hands entreatingly to the girl. She slipped her own into them happily.

"Sweetheart, forgive me for saying you were going to accept me," he begged humbly. "I had to say that or lose you—and I cannot lose you, Mabel!"

WAS TROUBLED WITH
Headache AND Constipation.

After Suffering For Two Years Was Cured By
BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Headache of whatever nature is nearly always symptomatic of other diseased conditions, rather than a disease itself, but in most cases a disordered stomach, constipation, or bad circulation is the chief source of the difficulty. Burdock Blood Bitters removes the cause of the trouble through its cleansing, strengthening and tonic action on the stomach, liver, bowels and blood. Mr. Wm. Redmond, Cardigan Bridge, P. E. I., writes:—"I have been troubled with headache and constipation for about two years. After trying every doctor I knew, a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I found myself, after using one bottle, getting much better, and after using three bottles I was completely cured.

"After then I was on a visit, and found my cousin very sick, and the doctor told her there was something wrong with her head. I told her to use Burdock Blood Bitters and she was cured in a short time. I can safely recommend it to all."

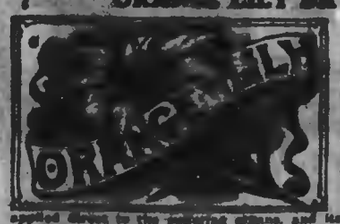
"ORANGE LILY SAVED MY LIFE"



These words or expressions having the same meaning are contained in hundreds of the letters I have received during the past years. Many were from women who had suffered agonies from falling of womb; others from women who had escaped dangerous surgical operations, as the knife and chisel had been forestalled by the action of Orange Lily; and others who had suffered from suppressed menstruation, leucorrhea, painful periods, etc. For all these and the other troubles known to women as Woman's Disorders, Orange Lily furnishes a positive scientific, never-failing cure. It is applied direct to the suffering organs, and its operation is certain and beneficial. As a trial completely proves its merit, I hereby offer to send absolutely free, a box (enough for ten days' treatment), to every suffering woman who will write for it. Enclose 2 stamps. MRS. ABOUT TRADE

"New lamps for old" was the irresistible slogan with which the wily old magician of the Arabian Nights Age enticed woman to trade with him. Department stores of to-day have carried the cry even further, and, taking their cue from the learned trader, offer "something for nothing." And, according to the advertising managers, it has the same old potency as in bygone days.

Yet there are some women who take such acute advantage of the "something for nothing" scheme that they can shop a whole day on an expenditure of seventeen cents and quit at night richer themselves at the expense of the department stores.

Mrs. Jones leaves the house with several small parcels and a grim smile which portends evil for the department store. A woman goes shopping as a serious-minded man goes to war—with a full sense of duty to be discharged and an utter abandon of consequences.

On the trolley car Mrs. Jones asks for a transfer which she does not use, but carefully folds and places in a small pocket in a handbag.

The streets are muddy, and in walking to the trolley car Mrs. Jones's shoes lost their lustre. On the second floor in a corner of the ladies' corridor is an electrical shoe shining machine which is used to advertise a certain brand of polish.

Mrs. Jones then goes to the pattern department, but does not buy any. She has a hat at home which is alltrimmed with the exception of a couple of bows. After picking out the style of bow which tickles her fancy she goes to the millinery department.

"What can I show you, madam" asks one of the saleswomen.

"Oh, nothing," says Mrs. Jones, "I merely stopped to have some ribbons which I bought here yesterday made up into bows."

"Certainly, madam," says the saleswoman, and examines the contents of one of the parcels which Mrs. Jones took from home.

"In my hurry," explains the shopper, "I could not find the paper in which the ribbons were wrapped, but I am sure you will not mind. You must recognize your own goods."

The saleswoman is quite certain that the ribbon was not purchased in the store. Mrs. Jones is certain of the fact that she bought the ribbon in this store.

She then proceeds to the shoe department. Her shoes were bought in this store, and as one or two buttons have come off one of her shoes, she is told she may have new buttons sewed on without charge. There are two on the other shoe which are all but ready to come off, so Mrs. Jones leans over, gives them a yank, and deftly slips them into her handbag.

In the shoe department she meets Mrs. Brown.

"I am giving a little luncheon day after to-morrow," says her friend. "It is in honour of my sister, and I have just arranged it on a moment's notice. I tried to telephone you this morning, but you were out."

"I'd be delighted," says Mrs. Jones, "but I hope it isn't too terribly fashionable. I shall have to wear a very simple hat, I am afraid. I haven't purchased all my winter millinery yet."

Mrs. Brown assures her that a simple hat will be all that is necessary, and will doubtless become her charmingly. As soon as they have parted, Mrs. Jones returns to the millinery department and selects the most elaborate and elegant hat she can find.

"I would like this sent to my home," she says, "and charged. I am not sure whether it satisfies me, but if not I will return it."

"I guess that will turn Mrs. Brown green with envy," she adds to herself as she leaves the department. "And I can send it back the day after the luncheon."

She boards a cross-town car and gazes nonchalantly at an advertisement on the opposite side of the car as she hands her long since expired transfer to the conductor.

WAS TROUBLED WITH Weakness and Palpitation OF THE HEART.

Through one cause or another a large majority of people are troubled, more or less, with some form of heart trouble.

Little attention is paid to the slight weakness of the heart, but when it starts to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beats fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, then it causes great anxiety and alarm.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can and will give prompt and permanent relief.

They do this by their restorative influence on every organ and tissue of the body.

Mrs. John J. Downey, New Glasgow, N.S., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I was troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart, would have severe choking spells, and could scarcely lie down at all. I tried many remedies, but got none to answer my case like your Pills. I can recommend them highly to all having heart or nerve troubles."

THE WEARY SMILE THAT COVERS PAIN

Women Are Themselves to Blame For Much of Their Suffering

Women are weak, yet under a smile they will try to hide pain and suffering that any man could not bear patiently. If women would only remember that their frequent failures of health arise from feeble or impure blood their lives would be smoother and they would longer retain their natural charm.

When the blood fails then begin those dragging backaches and headaches; unrefreshing sleep that causes dark lines under the eyes; dizziness; fits of depression; palpitation or rapid fluttering of the heart; hot flashes and indigestion. Then the cheeks grow pale, the eyes dull and the complexion blemished.

Women should know that much of this suffering is needless and can be promptly remedied. Purify and enrich the blood through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and your suffering will vanish. Thousands of women know that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have brightened their lives by making the new, good blood of health, and so toning up all the vital organs into healthy, vigorous action. Here is an instance from among many. Miss Cora A. Cornell, St. Catharines, Ont., says: "Ever since the age of fourteen I have suffered terribly with pains in my back, and severe headaches. I was also much troubled with indigestion and had to be extremely careful as to my diet, and sometimes did not feel like eating at all. Some two years ago the headaches became so bad that I had to give up my position, which was clerking in a store, where, of course, I was constantly on my feet. I took a position in an office, where I could be seated most of the time, but even then I suffered terribly most of the time. As the medicine I had been taking did not help me I finally decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got a supply, and soon felt they were helping me and I continued taking the pills for several months until I felt perfectly well. Although my doctor advised me not to go back to my old position, I decided to do so, and have not felt any ill effect. I never have backache now, seldom a headache, and all traces of the indigestion have disappeared. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I hope this letter will help someone who suffers as I used to."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ABOUT THE KRUPPS

Of a recent visit of Herr and Frau Krupp von Bohlen and Halbach to that city, the London Standard says:

Frau Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach is the eldest daughter and was the heiress of the late Herr Krupp, the head of the famous Essen firm. She married Herr von Bohlen, who by the Kaiser's consent, adopted the name of Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, and, after his marriage, became managing director of the firm. The presence of these visitors, who are understood to be here only for private purposes, is an event of considerable general interest. The Krupp heads control what is certainly the world's largest, and probably the most efficient, organisation for the manufacture of armaments and munitions of war.

When in October, 1906, Fraulein Bertha Krupp became Frau Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, she was said to be the richest heiress in the world. Her annual income exceeds $5,000,000. She owns Essen and its 125,000 inhabitants. Her direct employees there number 40,000, and in the works there are 3,500 steam engines, 1,500 furnaces, 500 steam cranes, 200 steam hammers, and dozens of Bessemer converters. Frau Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach owns also some hundreds of iron mines, coal fields in Westphalia, many quarries, and a fleet of steamers which bring her iron ore from Spain. There are 50 miles of railway inside the Essen works, 100 miles of telegraph and 90 miles of telephone wires.

Jules Verne's Novel to Life.

The figures which have been given as to the number of engines, cranes, and furnaces in the Krupp works at Essen are sufficiently astonishing. But in reality Krupp's is not a congerie of machines. It is one vast machine—a Jules Verne novel come to life. Arsenal, Government institution, private business concern, industrial corporation, iron works, shipbuilding yard, ordnance factory—it is all these things, and at the same time it manages to retain a great and grim unity. Its tentacles stretch across half Germany, down into Spain, and, in a less direct manner, right around the world. Krupp has its eye on everything everywhere that can remotely or immediately affect any of its multiple businesses, and so efficient is its intelligence service, that the German War Office and Navy both rely largely upon it.

This intelligence department is exactly characteristic of Krupp's. It has a large building to itself, and is controlled by a manager and ten assistant managers, each of whom has his own specialised department of engineering to watch. There the newspapers of the world are read, compared, sifted, and commented upon, and every month the department issues a little newspaper of its own, "for private circulation," indicating all the new ideas suggestions, and inventions in engineering, chemistry, physics and the allied sciences. Also to that building comes much knowledge of the hidden current of the world's affairs, for an organisation in which the Kaiser is a large stockholder, and which is so intimately involved with the higher politics of its country that the German Ambassadors everywhere are expected to keep a particularly keen eye on its interests, can manage to get most things it may happen to want—and it always wants information. This it obtains by every conceivable means.

Employees Well Looked After.

An extraordinarily keen supervision is maintained upon all employees. They work, as it were, in water-tight compartments, and not one of them knows any more than he absolutely must know about the works. In the drawing office every scrap of paper is locked up every night in unbreakable safes and no workman can leave without a special card of permission; and even so his times of departure and return are noted by watchmen. The responsible officials who must know secrets are paid wages which raise them above bribes. The wage of the average workman is low, but as against that there is an elaborate organization of his well-being. He rents a model cottage from the firm, or is lent the money to build one. The firm banks his savings up to $2,500, and pays him five per cent. The firm runs a co-operative store, which supplies him with food and goods at very cheap rates, and pays him an annual dividend. The firm provides him with doctor, hospital, medicine, a club, a fencing master, a library, concerts, schools, rowing facilities, and cycle track; the firm in fact, orders his entire existence. He has all the moderate comforts and conveniences of life, but none of its liberties. One might as well be in a barrack yard as in Krupp's. Even the number of glasses of beer a man drinks is reported upon, the inference for undue lavishness being that he is obtaining money from some suspicious source.

Village Blacksmith Started.

This is the organization that began a hundred years ago with the village blacksmith, who was Frau Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach's great-grandfather; its latest achievement is said to be the production of a 15-inch gun.

Herr and Frau Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach are benevolent, kindly, keenly interested in the wellbeing of their workmen. It was said at the beginning of this article that they control Krupp's. But one doubts whether any human being does or can control it; it is a vast machine that has taken control of itself; it has a ruthless life of its own.

THE EFFECT OF SPRING.

Does More Than All Else to Make Hens Lay.

The abuse that has been heaped on the hens because of their persistence in refraining from supplying fresh eggs to the tables of city people was diminished to a considerable extent this morning. The price of a dozen eggs fell from forty cents to thirty-five cents. The reason is that some, although not all, of the hens in the country have started their merry lay. For three months past the farmers have been applying an agricultural third-degree to the hens to get them to go back to work. They have read yards of literature supplied by the departments of agriculture; they have studied hen nature, and applied the latest methods of egg-coaxing as expounded by poultry experts throughout the country; but their most strenuous efforts have been in vain. The hens have absolutely refused to respond. It required something that sounded like spring to get the hens to start the egg mill; but now the conspiracy by all the hens in the country to stop laying eggs shows some sign of tottering.

"It takes nature to fix up the hens," said a produce man this morning. "Old Sol and the approach of spring create an ambition within the breasts of the hens, and consequently they start work, which has the result of making eggs cheaper." The elements have apparently started work, for eggs are more plentiful.

Produce men think that from now on there will be a succession of reductions in the price. To-day started it.

BRAISHFIELD'S PHOTOGRAPH

BY MARJORY ROYCE.
(Short Story.)

"Good-bye!" Braishfield watched her get into the car that took her to the adjacent suburb where she lived, and then he shouldered his tennis racket and walked home feeling so miserable that he could scarcely see or think. He was a tall youth, with a long, thin, thoughtful face; he was 26, and in love, and it was absolutely hopeless. His father was dead, and he supported his mother and crippled sister. The $1,000 a year he got from the motor works was all they had between them. He was serious by nature, and had often looked ahead and perceived that he could never afford to marry. He had not minded then. But an accidental visit to a tennis club in quite an unromantic neighbourhood, and the sight of a girl with a wonderful smile and deep, sweet eyes had changed it all.

The "Good-bye" on Saturday afternoon no doubt seemed quite ordinary to the dull people who sat in that car going from one place to another. It means simply everything to them. He had told her about the situation, and she had understood perfectly, as he expected. They were meant for each other from the first, and they knew it, but—there was no hope at all. Edith Fisher was poor. Her father, a stockbroker, had speculated badly. They lived just half an hour's walk from the Braishfields, in even a meaner street.

Edith had said many wise things on that very last afternoon, as they walked from the tennis club to the car. "I'm going away, Hugh," she told him. "I must earn my own living. I don't quite know what I shall do, but I shall find something. And you mustn't write to me."

"I couldn't write to you and not see you," he answered. "It's no use, Edith. We mustn't look forward. I can't hope to have my salary raised more than $50 at the very most, and that won't come for years. And it wouldn't be right, with mother and Annie."

"No, darling, of course not. You must do your duty," she answered, as they walked down the street for the last time together. "We shall neither of us be good for anything if we keep moaning and moping about it. We won't forget, Hugh, and, oh, there's nothing more to say, my dearest—put me into the car and let it be good-bye."

It had actually happened. It seemed inconceivable that such a cruel thing should come to pass. He did not realize that they really had parted till the hideous car bore her, smiling bravely away from him. It was quite a commonplace situation—no money, and a love affair—but it differed in two ways from the ordinary case. Hugh and Edith, though they did not know it, were both exceptionally clever, and, also, their love was true.

Two years passed, and Hugh, whose will was unusually strong, kept to the path of duty. He left off going to the tennis club, and set foot no more in the suburb where Edith lived. He was very kind to mother and sister, who had never understood him, and had never heard of the girl with the wonderful smile. In the evenings he thought out one or two little improvements for motors that he vaguely thought might come to something. The less said about the hours when he missed her, the better.

He patented one of the ideas after yet another two years. (This made four years since the good-bye to the girl in the car.) It was taken up by many firms with enthusiasm. He told his mother and sister nothing till success was assured, and the money came pouring in. What a day it was when he was certain at last that he was to be comparatively a rich man. He came bursting into the bare little dining-room where his mother sat, and told her the news. Scarcely waiting for her astonished, faltering words of delight, he rushed from the house to the cars, and went off to the house of the girl.

He arrived at the end of the road, strode joyfully up to the house. "Miss Fisher, sir?" said the maid who opened the door to him, in response to his eager question. "Why, the Fishers left her—it must be three and a half years ago. Their address? I couldn't tell you, I'm afraid. I'll ask the mistress-" It was too late. Edith had gone, and there was no trace of her. "But I shall find you, my darling," he said to himself, confidently, as he turned away. He had no real fear about that.

Four more years passed, and he actually had not found her. He did everything he could think of, but with no success. He inquired, advertised, consulted detectives, did the wildest things with the wildest hopes—all in vain.

Meanwhile, on the strength of his patent he went as director to an important new firm of motor makers, and his salary was now so large that he moved his mother and sister right away to the country. He was still perfectly dutiful and kind to them; he still played hymn tunes to his sister on Sunday evenings because she liked it. And deep down in his heart there was the firm faith that some day because God was good, he would meet the only person he had ever cared for once more.

All this time things had been happening to the girl with the smile. After she said good-bye to Braishfield she looked for employment, and got a post in a photographer's store. She was very clever, and liked the work. Then her father, who had lost so much money in speculation, saved up a little and speculated again, this time very successfully. He determined to go abroad with his wife. He gave Edith enough money to start herself in a business of her own in New York, and departed.

Edith was resourceful, daring, and capable. She called herself "Adrienne," took a modest studio, and slowly made a name by taking artistic and charming photographs. It was wonderful how she grasped the best point in her sitter's face, and her instinct for line was unerring.

Time passed, and she worked steadily. She made a great name for herself. Everybody knew of the great "Adrienne." "It's a pity you don't know," the girl thought many and many a time, as she arranged the fascinating new house she had taken for herself, for her sister, who was her secretary, and for the twenty girl workers, who printed and developed and toned the photographs. Edith had not forgotten her lover. But she still thought of Hugh toiling drearily in the distant suburb. The less said about the hours when she missed him, the better. Her sister, the secretary, arranged all the appointments, and it was she who received a note about Christmas time, just eight years and a half after the parting in the car, from Mrs. Braishfield, making an appointment for her son. Hugh had agreed to be photographed at last, just to please his people; and his mother, having heard much of "Adrienne" from her new friends, selected her as the best photographer. Little did Braishfield think as he tasied along in the one-half hour he had to spare between lunch with a director and a board meeting that he was to see the girl with the smile again that wintry day. He looked older, more worn than at the last meeting. An expression of boredom came over his features when he realized that the cab had stopped, and the annoying ordeal was upon him. He entered the house, and was shown up a charmingly artistic staircase to a white and blue sitting-room, where a bright fire was burning.

A girl in a pinky dress, wearing long earrings, rose to greet him. This was Edith's sister. "Adrienne is ready for you," she said to him, after he had given his name and glanced irritably round the room. "Will you go upstairs?"

He followed a maid up two more flights of stairs, passing an elegant woman in a black velvet gown clasping a pug dog. They had evidently just been taken together. The studio caught all the light of the December afternoon. It was attractively furnished. Edith Fisher had her back to him; she was looking over some photographs. She had changed also. She was calm, sensible, able. Her assistant, a girl with short hair and a silver girdle, bade him be seated, and arranged the camera. Another girl appeared at the head of the staircase, bringing a case enclosing plates. So they were not alone when at last Edith turned, and their faithful eyes met once more. Her heart almost stopped beating.

"Edith!" he said. There was a moment's utter confusion. The assistants looked on curiously. Adrienne recovered herself first. "How nice to see you again," she said, forcing herself to speak. "We must talk afterwards. Let us get business done first. Miss Smith, is everything ready?" She took one photograph, anyhow, taking off the cap with a hand that trembled violently. Then he rose, and they went downstairs to a vacant sitting-room.

"Wonder if he is coming back to be taken again?" said Miss Smith to the other girl in the studio. "She only took one, and I'm sure he moved. A funny affair, isn't it? Now, what I think is this——" But he did not come back. They were married within the week, and everything was perfect. The sun shone on a snow-clad world. The crippled sister was able to go to the church in a motor; there were three pews reserved for the girls of the studio.

ENCOURAGING ORIGINALITY.

There is one rule which may not be safely broken in the establishment presided over by the most renowned city editor in town. That relates to reporters getting on their jobs promptly. If they are due in the office at 8 o'clock in the morning and try to slip through at one minute past 8 they are in for a scolding. Rudyard Kipling himself couldn't hold a job in that office unless he were little Johnny Brightface when the clock strikes.

"I'd pulled all the stock excuses on the old man," said Ewan Justice, who is now the publicity end of the Hamburg-American sketch, "and I had been just barely getting away with him. His eyes began to wear a steely glitter when I landed thirty seconds late.

"'It's a mighty funny thing,' he said to me at last, 'that you fellows can't ride on a surface car or the L or the subway without getting into a block.' And I've been riding on them all my life, and I never have been blocked.'

"So, when I overslept myself one morning, and got to the office an hour behind the clock, I knew that I'd have to pull something good. So I limped when I went in, and wore a look of anguish. I beat the old man to it.

"'It wasn't my fault this time,' said I. 'I know how you feel about your men getting in late, and I hurried this morning. But just before I stepped into my bath someone upstairs turned off the cold water, so that nothing but hot water ran in my tub. And I scalded my feet.'

"'Hum,' said the old man. 'Ha. Well, Ewan, I'll see you later about that.'

"For two weeks he watched me, and during all the time I had to limp hard whenever I was in the office. I knew that if I ever forgot my limp the next card dealt out of the box would be mine. Months after I left the office the old man met me on the street one day. 'Ewan,' said he, 'I want to ask you a question. Did you scald your feet that time—or didn't you?' I told him the truth. I just had to hold that job, I said, and I scalded my feet only constructively.

"'That's what I thought,' he said with a grin, 'but I let you get away with it because I had never heard that yarn before. I like to encourage originality in my young men.'"

Cheese and Haddock Savoury.

Prepare bread cases as described above, only making them about one and one-half inches in height. Make sauce with one ounce of flour, one-half ounce of butter, and about a gill of milk, add three-quarter ounces of grated cheese, and the yolk of an egg. Put a spoonful of this sauce at the bottom of each case, and then a spoonful of dried, cooked haddock prepared as below, cover with more of the sauce, then pile some stiffly whipped white of an egg on each, dust with grated cheese and red pepper, and place in the oven till the egg is set slightly covered, and pass a red-hot salamander over the top. For the haddock flake up one ounce of cold cooked haddock, free from skin and bone, put it in a pan with one and one-half ounces of butter and a little pepper and salt. Let it get thoroughly hot over the fire, and use. If preferred, cream may be substituted for the sauce in the above.

MODERN LIFE NEEDS INFLUENCE OF UNIVERSITY, REV. DR. GORDON'S WORDS TO QUEEN'S ALUMNI

Mr. J. F. Harvey Elected President of the Central Ontario Association of Graduates of Queen's—Dr. Gordon's Address An Inspiration

AIMS OF EDUCATION

The annual meeting of the Queen's Alumni Association of Central Ontario was held last night in Coleman's parlours and was graced by the presence of Rev. D. M. Gordon, M.A., D.D., Principal of Queen's University. The attendance of graduates and friends of the University was regarded as most encouraging, and was in itself an indication of that spirit of fraternity which is the proud boast of Queen's.

At the conclusion of the banquet the business of the meeting was disposed of and the chairman, Mr. Richard Lees, called upon Dr. Gordon to address his former students. While he spoke chiefly upon the aims of the University and its influence upon present day life through the medium of its graduates, especially interesting were Dr. Gordon's recollections of the hopes and ideals of college days. Had the visions of the future seen within the college walls become realities? And were the ideals formed in those days still kept fresh and pure? These were questions Dr. Gordon indirectly asked, and the manner in which they were presented must have been an inspiration, if such were necessary.

One great aim of the University, Dr. Gordon said, was to introduce the students to the enjoyment of those possessions they shared in common. Those who have known Queen's from within her walls, who regard her as their Alma Mater, feel that the spirit of Queen's has been a help to them in their life afterwards. There ought to be a certain type characterizing the university man, and for that matter, the university women, because the University is open to each sex, ad both are availing themselves of its advantages.

There is a broad similarity among the University students, characterized by various features.

Not the Material.

"During University days we are delivered from a good deal of the worldly and commercial spirit. We are led to look upon learning for its own sake, and not for the money it may bring. When the student dreams his dreams he is not thinking of earning money. He is thinking of the joy of getting at the heart of any subject of enquiry and research and by reason of that he cultivates the spirit of worldliness. He recognizes that man's life does not consist in the abundance of what he has but rather in what he is.

"To seek education for the money it may help one to earn is not the idea of education. It is not to equip one more for fighting his neighbour. but for the gaining of that which will enable him to impart to his neighbour the knowledge and ideals he himself possesses. It is not what you can get out out of it, but what it can get out of you."

Queen's is Democratic.

Speaking of the democracy of Queen's, Dr. Gordon said that a few years ago the whole attendance at Queen's at one time was gone over, and it was learned among other facts that the fathers of the students then attending were drawn from 140 different occupations. "We demand," he said, "that no artificial barrier shall be raised to prevent every young man and woman from making the best of themselves. This is not only for the sake of the individual, but in the interests of the community."

"The University stands for what the student is going to do after he leaves. His education is just beginning when he departs from the familiar halls. Then he will show what the University has done for him. It is not only that he has been able to win a degree, but has she enabled him to carry out in actual life the ideals she tried to impress upon him while he was within her walls?" This fidelity to the college ideals, Dr. Gordon considered one of the greatest services a graduate can render his Alma Mater.

University Influence Needed.

Dealing with the influence the University man may have in modern affairs Dr. Gordon mentioned the tendency toward materialism to-day. The University influence must pervade the legal, medical and other professions. It must be relied upon to maintain the true conceptions of national character and greatness. The influence of University men must be directed not only in this direction, but must also be used as the force to unite and bind together the several classes of society.

Dr. Gordon suggested that the graduates of different years should try to arrange to meet at various times and especially would it be desirable if the graduates of various

ORIGIN A MYSTERY

Special to The Examiner.

A fire broke out shortly after two o'clock this morning and raged for five hours, completely sweeping Vanstone's business block, situated in the heart of Wingham. The fire was discovered in the Knox jewelry store, and although the brigade was there quickly, the flames had such a hold on the building that little could be done and they spread rapidly to Laing's big dry goods store, Smythe's hardware store and the legal offices of W. Vanstone. Having a fire wall at this end checked the blaze. A half-dozen firemen had close calls from being killed when the front wall crashed out into the street. Loss is practically covered by insurance, but the origin of the fire is not known.

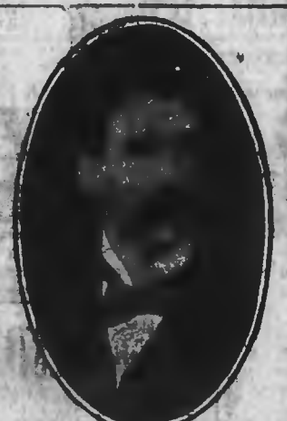
FIVE BANK ROBBERS CAUGHT IN ACT; FIGHT DESPERATE BATTLE WITH MONTREAL CITIZENS

Are Surprised While Trying to Rob Safe of Royal Bank and one Yeggman is Killed While Others Escape

THERE IS NO CLUE

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, MARCH 2. — Five bank robbers attempted to break into the safe at the branch of the Royal Bank in Montreal, West, this morning, and were met by a civilian vigilance, which fought a revolver battle with them, finally driving them off, leaving one unidentified robber dead on the field of battle. They got away with thirteen dollars only. It was at 3 o'clock this morning that a watchman on the Canadian Pacific Railway crossing, nearby, heard a grinding noise, as the yeggmen worked on the safe. He alarmed the chairman of the local vigilance committee, who, with his son, went over and found five men at work at the bank. One who was on watch, fired on their approach, and they returned fire. The noise of the shooting alarmed the whole neighbourhood and soon there were twelve men on the spot, armed with revolvers and shotguns. They tried to surround the bank, but lacked good generalship and four of the hard roads. The body of the dead shoes, which they discarded when they got to the river and took to the hard roads. The body of he dead burglar had hirty cartridges and an extra revolver in his pockets, but nothing to lead to his identification. There is no further trace of the men who escaped.



Mr. Fred Dane, one of the T. & N. O. Railway Commissioners, who, it is reported, may be chosen as Hon. W. H. Hearst's chief adviser and assistant in the expenditure of the five million dollars for the development of New Ontario.

Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia. He stated in the House that there may be no Canadian team at Bisley this year, if the National Rifle Association does not change its attitude towards the Ross Rifle

Coal Strike Already Causing Trouble in England

Special to The Examiner

LONDON, ENG., March 2.—There is no change in the general situation of the strike to-day. The iron and steel industries have been the first to feel the effects, and this morning a number of iron works closed down, throwing men out of work. There have been no disturbances yet. Six hundred mills will be idle by Monday, and forty thousand men out of work. The price of food stuff is rising rapidly.

LOCAL MAN OVERCOME BY GAS

Was Found Unconscious by a Fellow Employee

Daniel Anderson had a narrow escape from asphyxiation by gas at an early hour this morning. The victim, who is employed at the gas house, works at the plant during the night. He was found, helpless, this morning, at 7 o'clock, by one of the day employees. When discovered, he was found lying across the brickwork in front of the boilers, in an unconscious condition. Anderson was carried by his fellow employee into an adjoining shed, and medical aid summoned. Dr. Marshall was soon on the scene, and pronounced the man to be suffering from the effects of inhaling too much of the deadly gas. Restoratives were applied and the unfortunate man was removed to his home on Auburn street. Last reports give his condition as greatly improved and no serious results are anticipated.

INCINERATOR FOR POPULATION OF 30,000 WOULD COST ABOUT $6000 SAYS TORONTO EXPERT

The Stumbling Block in City's Proposed Garbage Disposal Scheme Estimated at This Figure-Haileybury Recently Built One of This Size

NO OBJECTIONABLE ODOURS

The discussion of a garbage collecting system for Peterborough has reached a stage where it is felt that for the disposal of the refuse an incinerator is necessary from the standpoint of public health, avoidance of nuisances and to protect the interests of those who reside near dumping grounds if they were used.

Mr. J. G. Pickard of Toronto, a specialist in the building of these crematories or incinerators, stated to a representative of the Examiner that an incinerator adapted for the requirements of a population as high as 35,000 can be built for about $6,000, exclusive of the concrete foundation and the runway. The whole would cost a little more than $8,000. This is, providing for many years ahead and wherever the capacity might become overtaxed it would be an easy matter to do the work. The Council decided to secure estimates on an incinerator to accommodate a population of 35,000, and Mr. Pickard quotes an approximate cost of $6,000.

One at Haileybury.

He further stated that he had just completed an incinerator of this capacity at Haileybury and the authorities were so pleased with it that they offered to recommend it to enquirers.

No Objectionable Odour.

"There is practically no bad smell from this plant," Mr. Pickard stated, "as the smoke stack is 70 feet from the ground and the combustion chamber is so arranged that nearly all bad fumes are destroyed before the top is reached."

This is a point Mayor Bradburn stated should be considered in the planning of a disposal scheme. A dumping ground, he remarked, attracted flies, would lessen the value of the property around it and personally he said he did not like the idea of dumping the garbage into a hole."

Cost of Running.

Continuing, Mr. Pickard said: "The cost of running is very light. Any labourer of ordinary intelligence, can attend to the fires as these only need attention a few times during the day. If the fires are kept running 24 hours a day and seven days a week, the incinerator will consume about one and one-half tons of coal per month, and even less than this amount in summer, when the garbage is dry and there is sufficient combustible matter in the refuse.

WOMEN GO TO PRISON

Mrs. Pankhurst and Other Leaders in Suffragette Demonstration Sentenced to two Months To-day

DID MUCH DAMAGE

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 2.—Mrs. Emiline Pankhurst, Mrs. Takes and Miss Marshall, who led the window-smashing and terrorising Suffragette demonstration yesterday, were sentenced this morning each to two months imprisonment without the option of a fine. The Crown Prosecutor said £5,000 damage had been done in the demonstration. Mrs. Pankhurst, when asked for defense, said the women had only done what the striking miners were preparing to do to get their rights. The Suffragettes were prepared to go very much further even than this to get votes. "Until we have a part in making laws," she said, "we shall continue to break them." The Magistrates said such determined outrages to law and order must be severely punished and imposed the sentence as above. The audience was composed largely of tradesmen whose property was destroyed in the Suffragettes' expedition, and the sentences were vigorously applauded, till the officers stopped the demonstration. Everywhere there is great condemnation of Mrs. Pankhurst's latest effort. One paper says this morning her action are alienating the sympathy of all decent people.

HANNA HAMMERS THE BILL

Mr. Peck's Measure is Withdrawn at Request of Provincial Secretary

TORONTO, MARCH 2. — In the Legislature yesterday Hon. Mr. Hanna caused the withdrawal of a bill with which he was not in sympathy, namely that of Mr. E. A. Peck of West Peterborough, which aimed at levying charges for street sprinkling according to the assessed value of property, rather than on a franchise basis. The Provincial Secretary said the question was very carefully considered during last session and the decision was that the frontage plan was the only plan.

RUMOUR NOT CONFIRMED

PRESENTATION TO MR. STRATTON

Mr. A. H. Stratton on retiring from the postmastership yesterday, was presented with a very handsome gold-headed cane by the staff of the post office and the letter carriers. The presentation was made by Mr. Chas. Lacheur, while Mr. John Corkery expressed the appreciation of the staff at the kindly relations that had existed between Mr. Stratton and the employees of the office and regret at the departure of Mr. Stratton.

Date Set For Spring Assizes

Docket Promises to be a Light One Judge Latchford Here

The spring sittings of the Court of Appeal will commence on April 9th, which will be the Tuesday following Easter Monday. The list of cases to be dealt with on this occasion does not promise to be of a very extensive character, and consists principally of civil actions. The criminal list is confined to one or two cases, one of these being the case of Samuel Newall of Dummer, who is charged with an alleged indecent assault. This case was to have been dealt with at the Fall Assizes, but owing to the defendant being unable to attend through illness, the case was left over until the Spring Assizes.

His Honour Judge Latchford of Toronto, will preside at the Spring Assizes on the date mentioned.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TURN OUT IN A BODY.

The Red Mill was invaded this morning by the school children of the city, who turned out in a body. Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

SATURDAY, MARCH 2, 1912

TAX RATE AND IMPROVEMENTS.

The Peterborough tax-rate has been struck at 28 mills. This is nominally the same rate as last year. The tax rate and the assessment are pretty high, and the former without representing compensating permanent improvements. These must come if the city is to go ahead, and hold its place with Brantford, Galt, Welland, St. Thomas, and other places, in the matter of permanent improvements in the form of permanent paving. The city council is not giving practical consideration to this matter any too soon.

HON. EDWARD BLAKE.

In the death of Hon. Edward Blake, one of the foremost of Canadians, of this or any other time, has passed away. He has had a distinguished record as a scholar, lawyer and statesman. In whatever sphere of activity he moved, his conduct was marked by a high sense of dignity and honour. His superior mental gifts were improved by high educational culture, but his sterling qualities of character were his distinguishing merit. He embodied the possibility of a lawyer being honest, of a politician without self interest and unworthy ambitions of a patriotic without self-seeking. As an orator he belonged to the stately school, appealing to intellect and judgment, rather than passion. Of Irish extraction, he inherited a love for the land of his fathers, and as a member of the Imperial parliament for an Irish constituency, he did yeoman service for the cause of Home Rule.

SCHOOLS AND TEACHERS.

A farmer's wife, near Peterborough was heard to remark to a neighbour, in respect of a cow which came under consideration: "She's a splendid little cow, but she doesn't give much milk." The abolition of county model schools and the substitution of a few isolated Normal Schools may be a splendid idea, but it does not supply teachers. The debate in the Legislature upon the matter of model schools developed the fact that there is a deplorable lack of teachers; that many schools are unable to get teachers at all, and that many schools, in order to keep going, have to accept the services of unqualified teachers, with corresponding unsatisfactory results. Whether or not the action of the Government in abolishing county model schools has produced these results, the responsibility of meeting the situation rests upon the Government. Sir James Whitney may argue that the Government's action was a good one, but it evidently does not meet the demand for teachers, which is the prime consideration. He may bluster about the policy of the Government being "overwhelmingly endorsed" at two elections. That does not count; that is too much in the way of abstraction. We want concrete results. The Province needs teachers. The Government may spend a million upon schools, but unless this million can be given its proper effect in the form of good teaching, which means good and enough teachers, the money is only wasted, because proper teaching and satisfactory learning by pupils is the real and only object of maintaining schools. Schools, without teachers, are like an engine without a qualified driver.

SANITARY INSPECTION.

The creation of the office of sanitary inspector, seems to have developed a remarkable thirst for preservation of the public health. There are twenty-eight applications for the office already filed. The City Council has acted wisely in deciding to postpone the appointment till their next meeting. The foundation does seem to have yet been laid to justify the appointment of a sanitary inspector. Do the aldermen know, have they considered, what is required in an efficient sanitary inspector? A man qualified for the position must possess some special fitness, be a man of some special knowledge of sanitary matters, especially a knowledge of what constitutes sanitary or unsanitary conditions. That the duties of a sanitary inspector, are not understood, is shown by the fact that the applicants seem to think that it involves only ordinary scavenging work. With one exception, all the applicants who name a salary, put it at figures that wouldnt' be an extravagant remuneration for an ordinary unskilled labourer. One applicant seems to have so distinct an idea of the duties of the office that he will do the work for so much and find his own outfit, or so much less if the city "furnishes the necessary outfit." The necessary outfit for a properly qualified sanitary inspector is carried in his head — it must consist of knowledge, derived either from study or experience, or both. A man may be well qualified to satisfactorily clear the rubbish from a lane, but would not know how to apply a milk test or appraise the sanitary condition of food, or decide a question of ventilation in connection with a school building, or perform any other service that would come within the sphere of a real sanitary inspector.

The people seem to have got a wrong idea of what sanitary inspection should be. We have been accustomed to regard as a sanitary inspector a policeman detailed to distribute circulars warning householders to clean their premises before the 15th of May, and there his duties seemed to end, because nothing else was required of him or insisted upon.. There seems to be a good deal of uncertainty, even in the minds of aldermen, as to what the duties and functions of a sanitary inspector are to be. Theoretically, any one of intelligence can outline to himself what should be required of a sanitary inspector, qualified to answer to the title.

It will be seen that invitations issued by the Council for the position of sanitary inspector were premature. Nobody seems to know, or to have considered, or decided, what manner of official he is to be. If he is to be a sanitary inspector in the proper sense of the term—a man of knowledge and ability, and of a certain degree of sanitary skill then keep to the title, and define the duties that are expected of the incumbnt. If a city scavenger or garbage-removal contractor is meant, let it be plainly stated. If the city is to be put to the expense of maintaining another official in the interests of the most important of our civic concerns, the public health, then a qualified man must necessarily be appointed.

THE GREAT COAL STRIKE.

The British coal strike is a disastrous affair and shows that industrial war may have as wide-reaching effects for evil as actual war. Enforced idleness for three and a half million people, most of whom are dependent upon their daily wage, and living from hand to mouth, have no reserve funds, means untold suffering; a monthly loss to employers of nearly thirty-eight million dollars, loss to mine operators of $700,000 per day and losses in dependent industries are simply beyond calculation. A continued coal strike means universal industrial paralysis and inconceivable national loss. Under these circumstances, it seems that the government is justified in taking extraordinary measures to end the strike. Mr. Asquith finds that underground miners do not get a living wage, and it is stated that mine owners declared dividends of 10 per cent., with 10 per cent. bonus, and therefore it would seem, the strike is justified. It may seem a rather high-handed proceeding, to legislate in the matter of wages, but the circumstances; the fact that the national welfare is as much involved as the living of the miners, would appear to justify the government in settling the matter, as is alleged it can be done, by meeting the demand of the miners—by fixing a minimum wage for underground workers. The minimum wage demanded by the miners will appear to Canadian wage-earners remarkably reasonable. The demands may be thus summarised:

The Miners' Federation originally demanded, with slight variations as to locality, eight shillings a shift. The modified demands on which they now stand are for an individual minimum wage as follows:

Yorkshire, 7s 6d.
Lancashire, 7s.
Midland Federation, 6s to 7s.
Derbyshire, 7s 1½d to 7s 6d.
Nottinghamshire, 7s 6d.
North Wales, 6s.
Leicestershire, 7s 2d.
South Derbyshire, 6s 6d.
Somersetshire, 4s 11d.
Bristol, 4s 11d.
Cumberland, 6s 6d.
Scotland, 6s.
South Wales, 7s 1½d to 7s 6d.
Northumberland, 6s to 7s 2d.
Durham, 6s 1½d.
Forest of Dean, 5s. 10d.
Cleveland, 5s 10d.

No underground adult worker shall receive a rate of wages less than 5s per shift, this is not to apply to Somersetshire, the Forest of Dean and Bristol.

The individual minimum wage for all pieceworkers other than colliers to be arranged by the districts themselves, and to be as near as possible the present wages.

One would think, in view of the tremendous issues involved in a general strike of coal miners, that the demands of the workers for a reasonable minimum wage is a reasonable one, and that the government is warranted in interfering, in the interests of the welfare of the United Kingdom. Interference in the matter of personal right, like the adjustment of wages, may not on general principles be advisable, but in a matter like the British coal strike, principle might well yield to expediency to avoid evils of a tremendous character and extent. Governments exist for the benefit of the people, and the interests of the public and nation must at times become the paramount consideration.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Brantford has struck natural gas in the neighbourhood of a newspaper office. It must have "struck in."

In the transfer of Mr. C. C. James to the Federal service, Ontario loses a deputy minister of agriculture who cannot be replaced. The removal of the Minister of Agriculture, the London Advertiser thinks, would be some compensation, but it is too much to hope for.

Three thousand Toronto citizens on Wednesday adopted a resolution, one of whose clauses contained the following outrageous mis-statement: "The (Home Rule) Bill . . tends . . to the creation of a papal state within the Empire, where British law and justice would be superseded by the canon law of the Papacy, as is the case in the province of Quebec in this Dominion." If, thinks the Montreal Herald, the people of Toronto would only confine themselves to matters they know something about, they would save themselves from frequently appearing ridiculous, as well as bigotted.

PROVINCIAL LANDS.

(Montreal Herald)

The fixing of the boundaries of Manitoba and Ontario is not the only question that is arousing anxiety in the new settlement that has, it is understood, been arranged between the Dominion and the Provinces. The prospect which Manitoba has to look forward to is that after the outstanding payments due the provincial treasury from the purchasers of provincial lands have all been paid, as they will be, in the course of a few years, the province will have no revenue whatever from the lands. There is compensation, but it is not exactly welcomed with eagerness. The probability that the Province will receive from the Dominion treasury no item of the lands will be some $400,000 more than it gets under existing arrangements, and the revenue the province receives varies in amount, but for a number of years it has been considerably more than the subsidy represents, and in 1910, the last year of which the record has been made up, it amounted to nearly $650,000. Under the new arrangement the public lands will be taken over by the Dominion, but the Provincial Government has to grapple with the problem of developing the new territory which comes under its jurisdiction. This will necessitate a heavy expenditure for the added territory is far greater in extent than the province as it stands to-day. There are roads and bridges to be built, ports to be equipped, public buildings to be erected, schools to be provided, justice to be administered and very many other things to be done that a constantly increasing land revenue would have helped to pay for. Governments truly need money and the Federal Government evidently means to look to itself.

SOUTH RENFREW.

(Christian Guardian.)

The Borden administration has made its first appeal to the electors since its advent to power—and has lost, though this is a straw that cannot be said to tell unerringly the direction of the wind. We think it is a matter of general congratulation that Mr. Geo. P. Graham has now been returned to Parliament, where his experience and ability ought to be of considerable service to the country. Of course it is hard for a politician who is nothing but a politician, to see any advantage in the return of any of his opponents; but the great mass of electors has no desire to see a Parliament which is either solidly Tory or solidly Grit, and both in Dominion and Provincial affairs, it is always desirable that the Opposition should be such as to command the attention and respect of the people. For this reason many who are not of Mr. Graham's political faith will be glad of his election. The circumstances attending that election unfortunately were such as the country would gladly have dispensed with. The fact that the Conservative party thought it expedient to go back on the pledge of the local association and place a candidate in the field when the local association had expressly bound itself not to do so, is something of which the average Conservative is thoroughly ashamed. We do not admire such bargains, probably the less of them the better, but no party can repudiate the pledges of its representatives without seriously damaging itself in the estimation of all fair-minded people. Politicians may defend such things, but the people despise them.

BRITAIN'S NATIONAL INSURANCE

(Christian Guardian.)

The "National Insurance Bill" has become law in the United Kingdom, and promises to do something to help the vast army of British workmen. The workman pays 8 cents a week, the workwoman pays 6 cents, the employer pays 6 cents, and the state pays 4 cents. In return for this the workers are guaranteed, in case of sickness, free medical attendance, $2.50 a week for 26 weeks, if they are men, and $1.87 a week for 26 weeks, if they are women. If the malady is incurable, and they are permanently incapacitated, they receive $1.25 a week until they reach the age of 70, when the old-age pension comes into effect. But the Act does more than this; it also incidentally levies war against the slum. If it be found that any area is drawing more than its share in the shape of sick pay, an enquiry is to be instituted, and if it be found that the excessive demand upon the fund is due to slum property, then the owners of the insanitary property shall be liable for the excess. It is thought that this provision of the bill will do not a little to remedy slum conditions, while at the same time it will call public attention in a striking and original way to the real meaning of slum conditions. This great scheme of national insurance will be administered through local committees, including representatives of friendly societies, which form the real machinery of the system. Why should not Canada introduce just such a system. Everything is in our favour. We have fewer poor, fewer slums, and are better able to pay what such a scheme woul doost. Why not try it?

The Losses By British Coal Strike

Men and women employed in dependent industries who will be thrown out of work in London if the strike continues three weeks, 500,000.

In England and Scotland the unemployed in three weeks, if strike continues, will number 3,500,000.

Loss in wages to employes daily, $1,250,000.

Loss to employes if strike continues for one month, $33,750,000.

Loss to operators, estimating profits of production and interest on investment at 6 per cent., daily, $700,000.

Loss to railroading, shipping, to employes in allied and dependent industries will be almost beyond computation in the course of two or three weeks.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS TO ADDRESS THE AD. CLUB

Members of Newly Formed Local Organization Will Have an Opportunity of Hearing Some of Best Known Advertising Men on the Continent.

There is some speculation going as to just what is the nature of the recently organized Peterborough Ad Club, and what are its purposes, and what can it do for Peterborough, and for its members individually. We need only to learn of what Ad Clubs are doing elsewhere to discern the unbounded possibilities to which the local organization and its members may attain.

One of the livest Ad Clubs on the continent, and indeed the most useful, is said to be in a small town in Texas, not over a hundred miles from Dallas, where the big convention is to be held this year. There are only twelve members in this club. The Peterborough Ad Club already has twenty-five members, on the strength of its first organization meeting. Therefore, no difficulty whatever need face the local club in so far as getting members is concerned.

It has been well said that the greatest game in the world is the "game of selling." Almost anyone can manufacture. It is invariably easy to buy. The real work is selling. And this any manufacturer and every merchant knows full well, and discovers the same very early in his distribution or selling experience.

Because of this "greatest game"—how to make better sales and more of them—has arisen a great want, which want is being satisfied through the working out of the ideals for which the Ad Clubs are organized. We have all heard that "competition is the life of trade." To-day the best of business men are placing themselves on a higher plane than this and are learning that co-operation along with stimulative, not destructive, competion, is to be the life of a better trade, which is to be the trade of to-morrow.

Through discussions, addresses and papers by local members dealing with problems of vital interest to all local business men; through coming in touch with prominent successful business men from other centres who will be brought in to address the local clubs, members of the Peterborough Ad Club will have themselves to blame if they do not catch the spirit of the Ad Club and derive much personal benefit, of actual cash value, from the monthly meetings of the Club.

It will be a privilege to hear such men as Mr. C. H. Ashley, of theToronto Saturday Night, who will address the local club, next Tuesday evening, March 5th, on the occasion of its second dinner and meeting, commencing at 6.15 p.m. It is anticipated that at future meetings the local Ad Club will have speakers from the large American cities, who are brought over to address the Toronto Ad Club and who will make a circuit of several of the Ontario cities amongst which Peterborough will be one of the prominent cities having a live and progressive Ad Club. Recently the Toronto Ad Club had Mr. Herbert Casson, of New York City, to address its members. On three days following Mr. Casson was employed by three different Toronto firms at $100 per day, he working for them only in an advisory capacity as a publicity or advertising expert. We venture that every local business man would go out of his way to hear Mr. Casson.

Aside from benefits accruing to individual members of the local Ad Club, the organization will eventually mean much to the city of Peterborough. It can be readily understood that an aggregation of earnest men, meeting together, working together, and getting others together for better business and more of it in Peterborough, and boosting things in general for our city, cannot fail but be of far reaching influence for better things for our local citizens in general.

THE MOVING SPIRIT WILL SOON BEGIN TO ASSERT ITSELF

The moving germ for spring is beginning to agitate the van parade already. "In spite of the renewed cold weather, it is a sure sign that spring is somewhere not very far off when city folks begin to hunt for new homes," said a local real estate man yesterday.

Of course, he continued, the real rush hasn't started yet, and won't start for a few weeks. But it won't be many weeks until the moving vans will parade the streets to the tune of the carpet beater and the whir of the vacuum cleaner.

"There are two well-defined movements in the growth of a city nowadays," added the real estate magnate, as he lit one of his favourite cheroots, and invited the Examiner reporter to a similar indulgence. "It is evident in almost every Canadian city. One movement is toward an increased number of apartment houses, and the other in the opposite direction—toward homes in the suburbs. Both tendencies are to be found in Peterborough, represented by two classes of people. In the first place there is the salaried man, who is more or less uncertain as to his plans. He wants to live well, but hasn't the time nor money to keep up a home as he would like to do. He turns to the apartment house, as the rooms above the stores in the business section of the town are known. Here he obtains comfort and a certain social standing that he couldn't get with the same expenditure in a home of his own.

SOME WOULD HAVE GARDEN AND A COW.

"Then there's the other kind of a fellow, who has saved something and invests it in land or in a home. He is usually more or less old-fashioned in some of his ideas and hopelessly domestic. He wants plenty of elbow room, a chance for a garden and a spot for chickens and cow perhaps. In the larger cities you can spot him in a moment as the dyed-in-the-wool suburbanite.

"The apartment house has produced a type peculiar to itself. You remember the old saying about 'the devil's work for idle hands.' That is about what has happened to the new apartment house woman. She is getting very modern and stylish on a tolerably small salary. If she eats in the cafe she hasn't a thing to do."

"What are the prospects for a renewed activity in real estate circles?" queried the interviewer.

"Good," was the reply. "This especially applies to suburban holdings, which has shown a marked tendency to increase in value during the past two years. New-comers to the city are quick to realise the possibilities that Peterborough possesses, and with an eye to the future are content to dwell on the outskirts of the town, relying on their own foresight to assume that the city will go out to them, and eventually they will be served with a street car service and all modern conveniences that add to the comfort of city dwellers.

Westwood Suffered By The Storm

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WESTWOOD, FEB. 28.—A terrific snow storm visited this neighbourhood this past week. The roads were rendered impassable in many places for about two days. The Boundary School was closed on Thursday and Friday, although the teacher made a brave attempt on Friday morning; the school in the Village kept open, but the children had some serious times getting there and back; the trains were belated, therefore the mail was not in as early as usual. The baker had difficulty in getting through and the local storekeepers report a sudden demand and a shortage in bread.

There was no choir practice in the Presbyterian church this week, but they acquitted themselves favourably on Sunday, nevertheless.

Mr. John Harrison happened with a serious accident in the woods last week. While felling a tree a large limb fell on his head, cutting it in several places.

Miss Annie Sargent spent last week at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Ed. Christie.

The young people will be glad to learn that the masquerade ball in Keene was postponed, and they may yet have a chance of attending it.

Miss Harvey was in the Village on Saturday afternoon visiting Miss Lizzie Sharp.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Warr, Mr. H. Warr and Messrs. Hugh and Robt Cameron reported on Saturday in Westwood that the Boundary was badly drifted and the roads in poor condition.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common Food it was in a terrible condition. men because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by combining the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

The Appointment Of Mr. Jos. Knox

Mr. Joseph Knox of Havelock, has been appointed to the position on the Trent Canal, formerly occupied by Mr. Clement Gordon, who had resigned his position, in anticipation of the action of the government, which had evidently doomed him to the axe. Some opponents of Mr. Gordon had laid charges and an investigation took place; but nothing of consequence developed. However, rather than be harassed with only one object in view, Mr. Gordon preferred to retire of his own action. Mr. Joseph Knox, ex-Reeve of Havelock, a former member of the County Council, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Gordon, who was an excellent man for his position—knew the waters and had the mechanical skill and experience, to lay out and do the work required, in a satisfactory and workmanlike manner. No one objects personally to Mr. Knox being appointed, but the principle by which Mr. Knox gets the appointment is a bad one, recognising political favour and not efficiency as a ground for appointment to a very responsible office.

Notice to Fat Women

Presumably you know, ladies, that the proper caper nowadays is lines. Curves are passe. You have got to take off your fat. This must be done in one of three ways. By dieting, by exercise, or by means of Marmola Prescription Tablets. The two former will keep you busy for months and punish you pretty severely, the latter will cost you 75 cents at the druggist's. The tablets will not make any alteration in your diet necessary, and yet in all probability, before you have used up one case, you will be losing from 12 to 16 ounces of fat a day. Which method do you like the best?

If you fancy this pleasant method of getting off the fat, see your druggist instantly, or else write the Marmola Co., 853 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., to send you a case by mail. These cases contain so generous a quantity of tablets that the treatment is very economical. It is, also, quite harmless, for the tablets are made exactly in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription.

HUMOUR OF COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE

Bewdley correspondent to the Port Hope Times contributes the following:

I was waiting to tell you about those young men from the south coming to see our girls but I guess they have gone to pastures new, or maybe it's the bad roads, so I will try to tell you something else.

Bessie and Myrtle will have a dull time now, no errands to run.

We notice one of our young ladies sporting a lovely new pearl and amethyst ring. I suppose the wedding will be in June.

Gordon did not have to drive alone last Sunday, but it was hard on Arley.

Why don't Carl go to school? If the lessons were not agreeable, I am sure the walk home would be taken.

Cora, you should take that young man of yours to church, it is only one night out of the week.

Irene is not the only one that misses Edd at the parties all hope he will be able to be out soon.

A shot startled the people in our burg recently. It was meant frighten away a couple of young men, one of them just married. They were annoying one of our citizens by hammering his door. Of course they were drunk. We expected arrests.

What if southern boys hadn't stayed at home Wednesday

Who was the girl of the dance?

Accident on C.P.R., Mary, we had the time of our life in town, Wess.

The Zion correspondent writes as follows:

We hope some of Zion's old bachelors will take advantage of Leap Year.

Jane looks all right anyhow.

The Rosemount scribe presents the following pertinent queries in the same paper:

What we would like to know:

Why Fred Mac always drives north Sundays?

What takes N and F to town so often lately?

Why B looks so lonesome? Is it because A is away at present?

What makes T stay so long?

Why H takes two days to see his best girl?

If G is going to get his bird this spring?

Everybody would like to know.

PHYSICAL FITNESS FOR THE MEN OF BUSINESS

By Frank Gotch

There is that period in the life of a business man when he slips backward physically. It isn't any certain age. With some men it comes early; with others it arrives late.

The moment a man begins to let his business drive him—the minute he admits to himself that his commercial duties are more important than he is—that very time is the cross-roads period, when he begins to leave his physical affairs to themselves.

Now, the man is the most able in any line who is the most physically fit. Driving through deals calls for bodily energy. The fellow who goes into an industrial fight ought to be able to say, at the tap of the gong, that he never felt better in his life. If he can go in to win—if he isn't able to withstand all the strains and stresses thrown onto his nervous system—he is out of tune with his requirements.

No matter what else a man may do his bodily functions are mighty close to his real self. He never pauses to consider that long hours at the desk—maybe in bad light and poor air—keep sapping his vitality. He does not look upon his physical fitness as an asset quite as valuable as his stocks and bonds. He just slides along and gets past with the best he is able to achieve.

Everybody will have a hobby. With some men it is pool or billiards—without any more actual work than walking around a table and banging at the ivory balls with a light stick. With others it is cards, or dogs or horses. It is always something.

The man who makes himself his hobby, who believes that tensile strength in his muscles is to be sought, is in better shape for all the affairs of life than he who has some motionless game as his pastime.

The most successful preacher is not the one who is locked up in his study with his books. He is the man who is doing some physical work—who is making his muscles respond to his will. When he gets into the pulpit he feels like driving home his doctrines. And it is so with the banker, the merchant—or the physician or dentist. The fellows who get up to the top may not all be physical giants. Harriman wasn't—but the pace cost him his life.

The business man argues thus: "I am at peace with the world. I don't have to fight with my fists. Therefore, what do I need of exercise?" One need not be a bully or a slugger. One may be even more peaceful when one is fit—but the plain business end counts. Be able to work hard—with snap and vigour. You can't do it with your will power alone. You must have rich, red blood—and without exercise you won't have it. Beware of that moment when you begin to hit the chutes physically. It is a padlock on your possibilities—a bar to your greatest achievements.

THE INTERNATIONAL LIMITED

For the swell train of Canada the Grand Trunk consider that it is necessary to have a publication describing the Intercolonial Limited, in accordance with the service and equipment, and have issued a dainty brochure descriptive of the train itself, and the country through which it passes. The book is printed on heavy satin finished coated stock, enclosed in a four page cover, printed in gold and brown, the entire book being stippled to give it the artistic effect that was aimed at.

This grain is the finest and fastest train in Canada, is known as the Railway Greyhound of the Dominion and has become a household word along the line. Its popularity is increasing every day.

An attachment for a telephone receiver by which another person can hear what is being said over a wire, a stenographer, for instance, who is to take both sides of a conversation, has been invented.

153,959 BELL 'PHONES IN USE IN CANADA

MONTREAL, MARCH 2.—If you owned more millions of dollars than you knew what to do with, and had so much spare time that you didn't know where to find something to turn your hand to, and the Bell Telephone Company hadn't something better to do with their poles, you could buy up the company's forest of wire-bearing timber which stretches across the Dominion and build one of the nicest little board walks you ever saw right clear from Halifax to Vancouver. And after the walk was finished there would still be enough timber left to build a couple of very excellent summer cottages at both ends of the walk.

Or, again, if you were a tight rope walker and the monotony of life on a slack wire confined to the narrow limits of the average vaudeville stage was beginning to pall, always supposing again that you were a millionaire as well, you might make a dicker with the Bell Company and buy up the wire which they added to their system during 1911 alone. With this outfit you could construct a world-beater of a slack wire, tying one end to the Notre Dame Cathedral towers and the other to the topmost pinnacle of St. Paul's, London. You would still have almost enough left to make the return trip to New York, via the flagstaff on St. George's Hall, Liverpool, and the top of the Singer Building.

If you had all the miles of wire which the company owns in its entirety—but why continue? If you had all that money you would not buy Bell Telephone wire, but Bell Telephone stock.

This maze of statistics comes out of the thirty-second annual meeting of the shareholders of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, which was held the other day at the company's head offices on Notre Dame street, Montreal. The Bell Company, unlike most other big organizations, holds its meetings in secret sessions, and presents a printed report of its financial standing only to the general public through the newspapers.

DOING FAIRLY WELL.

In view of the fact that the company is now preparing for argument before the Railway Commission a statement of its affairs which, it is claimed, will show that the company is not making a just profit on its investment, this year's report is of rather more than ordinary interest. The company's claim as to its Montreal service may or may not be just and right, but there is no doubt that on the whole the Bell people are doing fairly well. During the year they received from various sources a sum of $6,476,848.67, which gives them a net revenue of $1,426,885.74, and a surplus, after a million dollars has been set aside for dividend, of $428,835.74. The total balance revenue account for this year is $530,415.47.

After the various contingent and pension funds have received their allotment and the patent and building accounts have been charged off, there remains a surplus to carry forward to 1912 of $120,415.47.

20,049 NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

During the year subscribers to the number of more than what Westmount ever dreams its population is, have been added to the various Bell lists, the total number of new subscribers reaching 20,049, while if every man, woman and child in Vancouver had a telephone of his or her own to play with, there would still be enough machines left from the company's stock to present every man, woman and child in St. John, N.B., with an instrument also for his or her own personal use. In all the company has 153,959 instruments out earning rentals.

There are 470 exchanges in operation throughout the country, and these employ a small army of blonde and brunette queens, who say "hello" and give you the wrong number, which could easily inhabit a town the size of Sherbrooke, Que., and even then feel a bit crowded for room. This 470 exchanges by the way, looks like a decrease from last year's report, but isn't, really. The shrinkage is caused by consolidation of different exchanges. In addition to these company-owned exchanges the company has 1,466 agencies.

QUITE A LITTLE WIRE.

Just 4,167 miles of wire were added to the Long Distance system during the year, and this gives us our slack wire calculation, while the board walk builders would find their material in the 9,038 miles of poles owned by the company's Long Distance service. The total wire operated by the Long Distance service is 58,300 miles, which would make quite a few bird cages.

The company is also an extensive holder of real estate, which totals $2,208,865.99 in the assets, and to which during the year nine buildings have been added, including the new Lasalle Exchange in this city.

While the Bell company is by far and away the largest concern of its kind in the country, it is by no means without competitors, and when it comes across competition it promptly proceeds to get on level terms with the competition as far as possible. One result of this policy appears in the item in the report which shows that the company now exchanges business with 433 independent companies, which adds 44,570 subscribers to its list.

NEW AUTOS FOR CITY

Quite a number of people attended the Automobile Exhibition in Toronto during the past ten days. Reports have it that twenty or twenty-five new autos will make their appearance in Peterborough at the commencement of the ensuing season. It is said that about fifteen of the number will be new machines and about ten will be exchanges of present machines for new.

FELL IN A FAINT

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

LOCAL MAN VICTIM OF FLIMFLAMMER

The old-fashioned flim-flam game, operated with the assistance of an envelope and always rewarding the victim with experience which proves valuable in the future, was operated last evening in the store of a George street merchant. Early in the evening a man entered the store and told one of the clerks he wished to secure two $10 bills for 20 one dollar bills, which he exhibited. The clerk produced two ten-dollar bills, and the stranger put them into an envelope and sealed the envelope. The clerk on counting the money found that there was but $19 in the roll and so informed the stranger.

The stranger then suggested that he go out and secure another dollar from a friend and gave the clerk an envelope, supposed to contain the two ten-dollar bills, taking the change from the clerk. The clerk waited and waited for the stranger to return and when he failed to put in an appearance after a reasonable time, opened the envelope. She found two slips of plain paper inside.

Oh, fudge!
Cut it out.
Talking to beat the band.
They're not in it.
It's all bosh.
Nothing doing.
That's nifty.
Never again.
Cough up.
He has nothing on me.
The surest thing you knew.
Not to be sneezed at.
That's the real thing.
Not by a long shot.
I see his finish.
Get the hook.
That will be about all.

There is no benefit so large but malignity will lessen it; none so narrow which a good interpretation will not enlarge.

No man can ever be grateful that views a benefit on the wrong side, or takes a good office by the wrong handle.

HE WHO EXPECTORATES CANNOT EXPEC-TO-RATE AS A GENTLEMAN

Written for the Examiner by Roy Gilray

In St. Agathe, Que., they have a by-law which imposes a penalty of $10 on anyone guilty of expectorating on the sidewalk, road or other public place.

This is simply a common sense ordinance for the protection of those who are not afflicted with tuberculosis.

It is now an established, and universally accepted fact that, in the sputum or spit of the consumptive, the Tubercle Bacillus, the germ (the only cause of the disease) abounds in countless numbers, (one spit may contain millions of them.) When sputum dries and is broken up, by sweeping or other means, the germs are carried through the air and so may be lodged in the throat or breathed into the lungs. To realize how small these germs are, it is only necessary to state that it takes thousands packed together to be capable of being seen by the naked eye. It will then be easily understood how such a minute body as one or two of these germs attaching themselves to dust particles may float in the air. In order to fully understand the importance of this fact look at the illumination path of a ray of sunlight passing through a small opening into a darkened room. The small dust particles may be seen floating in such numbers that it can be readily understood how impossible it is to avoid breathing them; and when tubercular germs, derived from the spit of careless consumptives, are attached, it will further be seen how consumption is spread, and why so many term it a "House Disease."

Sputum, then, is the channel through which the germ passes from man to man. I hesitate in using the word "spit." It sounds objectionable, and its use calls for an apology. If the mere word is offensive, how much more must the act be?

The dangerous habit of spitting cannot be too severely condemned. If the dictates of decency will not influence, then common humanity should guide, for there are many diseases, other than consumption, conveyed in this manner.

The injury to many by spitting is a matter of indifference to some people. As a result it is now contrary to law to spit on floors in public places, or in cars, or on sidewalks, but unfortunately this law is rarely carried out. The law is necessary for the careless and ignorant, but it is expected that thoughtful and honest-minded citizens will desist from acquiring the habit.

Of all the pernicious habits to which man, in his degenerate form seems to have fallen heir, there is none more disgusting than the filthy habit of spitting. The sight which sickens one, who is not provided with a cast-iron stomach, any morning while going down-street, is a blot on the human race, and shows him to be an inordinately selfish creature, devoid of those finer qualities which distinguish him from the brute creature.

To show how the authorities at a sanatorium look upon this filthy habit I will briefly refer to an incident that took place at the Cottage Sanatorium Gravenhurst, a few years ago.

A young man so far forgot the rules of the institution and his good manners that he expectorated over the edge of the verandah upon the grass beneath. Dr. Elliott, the physician then in charge, noticed the act, and at once proceeded to inculcate in the young man's brain the rules of the institution and the decorum of a gentleman. Before an audience of about one hundred patients he made him take a shovel and dig up about a square foot of earth surrounding the "clot of germs" and carry it to the furnaces to be burned. With a bottle of carbolic acid he had him sprinkle the grass for a considerable distance around the hole. The whole operation lasted about twenty minutes, but the Doctor gave the young man the opportunity of either doing this or leaving the "San." He chose the former, and, needless to say, his sputum cup received the balance of his "spits."

It is to be hoped that those in whose hands rests the power of enforcing the law against spitting will awaken to the seriousness of their responsibility to the citizens of Peterborough. It is unlawful for one man to strike another because that man happened to spit on the ground over which the other has to travel. He has transferred his protection to the authorities, therefore, it is the duty of the authorities to protect the thousands of citizens who are daily exposed to wholesale dangers from expectoration on sidewalks and in public places.

Surgical Operations

Surgically speaking, we live in the Listerian age. This simple statement of fact is accepted without quibble by every physician and surgeon in the world; but a definition of it is necessary for the layman. It means, then, that we live in an age when 99 per cent. of those who have been obliged to undergo major operations—that is, operations involving the amputation of a limb, the opening of the abdominal or thoracic cavities, or something equally serious—recover. Prior to the Listerian age the death-rate was one in three following such operations. Truly, a marvellous revolution in surgical procedure is here revealed. Listerism saves more lives every year than Napoleon destroyed in all his wars.

There is one thing about Listerism even more astonishing; Lord Lister himself, the founder of Listerism, the father of antiseptic surgery, lived in the Listerian age. He died last week, but he lived to see criticism of his theories, his methods, and his triumphs die. He died secure in the knowledge that the world of science had recognized in him one of the greatest benefactors of mankind. No long drawn out century of pain intervened before the general adoption of antiseptic and aseptic surgery.

Almost on the eve of Lord Lister's death Dr C. W. Saleeby, a well-known writer of books on medical topics and one who sat at the feet of Lister, published a work entitled "Surgery and Society: A Tribute to Listerism." In it he has traced the history of pre-Listerian surgery; the work of Pasteur, which made Lister's discoveries possible; the theories and methods of Lister, and discusses also many other interesting things relating to the surgical practice of to-day.

In Dr. Saleeby's opinion, Listerism has averted as much pain as anaesthesia because inflammation is painful. The thing that Lister did, therefore, was to abolish inflammation, sepsis, or blood poisoning, following operations. Two things have robbed surgery of its terrors—anaesthesia and the antiseptic methods of operating. Surgical anaesthesia was first employed by Morton in Boston in 1847. Lister first used carbolic acid as an antiseptic in 1868.

Prior to the discovery of these two humanitarian measures surgery was a living horror, especially on the battlefield. Midnight amputations by the dim light of lanterns in the open beneath a wintry sky followed each other by the score. The most primitive dressings were used, and the best that could be promised was to arrest the flow of blood. Of the heroic men who submitted to this well-meant butchery fully 90 per cent. died.

As the author justly says, although Louis Pasteur was a chemist and bacteriologist, and not a physician or surgeon, 'he is the father of all physicians and surgeons worthy of the name to-day." He evolved the microbic theory of disease. Many of the most malignant ailments, he declared, are caused by germs. We know them now by various names—bacilli, cocci, spirilia, and so on. Lister, Professor of Surgery in Glasgow University, eagerly embraced this theory. It seemed to him also that germs were responsible for the putrefactive inflammation, sepsis, and death. He even thought that the air itself must be impregnated with these malignant microbes. They must be combated, but how was it to be done?

Lister had great faith in carbolic acid as the agent most likely to destroy microbes. He used it in strong solutions and very freely. The author speculates on the ravages this powerful drug must have made on the hands of the operators. After the operative surface had been plentifully sprinkled with the acid, Lister warned his assistants that they must imagine everything as smeared with green paint. This was to impress upon them the necessity for keeping their hands and every other possible source of contamination away from the neighbourhood of the operative surface and the surgical wound. It magnified the idea of the ubiquity of the microbes.

Not satisfied with these precautions the great surgeon operated while enveloped in a cloud of carbolic acid spray which was constantly played upon operator, patient, and operating table alike. The day this procedure was carried out marked an epoch in the history of surgery. Wonderful results were achieved, and improvements in technique and the substitution of other drugs for carbolic acid have continued ever since. Nor has perfection yet been attained.

In the following year Lister was called to the University of Edinburgh, there the light of the medical and surgical world.

Later he demonstrated his methods at King's College, London. Like many other pioneers of science, he was subjected to bitter criticism. There were disciples, however, among enlightened nations, such as France and Denmark, to promulgate his doctrines. And so his fame and teachings spread; his star shone brightest at the hour of his death and its glory can never fade.

Dr. Saleeby finds much to criticise in the attitude of many British subjects toward the science of to-day, and in particular he condemns the anti-vivisectionists of England. His work is a timely and needed tribute to Listerism, and can be read with profit by both physician and laymen.

The hour hand is 13 feet 4 inches long. It weighs 2,000 pounds.

Within the tower there is a small chamber just behind the dial faces, and it is only 14 by 25 by 34 inches. In this little chamber is a mechanism which operates the great hands. The four bells of the clock stand 265 feet above the dials in the base of the observatory and are still nearly a hundred feet below the gilded cupola lantern at the top. This lantern flashes the hours at night. At a predetermined hour, varying with the time of the year when twilight has advanced, the bells are silent until daylight. During the night signals flash from the lantern. The quarter hours are flashed from each of the four faces of the lantern by a single red light, the halves by three flashes. At the full hour the white lights go out and the lantern tells the time in white flashes.

The bells that ring the old Westminster chimes over New Broadway have four tones, G, F, E flat and B flat. The B bell weighs 7,000 pounds. The entire system master clock that guides this enormous timepiece is an elaborately carved mahogany case only a little larger than a grandfather's clock and stands on the second floor. This master clock operates not only the big clock but a hundred smaller clocks in the building. Its adjustment is so accurate that a variation of five seconds a month is all that is expected.

Not quite so spectacular and yet even more prominent is the huge timepiece built for Colgate & Co. by the Seth Thomas clock people. Everybody who crosses the Hudson sees it. The dial of this clock is 4 feet 6 inches. Its minute hand measures 20 feet from hub to tip. The hour hand is 15 feet long. The numerals on the dial are almost the height of a man. The wheels of this clock are held radially in position by a cast iron bedplate measuring four feet. The movement is substantially made with bronze wheels, machine cut gears and hardened steel pinions. The pendulum rod is eight feet long and is made in a combination of zinc and steel to allow it to adjust itself to any variation in temperature. I order to obtain this delicate compensation the rod was tested in a room at the Seth Thomas factory laboratory, where it was heated and cooled alternately. It weighs 76 pounds.

At night the hands of this clock are illuminated by an outline of incandescent lights. The hour marks, designated in the daytime by heavy black strokes, are illuminated at night by a row of incandescent lights.

TIT-BITS

An old time Baptist preacher of an American town, who has retired from active Gospel preaching, but who still keeps a firm eye on the faith, has just had a little experience with a coloured man that causes him to think very seriously. Meeting the coloured man, the preacher said: "Dave, if you don't bring that saddle home I'll have you put in jail." "What saddle is yer 'forrin' ter?" "The one you stole from me." "Parson, 'fore the Lord, I nebber stole yer saddle." "Yes, you did, I saw you when you took it off the yard fence. I believe I'll have you arrested anyway." "Look heah, parson, you's a old Calvanistic Baptis', isn't yer?" "Yes, and I'll have you sent to the penitentiary." "Wall, so is I; and now ketch the p'nts as I gin 'em ter yer. Dar is jes' so many saddles in dis worl' what is ter be stole, an' dar's so many men what is ter steal dese saddles. Dis is predesperation. Now if yer saddle happens ter be one ob de predisposed saddles, an' I happens ter be one ob de predisposed men, kin I help it? Dar was Judas's fault, 'cause he was one ob de predisposed, 'so 'tended from de foundation ob de worl'." The retired preacher paused, and then continued, thoughtfully: "I don't want a religious discussion, Dave. It isn't the saddle now that I care so much about. It is that you told me a lie in saying that you didn't steal it. A lie once told always stands. You have lied to me, you scoundrel, and I believe it is my duty to have you arrested." "Parson, dar's jes' a certain amount of lies to be tole in dis worl', an' if I is one ob de men what is predisposed to tell one ob dese lies it is not my fault, an' I can't help it." "You go on now and get that saddle, or I'll swear a warrant for your arrest." "I'll do the best I kin, parson, but dar's jes' a certain amount of stole saddles ter be returned in dis worl'. If I is ob dis predisposed men, and I believe I is, you'll find yer saddle hangin' on de yard fence 'bout sundown this evenin'."

Real Wag.—In a certain town in the north of Scotland there was an old road-sweeper, rejoicing in the nickname of "Barmpan," who was reckoned somewhat of a wag in his way, and was exceedingly tenacious of his rights and proud of his position. It chanced that one day, whilst in the performance of his duties, he was injured by a passing vehicle. During the period of his enforced absence from his duties another man was appointed to sweep his portion of the streets. In a few weeks, however, Barmpan was able to be out and about his duties again. Some days after he had resumed work a friend happened to meet him, and ventured to ask how the substitute had performed his duties. "Weel," said Barmpan, considerately, "for ordinary, stranchforrit, doon-the-middle-o'-the-street wark he was no nae bad, but for the ornamental touches roon' a lamppost he was nae guid at a'!"

LIFE'S GREATEST ENEMY IS COLD

That the common "cold" is rightly named, inasmuch as it is generally due to the lowering of the resisting power of the organism by a chill, is asserted by a writer in the Dietic and Hygienic Gazette, who does not approve of what he calls "strenuous contemporary effort to belittle the nomenclature of our ancestors." An infective malady the cold is, of course, but the germs are abundant, and they get in their work only when there has been due preparation for them. Cold, we are assured, is almost invariably the primary cause of colds, while bacteria, which of late have been receiving their chief credit for these disturbances, are but secondary. Bacteria swarm most abundantly in warm weather, and yet winter is the chief season of colds. Summer colds usually follow some indiscretion, such as sitting on the cold ground. In such an instance fatigue may be placed as the first cause and cold second, but neither of these places can be given over bacteria, which, thus given the opportunity to do so, finally kick up the main part of the trouble. We read on:

COLD THE GREAT ENEMY

"Cold is, and always has been, the greatest enemy to life. Life swarms in the tropics, but leads a sorry existence at the poles. And this reminds us of the chief argument of the all-bacteria etiologists for colds. They will say immediately that Arctic explorers do not suffer from colds until they return to civilization, when 'they all come down with colds.' It may be that the aiders and abettors of cold in its production of disease are absent or in abeyance in the Arctic regions, but then who go into that region become so exhausted during their prolonged exposure to cold that they are rendered upon their return to warmer regions a more than easy prey to the bacteria. We have never read that explorers in the tropics succumbed to colds on their return to the temperate regions, even though the return is made in January. Even the Indians knew enough to keep themselves warm and especially to guard against refrigeration of the extremities. Ben Franklin tells us how they took this precaution even in time of war when it was too dangerous for them to have a smoking fire. They dug a pit in which they set fire to charred remains of burned trees, and slept with their legs dangling in the hole. A hunter in the Canadian woods who, notwithstanding his absence from civilization, took a severe cold, asked his sole companion, an Indian guide, how to keep from taking cold. He received the laconic reply, 'Keep your feet dry.' Even an Indian, whose skin has not been so softened to the effects of colds as have ours, appreciates that cold is the antecedent of colds, and takes precaution accordingly."

HOW TO CATCH A COLD

Undoubtedly, the writer concedes, over-exposure to high temperatures may also reduce our immunity to germs, but colds taken after being in over-heated rooms are probably due to going too abruptly into the cold, although super-heating renders an animal more susceptible to infection. Again, cold is really to blame for the results, for "bad air" is usually the result of economy in fuel. Poor ventilation is unknown in July. To quote further:

"An ideal room temperature for the sedentary is that between 66 and 70 degrees. Below these temperatures the heat-regulating apparatus of the body finds it necessary to close up the peripheral vessels more or less, internal congestion slowly begins, and the conditions for a cold are secured. As most of us are slow to respond to the intelligence of a temperature only a few degrees lower than that for comfort, though we are less obtuse to stronger thermic impulses, the temperature between 60 and 65 degrees has been well termed the danger zone, and undoubtedly more colds are acquired at these than at lower temperatures. We should be alive to our inner thermo-monitor, if we may coin the word, and respond, accordingly, even at the expense of a few hodfuls of coal, for often a cold and its consequences will cost more than a ton of fuel. For those of weakened circulation, and especially old people, the temperature must often be higher than 70 degrees in order to be on the safe side.

"Because cold is an enemy of the body, the body reacts against it as against any stimulant. But the body can go only so far, and cold, which at first is an excitant, may quickly become a despressant. When fresh and active we may laugh at, and laugh with cold; but when fatigued, or in bodily repose, we would better [illegible] beware its subtle approach.

Ye'll Be Visitors.—One of the best proofs of the healthiness of Edsell as a summer resort was given the other day in the witty reply of a native to the enquiries of a party of visitors. "Where," asked one of the company, "is the churchyard?" "The kirkyard?" repeated the strong, jovial native of this modern Auburn—"loveliest village of the plain"—"ye'll be visitors?" "Yes," was the reply, "and we should like to know where the churchyard is, for we cannot see it anywhere about the churches or in the village." "Weel, then," replied the man pawkily, "an' ye're real summer visitors, ye're come here tae live and get health, no tae dee. We has nae kirkyard i' the village, an' ye'll gang aboot a mile 'yont afore you get the place whar we lay the centenarians an' auld folks of eighty or ninety."

Very Important.—Why are ladies permitted to "propose" every fourth year? is a question which many ask themselves. It is stated that about the year 1288 the Scottish Parliament ordained that "during the reign of her maist blessit Majesty (Margaret) every maiden lady, of both high and low degree, shall have liberty to speak to the man she likes. If he refuses to take her to be his wife he shall be mulct in the sum of one hundred pounds Scots (£8 6s. 8d. stg.), or less, as his estate may be, except he can make it appear that he be betrothed to another woman, then he shall be free." It would appear that after Queen Margaret's death another Act of Parliament was passed, and this Act granted females the right, if they choose, to "propose" every fourth year.

Every man and woman is a volume if you know how to read them.

Every man is a missionary now and for ever, for good or for evil, whether he intends or designs it or not.

He is but the counterfeit of a man who hath not the life of a man.

An inconstant man is despicable; a faithless woman is base.

CLOCKS OF NEW YORK

Ingenious Mechanism Used to Chime Hours by Day and Flash at Night.

One does not have to go to Europe to find wonderful clocks. New York City is full of them. Every one who passes Madison Square takes a look at one of the most remarkable examples of the clockmaker's genius to be found anywhere. When it was installed clockmakers said that it was something of an epoch in the history of great public timepieces. At that time, in 1909, there were only three dial faces of larger dimensions in the world. They were the clock of St. Bombart at Milanes, Belgium, with a dial of thirty-three feet; St. Peter's, Zurich, and the big clock on the Colgate factory in Jersey City.

The Metropolitan Tower clock runs entirely by electricity and its makers have refused to reveal some of the intricate devices used in its construction. The Metropolitan Tower stands 700 feet 3 inches above the street level and the great clock is about midway. Its four dial faces, pointing due east, west, north, and south, are each 26 feet 6 inches in dameter. After much experimenting to find a material which would be absolutely waterproof and would afford the minimum of contraction and expansion under weather stress the dials were constructed of two inch squares of concrete. This material had been previously tested on a clock in the estate of the Duke of Westminster in England. The figures marking the hours on the dials of the Metropolitan clock are four feet high. The minute hand is 17 feet long and 22 feet from centre to point.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Some friends of ours who live in a house built in the days when sunshine and ventilation were not so much sought after in house building as they are nowadays, have recently had an extra window cut in one of their rooms. This window faces toward the east. Hitherto that side of the room had been a blank wall, and consequently the room had never had any morning sun. Unless you have ever known a similar case you can scarcely imagine the difference which the window made in that room.

I went in there the other morning and it was difficult to believe that that cheery, light-flooded, sun-warmed room was the same cheerless place, in which I had so often sat with my friend.

And as I sat there, bathed in the good sunlight, the thought came to me—how many of us are living in rooms with blank walls where windows might be.

For instance, there is that rich old maid whom I know—perhaps you know her too. She has two cats, a maid, a fine home, and her money. These are the well-built and always well-washed windows on the southern exposure of her heart home. She also has half a dozen jolly nephews and nieces for whom she had no use and whom she almost never sees. The interest and happiness these young people might bring into her life are the sunshine which beats vainly on the southern and eastern side of her heart home. For, you see, she has no windows on these exposures.

And then there is Mrs. C. Mrs. C. is forty-five. Her only daughter has married and gone to live in a home of her own, a thousand miles away. So that window through which much of her life's sunshine came is of necessity darkened, and Mrs. C. is very lonesome and thinks life is a cheerless place, but how many other windows Mrs. C. might cut through to make her heart home more cheerful. There is the charity work for the poor of the town, in which her friends have vainly tried to interest her. There is the Sunshine Society which she has often been urged to join. There is the crippled lady across the way. There is Mrs. C.'s husband who, to tell the truth, seems to me to be decidedly an unnecessary window so far as she is concerned. I know that any of these interests would bring a flood of sunshine into Mrs. C.'s life, is she would but cut through some of these eastern and southern windows and "let the blessed sunshine in."

Congenial friendships spoiled by misunderstanding, opportunities for social service neglected, chances for culture and self-education disregarded, the sweetest relations of life undeveloped—these are a few of the blank walls that keep out sunshine from our lives.

Are there any in your home?

Butter And Eggs Tumbled In Price At To-day's Market

Eggs Were Plentiful and Sold at From 26 Cents Up—Pork was a Little Higher Following Slight Advance in Live Hogs

POTATOES STILL $2.00

Eggs almost went begging this morning and apparent attempts to maintain fairly strong prices were futile. Along one row and at short distances, quotations ranged from 33 and 32 cents down to 26 and 27 cents. Upstairs in the hall, eggs represented the bulk of the offerings and basket after basket along the aisles brought pleasure to those who saw the price coming more and more within their means.

Butter tumbled, too, most of the sales being made around 32 and 33 cents a pound.

Poultry was at a premium and it would seem that the most of the chickens, ducks and turkeys have been treated to the hatchet.

"These eggs are strictly fresh," stated one woman, who was asking 27 cents. They have been gathered since last Saturday."

A young grocer said to a farmer who wanted $2.00 for potatoes: "There is not much profit in them at that price. Just yesterday a woman lit on me for asking $2 a bag and out here they pay it without a murmur."

But just a few minutes earlier an elderly woman expressed her opinion of a farmer who asked $2.00. "That's the meanest man I know," she said for the benefit of those around her. "Two dollars a bag, the idea. I have to go out working for my money, and I have a little plot of my own, but next summer I'm going to plant potatoes in it and send him some just to remind him of his smallness."

20 Cents a Bag.

Another farmer stated that two years ago he had received only 20 cents a bag for potatoes and to-day he sold his load at $2 a bag. A woman rather inelegantly asked: "How much are your Murphies?" The farmer mechanically replied $2, in a tone that implied that consumers should be glad it was not $2.25.

"Oh, you're all alike."

"Do you want a bag this morning?"

"Faith I don't," she answered, as if she had a cellar full at home. Probably she has.

Pork Was Higher.

Pork was a little firmer to-day.

"The price of live hogs are up you know," a farmer said. "You can't buy pork in town at our price anyway, and as soon as we quit coming in when the warm weather comes, the price will go up in town. I'll bet."

Butter was fairly plentiful, but there was not much of a surplus. The supply was just sufficient to get away from the 40 cent mark.

When Greek Meets Greek.

One of the amusing features of the Saturday market is to listen to a retired farmer making his purchases. He generally knows whom he is dealing with and although some state that they are treated to the same high prices the city people pay, still some partiality is surely shown at times.

"I'm going to buy butter at thirty cents, and then I'm going home," said a Smith farmer to a friend.

"How much is your butter," he asked a woman whom he seemed to know.

"Thirty-three cents."

"Oh, pshaw! I can get it for thirty cents over yonder."

"You'd better get it there, then. You don't want butter, anyway."

"Sure I do. We send all our milk to the factory. You'd better give me a few pounds at thirty."

But the woman would not hear of it. He may have bought it at 30 cents but his first attempt was a failure.

At eleven o'clock there was at least one turkey, the others must have been under the counter. On the whole the market brought a little hope to the consuming public and the several declines were certainly welcome.

Shooting Accident Proved Fatal

Lakefield Youth Succumbs to Injuries Received on Hunting Trip

As a result of having been accidentally shot in the left leg whilst hunting at Lakefield yesterday, Domenico Marchegiano, better known by the name of White, passed away at St. Joseph's Hospital during the night from shock and loss of blood. The aputation of his leg was carried out successfully, but owing mainly to the loss of blood, the unfortunate young man was too weak to withstand the operation.

The deceased youth, who was only twenty years of age, came to Canada about eighteen months ago and since that time has resided in Lakefield. He is survived by one half brother, Patrick White and a half sister, Margaret Bianca White, both of Lakefield. Mr. Tom Minnecolo of this city is an uncle.

The funeral cortage will proceed to St. Peter's Cathedral to-morrow afternoon at 3.30 and afterwards to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

CONSERVATIVE "ELECTOR" ON POST OFFICE CHANGE

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In reading the columns of the press of the 21st ult., I notice the announcement of the removal of Mr. A. H. Stratton as Postmaster, and that Mr. James Edgar had been appointed to his position. According to the reasons given for dismissal it is claimed that Mr. Stratton was removed for offensive partizanship, when everyone knows that Mr. Stratton has never been at any time of his life what might be called an offensive partizan in working in political elections to any extent.

I have voted Conservative all my life—I am not a Conservative any longer, according to present day Conservatism. I have had a good many dealings with the Peterborough Postmaster, and while, like humanity generally, he has his faults, his faults are not in being at all discourteous to the public or in neglecting his public duties, and in a business way I have always found him to be a gentleman. If Mr. Burnham's idea of being a gentleman is the way that he is treating his political friends in Peterborough, at the present time, he is not possessed of the first instincts of a gentleman—he is covered with a very thin veneer.

If a Postmaster did interest himself to some extent in a political campaign, would there be any great crime in that? I know Mr. Harry Rogers, the late Postmaster, almost as well as Mr. Burnham, himself, who was his immediate bed-fellow, and I know there was no greater partizan in Peterborough while he was here, and I know that he never, at any time, endeavoured to hide his political opinions and sympathies.

Does it not seem strange that "old age pension Burnham," who, it is said, is preparing to join himself to a pension, is pretty far short of material for establishing a charge of partizanship, when he recommends, in this case, a removal for offensive partizanship?

Then, if the Postmaster was to be removed are there no more worthy individuals amongst the Conservatives in Peterborough than the appointed Edgar? Who is he? Where did he come from? What claims has he upon the respectable elements of the Conservative party for a position? It may be that Mr. Burnham thinks that the Conservative Party are of no use to him, but he will find out when the next nomination comes round, and when he next appeals to the Conservative Party, that he will find more anti-Burnham Conservatives than he will find willing workers. If Mr. Burnham thinks that Mr. Edgar was the prime mover in getting him the nomination, and taking it from Mr. Kendry, he was mistaken. There were others who helped him and who are very sorry for it now.

Does Mr. Burnham not require the united efforts of the Conservative Party. Let Mr. Burnham resign his seat in the House to-day and let there be a contest between the same two gentlemen and on the same issues and Mr. Burnham will see what opinion the people of the City of Peterborough have of his actions, his votes and his doings since he was given a chance to misrepresent the Riding, as well as the party to which he nominally belongs.

Mr. Burnham has always been an anonymous scribbler to the "Review and "Times". Anyone can tell his writing who knows the man, and if he thinks he can, like the ostrich, hide himself under a nom de plume he is greatly mistaken. His "special despatches to the Review" and his "political correspondence to the Peterborough Times," dictated, or written by himself, bear mighty easy marks of identification—not only on account of the language, but the crazy sentiments.

I have been a Conservative all my life. I have never voted any other way than Conservative. I will never do so again, and I was not an applicant for any office, and am not now.

Thanking you for your space, I am
Yours truly,
"Elector."

A Thousand Miles Through Snowdrifts

A Trip of Three HUPMOBILE Cars From Detroit to New York in the Dead of Winter.

The start was made from Windsor—the Canadian town just across the river from Detroit—a few minutes before nine o'clock the night of December 27. It was utterly impossible to secure, from any source, any reports whatever of road conditions, much less reliable reports. The snows were so deep, the cold so severe, that little if any travel was being done through the country districts.

But New York was the goal, and it would remain the goal until cold utterly defeated the members of the party or drifted snow rendered further battling wholly ineffective.

So the cars were off, the drivers following the road as best they might by the glare of the gas lamps.

The cars were equipped with all the impedimenta necessary on such a trip, and the men were warmly dressed, hooded and masked against the biting winds and driving snow which were expected—an expectation, by the way, which was generously fulfilled long before New York was reached.

The battle with the snow began almost immediately, the half-cleared streets of the town were left behind, but it was the merest foretaste of what was yet in store.

Suffragettes Make Extensive Onslaughter on Windows—Their Effort was Made to Cripple Trade

LOSS WAS HEAVY

London, March 2.—Because the coal miners had been able to gain Government recognition of their grievances by threatening the business of the country, the suffragettes late yesterday also entered on a policy of menace to trade. And they carried it out suddenly and with an order that resulted in heavy financial losses, brought consternation to the merchants of the most prosperous shopping district of the city and paralyzed business at the busiest hour of the day. The police were taken completely unawares by the onslaught of the women, and, before they were able to muster, the streets were covered with shattered plate glass that once had been the show windows of stores.

It was a window-breaking expedition solely, and a thoroughly organized one. Hundreds of windows in many of the most famous shops of the world and in several of the Government offices and clubs were wrecked by the suffragettes. The damage done will aggregate many thousands of pounds. The losses, however, will not all fall upon the shopkeepers, as many of the show windows, especially the costly ones, were covered by insurance against breakage.

One hundred and fifteen women were dragged to the police stations by the police or excited and indignant merchants. Many others, however, escaped. All those arrested were released during the course of the evening on bail, coupled with promises that they would refrain from further activities in window-wrecking.

Some of the shopkeepers who saw the storm coming were able to close their shutters and barricade their shop doors against the infuriated suffragettes. The trouble centered about Trafalgar Square, where the big steamship companies have their passenger offices, and the windows of several of which were shattered, and ranged along the Strand, eastward and westward, and up Regent street, Piccadilly and Oxford streets, where are situated the fashionable jewelry and drygoods houses.

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the veteran of many a suffragette battle, struck the first blow. In an automobile, accompanied by Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Tukes, she drove up to the Premier's residence in Downing street at 6 o'clock last evening. The three women quickly jumped out of the machine and drew out stones concealed in their muffs. Simultaneously three missiles aped through the air, followed instantly by still another one and four windows crashed in before the police, who are constantly on guard, could reach the women. The trio were arrested, but even while being led to the station house they managed to heave missiles through the windows of the Colonial Office.

AMENDMENTS DEFEATED.

Premier Borden Votes Down Three Liberal Proposals.

Ottawa, March 2.—This was a Parliamentary polling day. Within an hour of the meeting this afternoon three divisions had been recorded. The Government brought to pass their third readings the bills for aid to highways, for the appointment of a tariff commission, and for the handling of grain. They were met with determined opposition in their platform. Two amendments were submitted to the highways bill, one by Sir Wilfrid and the other by Mr. Macdonald, both of which were voted down; and one by the Liberal leader to the tariff commission bill, which was likewise treated. When the grain bill was reached Sir Wilfrid announced that several amendments would be submitted, each requiring a division, and the Government abandoned its efforts to get the measure through yesterday.

The amendments and their respective fates were as follows:

Moved by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, "That all moneys voted under the act for the improvement of highways shall be apportioned among the different provinces of the Dominion, according to the population of said provinces as estimated by the last census for the time being." Defeated on a vote of 73 to 50—a Conservative majority of 23.

Moved by Mr. Macdonald, "that the clause in the bill authorising the Minister of Railways on his own initiative to undertake the construction of any new highway or improvement of any existing highway, and expend in such improvement or construction the whole or any part of the sums voted by Parliament for the road subsidy to any province, be struck out. Defeated on a vote of 85 to 52—a Government majority of 33.

Moved by Sir Wilfrid Laurier: "That the members of the proposed tariff commission shall be selected without any regard to the views of any political party on the tariff or any other political question, but solely by reason of their fitness, by character, training and experience, to effectually and impartially discharge the duties assigned to them under the act." Defeated on a vote of 81 to 46—a Government majority of 35.

YUAN APOLIGIZES.

Sends Note to the Legations Regretting the Riots.

Pekin, March 2.—Yuan Shi Kai last evening issued a note addressed to the foreign missionaries, merchants and other residents of the capital, in the following terms:

"The disturbance in the capital was quite unexpected by me and has filled me with sorrow. One of my chief duties is to preserve order in the capital, and in this I have been hitherto uniformly successful. Unto you who are strangers in a strange land I wish particularly to convey my sincere regret for the occurrence. Every measure of precaution has been taken now to prevent a recurrence."

In the vicinity of the legations everything is quiet now, but a big fire broke out near the north gate and some distant shooting was heard.

A body of 1,500 mutinous troops commandeered a train yesterday and departed for Honan.

The disturbance caused great surprise among the foreigners here. The only foreigner who has fallen a victime was a Japanese. Owing to the real cause of the riots being unknown, opinions are divided in the foreign quarter as to the outlook for the future. Some of the most optimistic consider that a new situation has been created in order to provide Yuan Shi Kai with an excuse for not proceeding to Nanking at the request of the Republicans. Consequently it is thought that the disorder is not likely to spread.

Hebert Will Press Appeal.

Montreal, March 2.—The lawyers for Eugene Hebert, one of the principals in the famous marriage annulment case, had an interview with their client yesterday morning, and as a result of it the first move in the appeal procedure was taken in the courts here.

Hebert told L. J. Lefevre that he was dissatisfied with his position and was anxious to appeal against Judge Charbonneau's finding. He said that he was willing to go as far as he could to secure a definite decision on the matter.

George Grossmith, Sr., Dead.

Folkestone, Eng., March 2.—George Grossmith, sr., one of the best known actors and public entertainers, died here yesterday morning in his 65th year.

He started his career as a police court reporter. For several years he confined himself to giving humorous recitations, but then went on to the regular stage. He made such a hit that he was engaged by D'Oyly Carte to play the leading parts in most of the Gilbert & Sullivan comic operas.

Sir Clarke, counsel for Mr. Martin, said he had used words which carried an imputation he had not intended and therefore he would express regret and would bear the costs of the action. This satisfied Mr. Ingleby.

Death Of Statesman

Edward Blake Passes Away in Toronto—Second Premier of Ontario

END UNEXPECTED

Toronto, March 2.—Hon. Edward Blake, distinguished scholar, lawyer and statesman, died at his residence 669 Jarvis street, shortly before seven o'clock last night. Although he had been in failing health for a long period, his death, despite his old age, was entirely unexpected and tragic. A few moment before he expired he was carried from his bedroom by attendants and placed in a chair in his library, where he had spent many hours each day during his illness. While in a sitting position he collapsed and had succumbed before aid of any kind could be administered.

In the study at the time of death were his widow, his son, Hume Blake, and his daughter, Mrs. George M. Wrong. Hon. S. H. Blake, his brother, was immediately notified.

Five years ago Hon. Edward Blake became an invalid, and since that time had to be wheeled about in a chair. While in England he was seized by a paralytic stroke and had never er recovered from it. It was two weeks ago he became seriously ill, necessitating his removal from the library to the bedroom. However, the indisposition seemed to last only a few days, for on Sunday he had rallied sufficiently to be taken back to the library, where he longed to gaze upon the street, with his armchair standing near the window. Several nurses were in attendance during the past two weeks.

"The death of Edward Blake means the removal of a great figure from Canadian life," said Chancellor Sir John A. Boyd. "In earlier years he was easily the leader in the profession of law, and afterwards he took an equally commanding position in political life, first in Canada and then in the Imperial Parliament.

"A great man has passed, but his memory and influence will not die."

Hon. Edward Blake was born in the Township of Adelaide, Middlesex County, on Oct. 13, 1833. He was the son of William Hume Blake and Catherine Hume, granddaughter of William Hume, M.P., of Humewood, Wicklow County, Ireland. He came from Ireland in 1832, intending to settle upon a farm in Upper Canada. He soon, however, found himself unfitted for the rough life of a pioneer, and took up his residence in Toronto. There he became a distinguished member of the legal profession, and upon his election to the Parliament of United Canada in 1848, proved one of the leading orators of that assembly. He was appointed Solicitor-General of Upper Canada under the Baldwin-Lafontaine administration, and subsequently became the first chancellor of Upper Canada.

Mr. Blake was educated in Toronto. In 1867-8 he made a tour abroad, when Europe was stirred by new democratic and national sentiments. He was graduated from Upper Canada College with the Governor-General's prize. He obtained his degree of bachelor of arts, with a silver medal in classics, from the University of Toronto in 1854, and his degree of master of arts in 1858. In 1856 he was called to the Bar and commenced the practice of law as a partner of Mr. S. M. Jarvis. Subsequently, with his brother, Hon. S. H. Blake, he founded the firm which still bears the family name. He was appointed a Queen's Counsel in 1864.

Hon. Edward Blake entered upon his political life in the first year of the Canadian Confederation. One year sufficed to make him the leader of the party in the Ontario Legislature and four to make him Premier of the province. Four times he was invited to assume the leadership of the Liberal members of the Federal Parliament before he finally consented in 1880. Had he accepted the offer made to him in 1873, he, instead of Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, might have been the first Liberal Premier of Canada.

Mr. Blake accepted an invitation to become a member of the British House of Commons, and at the general election of 1892 was elected to represent the Irish constituency of South Longford, with Mr. Justin McCarthy, the historian, as his colleague in North Longford.

In 1894 Mr. Blake was elected a member of the executive committee of the Irish Parliamentary party.

He was re-elected for South Longford by acclamation in 1895, and, as his legal abilities had attracted much attention in England, was elected in 1899 as a member of the Parliamentary committee, which investigated the affairs of South Africa and the causes of the Transvaal raid. His cross-examination of the late Cecil Rhodes was described as a "masterpiece of work." Finally after sitting in the Imperial Parliament for fifteen years, Mr. Blake resigned in July, 1907, and shortly afterward returned to Toronto to spend the closing years of his life.

DEFENCE LEAGUE MEETS.

New Organization Will Have Its Centre in Toronto.

Ottawa, March 2.—The first annual general meeting of the Canadian Defence League was held in the Senate committee-room yesterday and was attended by Senators, members of the Commons, military officers, educators, and other representing all the provinces except New Brunswick, Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island.

Hon. P. Landry, Speaker of the Senate, presided over the greater part of the two sessions. The organizing committee reported progress to date and surrendered their trust, being succeeded by a strong official list. Lord Strathcona is patron; Speaker Landry heads the list of honorary presidents; Lieut.-Col. W. Hamilton was chosen president; R. E. Kingsford of Toronto, first vice-president; Major W. J. Brown of Aylmer, Ont., honorary, and R. S. Hudson, joint manager of the Canada Permanent Mortgage Corporation, Toronto, honorary treasurer.

The head office of the league was fixed at Toronto, and a strong general council was selected, which convened immediately after adjournment and selected an executive committee for the management of an aggressive campaign during the year.

Amongst the incidents of the day were the reading of a resolution passed unanimously by the Cavalry Association favoring universal training for Canada, and an address by Benjamine Saulte, the Canadian historian, on the results achieved during a hundred years under the old French-Canadian system.

WANTS TO SECEDE.

Manitoba Man Points Out Danger of Injuring the West

Winnipeg, March 2.—The sensation of the present session of the Manitoba Legislature came last night when William Molloy, Liberal member for La Verandrye, asserted that he would support a resolution looking to the separation of Western Canada from the eastern part of the Dominion.

He charged that the attitude of Eastern Canada, as evidenced in its vote on reciprocity, was inimical to Western Canadian interests, and gave it as his belief that a few years would see a decided sentiment in the west for separation.

"No greater blow," the member for La Verrandrye went on to say, "had ever been dealt Western Canada than by the rejection of reciprocity."

"The people of Eastern Canada have deliberately set themselves to injure Western Canada, and in the course of ten years there will be such an agitation in Western Canada against their binding acts that nothing but separation will suffice," he said.

His remarks were loudly applauded among Liberal members, and many in the galleries.

The Coal Strike Situation.

London, March 2.—Attempts to reconcile the opposing forces in the coal strike were suspended yesterday until Monday, when both the owners and the miners will again see Premier Asquith and his Cabinet colleagues. Should it then be evident that the extremists refuse to abate their rigid demands, legislative action will be swift.

Prime Minister Asquith, in a statement in the House of Commons last evening, said that the coal owners in practically the whole of England and in the north of Wales had accepted the proposals of the Government; that in south Wales and in Scotland the owners declined the proposition, while the miners have rejected it because they were unwilling to submit the rates for a minimum wage to any form of revision. He hoped to be able to make a further statement to the House on Monday.

The Premier yesterday invited the miners' executive committee to meet the coal owners, but the men declined, saying they had nothing to discuss.

The miners' delegates are now returning to their respective districts, and will ask instructions as to how they are to deal with the new proposals of the Government. Even should the men approve of the submission of the schedule of minimum rates of wages to discussion, the strike could not be arrested under a week, and probably it would last another fortnight.

Exhibition on Wheels.

Montreal, March 2.—A Canadian National Exhibition on Wheels is the method adopted by the Canadian Home Market Association of Montreal and Toronto to promote the "Made in Canada" idea in Western Canada. The exhibition will take the form of a special train, which will be operated over the lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the west from May 15 to July 1 next.

The train will make stops varying from one hour to 36 hours at about 100 different towns and cities west of the great lakes. The interior of the cars will be arranged so as to permit of the display of products made by Canadian artisans, attractively and compactly as possible.

It is planned to show products of about 100 representative Canadian industries.

Textile Industry for Guelph.

Guelph, March 2.—It was learned yesterday that two more factories are privately negotiating for locations in the east end of the city. One is a textile concern, and rumor connects it with a present factory that may be taken over and enlarged into one of the largest textile plants in Canada. The other factory, whose promoters are making a deal with the city, would employ two or three hundred hands.

Resigns After Twenty Years.

Murderer Through Heredity.

Montreal March 2.—It was learned yesterday that the defence in the case of John Cummings, the Scotchman who shot his wife in the street last November, will be a plea of hereditary insanity.

Cummings has already been examined by Dr. Burgess, the alienist in charge of the Protestant Asylum for the Insane at Verdun, and it is believed that the lawyers for the defence have decided to enter a plea of insanity on the strength of the conclusions he arrived at after examining the murderer.

London Methodists for Union.

London, March 2.—The vote on church union by Methodist official boards in London—and the majority have ballotted—is strongly in favor of the proposals. Judging by the figures so far, it will somewhat exceed the estimate of "five to one in favor," made in Toronto a few days ago on the strength of the results then reported to the offices of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches.

JEFFS SURPRISED MUTTS WON BY 9 GOALS TO 8

Interesting Game at Brock Street Rink Last Night Resulted in a Win for Junior Forwards and Intermediate Defence---Jeffs Were in Front Nearly all the way.

The Jeffs upset the dope last night in the exhibition game at Brock St. Rink by beating the Mutts 9 to 8, after an exciting battle that was close all the way. It was figured by many fans that the Intermediate forward line, with the assistance of Denison on the attack, would prove too much of an argument for the Jeffs, but the great goal-keeping of Derocher, backing defence work by Bond and Bearss, and the combination and aggressiveness of the Bear Cat forwards turned the tide the other way. The Jeffs were in front nearly all the way with the exception of one stage towards the end of the first half, when the Mutts led the procession to the tune of 4 to 3. At half-time it was 5 to 4, in favour of the Jeffs, who managed to maintain their lead until the finish. In fact they were away 9 to 6 on one occasion, but the Mutts came back with two goals before the final whistle. It was a hard-fought, exciting game with the players going their limit all through and the three hundred fans present found the contest thoroughly enjoyable.

The Mutts adopted individual tactics throughout; Kelly, Giroux, Park and Denison all contributing some effective rushing. On the other hand, the junior forwards played combination all through, getting away with some very pretty team work. They came down three or four in line and passed nicely, working in for their shots, while Bearss gave them great assistance on the attack by his rushing, and Bond and Derocher were a hard pair to beat. Derocher picked off a host of shots as usual.

Stan Cook refereed the game satisfactorily.

The teams were:

Summary—

1—Jeffs, Bearss.
2—Jeffs, Hall.
3—Mutts—Derocher
4—Jeffs, Bearss.
5—Mutts, Park.
6—Mutts, Park.
7—Mutts, Park.
8—Jeffs, Hall.
9—Jeffs, Clancy.

Half-time—

10—Jeffs, Weir.

TRENT VALLEY SEMI-FINAL HERE MONDAY NIGHT

There will undoubtedy be a big crowd at the Brock street rink on Monday night when T.A.S. and the Lakefield team meet in the first game of the Trent Valley League semi-finals. The Abstainers have played good hockey this season and are deserving of better support than they have been having. The fans will see a game worth while watching on Monday night, as the teams look very evenly balanced. It will be a battle all the way with the T.A.S. trying to pile up lead enough to carry them through the return game at Lakefield on Wednesday night. The contest is announced for 8.15 o'clock and there is every prospect of fast ice.

NEWS FROM THE DIFFERENT BASEBALL TRAINING CAMPS

San Antonio, Texas, Feb. 28.—The Athletic Yanigans and the San Antonio Bronchos play here this afternoon in the first game of the season. Salmon, a southpaw, and Gipe and Brown, right handers, will do the pitching for the Mack men, while Egan and Kilhullen will divide honours behind the plate. Connie Mack has divided his squad into two teams, playing morning and afternoon games.

"Hal" Chase, the Orange, Mass., school first-sacker, has become a batting hero. He hit safely every time he stepped to the plate yesterday, getting three singles, two doubles and a home run. He also played the bag right up to the handle.

From the programme mapped out to Manager Mack, stiff practice is looked for from now on.

MATTY ON HIS WAY SOUTH.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 28.—The New York Giants' regulars passed here to-day and will join Manager McGraw and the recruits to-night at Marlin, Texas. In the party here are: Mathewson, Doyle, Crandall, Wiltse, Merkle, Herzog, Fletcher, Devore, Murray, Snodgrass and Becker.

TOOK OFF SIX POUNDS IN ONE DAY.

Columbus, Ga., Feb. 28.—The first day's work afield proved to the Reds that Manager Hank O'Day is no easy task master. He set the men a terrific pace, but they followed willingly. Larry McLean took off six pounds in a single day.

THE TIGERS HARD AT WORK.

Monroe, La., Feb. 28.—With the entire town disinfected because of the meningitis scare, the Detroit Tigers, who started their preliminary spring training here, are ready to slip out of town at a minute's notice, should there be any chance of quarantine. Among the recruits spring training yesterday was "Tex" Westervil of San Antonio, who broke his knee cap during spring training last year. He showed up excellently on third base. The accident has not affected his speed.

"SLOW DOWN" WHITE SOX COMMAND.

Waco, Texas, Feb. 28—The first wail of woe came out of the White Sox camp to-day when, after two days' practice, Manager Jimmy Callahan gave an order for the youngsters to "slow down." Pitcher Mogridge was out of business to-day as the result of a spiking accident. Mogridge was stealing second while recruit Peters was trying hard to make the baserunners hug the bag. The recruits to-day "did up" the manager in a series of hand ball games.

WILLIE KEELER IN CHARGE OF BROOKLYN.

New York, Feb. 28.—A collection of Brooklyn players headed by the veteran, Willie Keeler, a recent Brooklyn acquisition, started to-day for the training grounds at Hot Springs, Ark. Phelps and Moran, new catchers were in the party.

Keeler and Phelps were with Toronto last season.

JUNIORS VS. INTERMEDIATES

There may be a game next week between the Peterborough Intermediates and Junior O.H.A. teams. There are many fans who would like to see Captain Parks' team and the Bear Cats come together, and it is possible that a game may be arranged for Tuesday or Wednesday night.

Gordon Bricker, goal-keeper for the Eatons, champions of the Senior O. H. A. He is said to be without an equal as a guardian of the net.

Referee—Sproule of Toronto.

Eugene Corri, the best known boxing referee in England.

PETERBORO LOSE TO LINDSAY BY 9 SHOTS

The Lindsay curlers have come and gone, but like the Caesar of old, they did not conquer. Although they did not win their match, they won the admiration and esteem of the local curling fraternity by reason of the sportsmanlike spirit which they showed and the excellence of the brand of curling which they furnished their opponents on the ice and the spectators who viewed the contest from the gallery.

The occasion of the Lindsay curlers' visit to the Electric City was the competition for the Lindsay-Peterborough Cup. One half of the competition was played in each town concurrently, with four rinks in action in each case. The redoubtable skip Flavelle of Lindsay, who figured recently in the big jewellery hunt at the Winnipeg Bonspiel, was on hand to defend the Scugogville right of possession to the silverware. The game between skips Flavelle and Foot furnished one of the most exciting events of the season. It was full of spectacular features from the time the first rock crossed the hog line until the finish, and it was only by several well-placed shots towards the end that enabled the notorious veteran of the broom and stone to emerge from the fray with one shot to the credit of his rink. Skip Foot gave them a run for their money, as also did J. H. Connal's rink, who put the crimp on the Lindsay rink, skipped by T. Burke, with a 23-12 score in his favour. Skip Davidson's rink showed splendid form, and in action with their worthy opponents, Skip Knowlson's rink, they showed their ability to play the "roarin'" game to advantage. The score, 11-10 in favour of the former, indicates the closeness of the game.

Peterborough in all four games stole a lead of four shots from the Lindsayites.

Following is a summary of the game:

Peterborough.	Lindsay.
A. Archibald	J. Turner
D. Campbell	J. Anderson
C. N. Brown	T. Gage
H. Foot (skip)—14	J. D. Flavelle (skip)—15
W. T. Hall	C. Hall
J. H. Renwick	J. L. Primeau
W. J. Thompson	D. Brown
J. H. Connal (skip)—33	T. Burke (skip)—42
L. F. Hall	Judge McMillan
W. Taylor	A. S. Gregory
S. T. Medd	H. Simson
D. Davidson (skip)—11	J. M. Knowlson (skip)—10
G. Hill	W. Roesigk
J. W. McDermid	P. Campbell
T. F. Matthews	F. Carew
W. G. Ferguson (skip)—10	R. Butler (skip)—17
Total for Peterborough 58
Total for Lindsay 54

Majority for Peterborough..... 4

In the Lindsay end of the competition the local curlers were less fortunate, losing the round by 13 shots. The games, which were played last evening in Lindsay were keenly contested, ad it was only by several lucky shots, augmented by their familiarity with the uncertain ice upon which they were played, that enabled the Scugogville aggregation to pull out with a lead of 13 shots. This cinches Lindsay's rights to the possession of the Lindsay-Peterborough Cup for another year at least, having won the round by a lead of nine shots. The skips representing Peterborough's interests at Lindsay were: A. Moore, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, J. H. Giroux, T. Lang. The Lindsay skips were G. A. Little, L. V. O'Connor, E. H. Cuthbert and W. Reesor.

The standing in the local Bonspiel is as follows:

3rd round, Primary — Messrs. Thompson, Foote, Renwick, McDermid, J. H. Ferguson and Lang.

Consolation, 2nd round — Medd, Read, Sturgeon, Campbell, Waddell, Fitzgerald, Harstone, Taylor.

OTTAWA BALL CLUB AFTER GOOD PITCHER

OTTAWA, FEB. 28.—The Ottawa Club is negotiating for the purchase of Pitcher Harry Draper from the Roanoke Club of the Virginia League, together with an infielder, Draper is a high-class moundman and twirled in thirty-one games last year, winning the majority. The price asked by the Roanoke club is stiff, but Manager Frank Shaughnessy of the local club states he is worthy every cent of the money.

"Draper pitched for me last year," stated Shaughnessy this morning, "and would have led the Virginia League had I not been compelled to use him every other game in the outfield. A pitcher cannot show his best working one day in the box and the next as a fielder. It is wonderful what a rest will do for the finger. Draper is a good hitter and this together with the fact were short handed most of the s Roanoke compelled me to s m him out in the field. Just look up Spalding's guide and you will see where he took part in 69 games and hit 254, which is quite a record for a pitcher. If we get him up here, I would allow him to pitch only. He has a wonderful spitter, and last year on account of the extra work he was doing, I did not allow him to use it till the end of the season. That's when he won most of his games. He is the cleanest cut boy you ever saw and I'll bet a year up in this climate will make a big leaguer out of him. He has only been out one year."

The Ottawa club is also arranging for the purchase of a catcher of some rep. One backstop of exceptional merit was offered the club at a bargain price, but he is erratic in his habits, and Shaughnessy passed him up. On this point the big manager has some very pertinent remarks to make.

"Booze and baseball have long since been separated and the man who drinks during the playing season, lasts about a minute. As a matter of fact, to keep step with the class of men playing ball nowadays, a man has to be physically perfect. Teh rough neck and booze fighter so prominent in the game ten years ago, is tabooed by the majors right down to the Class D leagues. The first thing a manager ascertains when looking up a youngster's record with a view of acquiring him, are his habits. The ambitious ball player of today knows he cannot deliver the goods and drink, and as a result the percentage of total abstainers among professional players is greatly in excess of the boosers. Then a contract calls for good behaviour and perfect condition, and once a player is released for breaking these rules, it hangs to him all his days and eventually runs him out of the game."

Keenan Wants Job As Manager

LONDON, MARCH 2.—There is no doubt but that the fans will miss Joe Jo Kennan this summer. Joe was a favourite with the crowd, although at times his work was a little off colour. He was a good batter, however, and often when he made a few misplays around the third corner he would even up by smashing out a two-bagger and bringing in a couple of runs.

However, the management has practically decided that Joe must go, and he will appear with one of the other teams in the league. The Hamilton management was after him, and if a satisfactory trade can be made a deal will likely be put through. Joe has been working hard this winter and is keeping in good condition. He expects to put in a better season than last year, and many of his friends believe that he will. At the end of last season he was playing good ball, and he would have been manager of the team again this season had he kept out of the Minkinnick dispute.

A contract was tendered him by the local management this year, but as the salary offered was only $85 a month, Joe would not sign. The management now state that they will not have Joe at any price and will trade him off or sell him at the first opportunity.

Joe is making an effort to land the management of the Peterborough club, and the Lift Lock city could do a lot worse than hire him. He has the experience and the knowledge of the game, and is also a good man in teaching the young players. He will have to be given credit for giving London a good team last season, and although a poor start was made, Joe was quick to realise the weak spots and strengthen them with the right kind of men.

THREW RED PEPPER AT CANOE CLUB PLAYERS

(Toronto Star.)

Some pin-headed individual or individuals brought Orillia as a sporting town into disrepute last night by endeavouring to throw pepper into the eyes of the Toronto Canoe Club players. The fellow stationed himself at one side of the rink and handed it to the Paddlers when they passed him in the second half. Romeril, the rover, was the only man who got a fair enough dose to do any damage. For several moments after it was thrown in his face he could scarcely see the ice, and his eyes ran tears. He had them washed out with boracic acid after the game, Murray and Sidney both found their eyes smarting in a decidedly disconcerning way during the second half, but blamed it on the smoke, though at that there was no smoking in the building.

When the Canoe Club players left the dressing room after the game more pepper was thrown. Eddie Beeton, last year's captain, who was in front, got most of it and he had a fine time with his eyes for an hour. The same cur dashed a handful of the pepper into the eyes of Riley, the T. C. C. mascot and he startled the boys by standing on his head in every snow bank and by bumping blindly into pedestrians on the road home. At the hotel he was found to be almost completely blind and was taken to a drug store, where a cocaine solution was injected to ease the animal's pain.

The sorest pair of men over the pepper incident were George Moore, the Orillia team's manager and Mr. Jupp, father of Lovering Jupp, one of the players.

"If pepper were thrown on the T. C. C. boys, I'll run the blighter down if it takes a month of Sundays, and I'll have him in jail," said Moore. "It is hard for me to believe that such a cowardly thing was done, but if it was, I'll find the man or men who did it."

WILLIE KEELER HAS SIGNED UP

There is not a case in baseball parallel to that of Willie Keeler. Last week, for the third time in nineteen year, Willie signed a contract with the Brooklyn club. This time the veteran will go South with the Dodgers to the Hot Springs to coach the youngsters and some of the veterans of the squad, for that matter, in how to reach first base by way of "hitting them where they ain't," buntation, bases on balls or any other old way. Willie has had a long experience in this important department of the game and has always been a success at getting to the first sack. There is not a member of the team who cannot learn something by following Keeler's instructions.

Besides being a member of the Brooklyn club at three different times Keeler has twice been a member of the Giants and was also with the Highlanders for seven years. John Ward got Keeler from the Binghamton Eastern League club in 1892, and he finished the season with the Giants. In 1893 he was sold to the Brooklyn club. In 1894 he was traded, with Dan Brouthers, to the Baltimore club for Treadway and Shindle. Keeler remained with the Orioles until 1899, when he was transferred to Brooklyn. He remained there until 1903, when he jumped to the Highlanders. He was released by the Hilltop club in 1909, and in 1910 made his second appearance with the Giants. After playing with the Toronto Eastern League club part of last year Keeler now returns to the Brooklyn club, signing his twentieth contract in big league company.

What makes the record more remarkable is that Keeler is a Brooklyn boy, learned to play on the vacant lots around Broadway and Gates Avenue and at Ridgewood, earned his first dollar as a ball player in Brooklyn and lives in the house where he was born in Pulaski Street.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

A very exciting game of hockey took place at the Brock street rink last night when the Lock Works Mercantile Never-win team broke loose in the heads by 6-4. The teams were pretty evenly matched in the first half, but the Never-win team, while Whaley and last half. Huard, Carew, Corrin and Hicks did the scoring for the Never-win team, while Whaley, Ferguson and Sullivan counted for the Sore-heads. Huard and Corrin starred for the New-win team, while Whaley and Ferguson starred for the Sore-heads. The line-ups were as follows:

Referee M. Kenneally was satisfactory to both teams.

GOOD SHORT STORIES.

"Johnny," said a West End mother a few days ago, "you are now large enough and old enough to care for the baby for a few hours, and I wish you would look after him and feed him while I go over to see your grandmother, who is ill."

"Sure, mamma!" proudly replied Johnny. "I can feed him all right."

"Did the baby have plenty to drink?" asked the mother, as soon as she returned.

"He drank the best part of a bottle of milk," replied Johnny.

"But the bottle is still nearly full," said the mother.

"That's so," agreed Johnny; "but when I said the best part, I meant the cream off the top."—Youngstown Telegram.

"Why don't you let your little brother play house with you, Ethel?"

"We're not playing house, mamma."

"What are you playing, then?"

"We're playing flat and they won't let any children in this flat, mamma."—Yonkers Statesman.

"A party of us went over from Nice to Tripoli to see a battle."

"And did you see a battle?"

"Saw part of a battle. The battle was called on account of rain."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Harry—"Huh! I've got a laundry man as good as that." — Dartmouth Jack o' Lantern.

There had been a fatal accident at the railroad crossing in a little Pennsylvania town, and the coroner, a pompous old fellow, who magnified conscientiously both his office and its incumbent, had impanelled a jury for the inquest.

There was only one witness of the accident, an illiterate Slav from the coal mines, who could understand no English. With him the coroner began to struggle.

"Can you speak German?" he asked. The man shook his head.

"Can you speak Italian?" continued the official. Again the man shook his head.

"Can you speak Hungarian?" The same response.

"Can you speak Russian?" finally asked the coroner. Again the man shook his head.

"It's no use, gentlemen," said the coroner, turning to the jury. "We can't proceed with the case. I've spoken to this man in five different languages and can't make him understand me."—Philadelphia Record.

"No, I can't get up enough courage to ask old Patterson for his daughter."

"And why not?"

"Because I'm a builder of absolutely fireproof buildings and he is a fire insurance agent."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Auntie (who is housekeeping during mother's enforced absence)—"Now, you see, children, I have made you a pudding—(murmurs of approval)—and there won't be any trouble over getting you to take medicine tonight, for I am not going to give you any. (Loud applause.) I have, however, mixed all the pills and draughts and powders up with the ingredients of the pudding." (Groans.)—Tit Bits.

Shortly before his departure for India, King George was visiting at a country house near the scene of one of Oliver Cromwell's battles. Strolling out one morning alone, he met the village blacksmith. "I say, my good fellow," said his majesty genially, "I understand there was a big battle fought here."

"Well—er," stammered the blacksmith, recognising and saluting the king, "I did 'ave a round or two with Bill the potman, but I didn't know your majesty 'ad 'eard of it."—Boston Transcript.

Seizure Of Fish Out Of Season

Fishery Inspectors Watt and Kane, with Policeman Kidd and Detective Newhall, made a seizure of about 100 pounds of bass at the Oriental Hotel at about 3 o'clock this afternoon. It is alleged that the fish came from the same people who were fined in the police court the other morning for the illegal possession of fish during the closed season. The case comes up at the Police Court on Monday.

Undertakers Go To Law

TORONTO, MARCH. 2.—James Irwin and Lewis H. Stephens, both undertakers of Campbellford, Ont., are respectively plaintiff and defendant in a libel action at Osgoode Hall, which the latter seeks to have postponed until the jury sittings at Peterborough.

The action is based on a letter to the Campbellford Herald in which it is alleged that the defendant stated that he had arrived at the Campbellford station with his best funeral equipage to receive a corpse that was coming from Kingston. That he waited there quietly and with dignity. That the plaintiff, with a casket wagon, came galloping at full speed over the hard roads, and in a loud, rough noisy, angry manner, asked what authority the defendant had to be there. The defendant had said that he was there under instructions from Father Casey, whereupon the plaintiff had demanded what Father Casey had to do with it. The altercation was stopped by the son of the dead man requesting the defendant to withdraw and that he would make it all right with him. A quotation from the letter reads:

"The loud, rude words must have fallen on the hearts of sorrowing friends like coals of fire on an open wound."

In asking for postponement, the defendant alleges that a son of the dead man, now in Calgary, is a material witness.

New York Stocks.

Financial—to-day promises some irregularity in the stock market. It is said the professionals who reversed from the short side have been taking some profits on the advance. There is an undercurrent of good feeling, however. This may extend into next week. We are still favourable to purchases on recessions of moderate extent in the general list, and are inclined to suggest that the railroads be preferred as against the general list of industrials, although there are some few industrial specialties that look good at the moment for turns for daily operations. We suggest a continuance of the policy of using stop loss orders, for we are not yet out of the woods and think the best policy to be that of conservative action in following the bullish manipulation. The technical condition is still good, for there are a large number of shorts outstanding. The specialist reports indicate stop loss orders for bear account above the market. British strike news dominated attention yesterday. We expect to see this strike settled soon. Its magnitude foreshadows such action. It is said the fires of the winter, involving millions of loss, will stimulate buying of steel for steel fireproof construction. Money rates are expected in some quarters to work higher. Morgan interests are reported as working on the long side of the market now, especially in Morgan favourites. The Hill interests seem to be close seconds. Commission house advices in consequence are more favourable. Assurances are given of no anthracite strike. We think the reason for this is that the operators have decided to compromise.

Holland investors are said to be holding aloof from our market on the ground that politics are so uncertain that a slump may occur before election. Latest reports as to Roosevelt show that he is not gaining much headway in his campaign.

Cheap Tea is Dear Tea

So declared the mother of a small family not long ago—

—And proved the statement true by simply relating her tea experience.

"I used a 30c. Tea for years," she said. "One day the Grocer asked me to try a 40c. package of Red Rose—he told me it was better Tea. I found it better Tea, and—before I had quite finished the first package I thought it made more Tea. The second pound I used with care——And found out that less Tea in the Pot made a richer, finer-flavored Tea, if you know what I mean."

We know exactly what this lady meant—

—40c. Red Rose Tea is a richer, stronger Tea, more delicately flavored.

The 30c. variety makes about 150 cups—

—Whereas the 40c. Red Rose Tea makes about 200 cups.

So—You might as well have better tea for the same cost in the long run.

There are several grades of Red Rose Tea selling at different prices, but the 40c. grade seems to please best. It is not only fine Quality but goes farther.

2,500,000 BREAD-WINNERS WILL BE IDLE IF STRIKE IS NOT SETTLED TO-MORROW

One Railway Has Already Discontinued Operations for Lack of Coal—Food Situation is Acute.

INDUSTRIAL CRISIS

Examiner Special:

LONDON, ENG., MARCH.— "Six o'clock, Londo time"—Two million, five hundred thousand bread winners have no prospects for the week but enforced idleness, when factories and shops whistled the closing hour this evening. The estimate includes the miners themselves, whose going on strike has forced Britain into the greatest industrial ciris of the century.

To-morrow, if there's no settlement industrial concerns, employing a half-million more, must shut down. One railroad has already discontinued operations for lack of coal. The acuteness of the food supply situation in London, and other large centres, is still increasing. In the meantime the miners do not seem to be worrying much about it, leaving it to the representatives.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 4.—Premier Asquith spoke this evening in the House of Commons regarding negotiations for settlement of the coal strike. He said that while as yet there was no settlement, he couldn't but believe that time would break the dead-lock. Asquith said he implored the miners to recede in return for the minimum wage concession, which the majority of the mine owners would give.

"For the sake of the empire," said Asquith fervently, "I ask the members of parliament of all shades and opinion to refrain from commenting on the situation just now."

SUFFRAGETTES ON RAMPAGE ONCE AGAIN

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 4.—Before the police could interfere the Suffragettes started on a rampage this morning, smashing hundreds of large plate glass windows in the big shopping districts. They also hurled stones through all the windows of the residence of Earl Crews and the Lord Chancellor.

A Woman Incendiary

Special to The Examiner:

LOREBURN, MARCH 4.— Ellen Pittfield, wo attempted to set fire to the general postoffice Sunday night, was committed for trial for incendiarism.

"CERTAIN EMPLOYEES" BLAMED FOR FATAL ACCIDENT TO J. J. SPENCELY

Verdict of Inquest at Belleville Mentions No Names—Neglected to Issue Proper Orders.

TELEGRAPHERS' EVIDENCE

BELLEVILLE, MARCH 2.—"We the jurors, find that on the morning of February 14th, 1912, J. J. Spencely, a brakeman, came to death as the result of a collision on the east leg of the "T" on the eastern division of the G. T. R. in the Belleville yard, Thurlow township, through the neglect of certain employees of the road not issuing proper orders to the train crew of which Spencely was a member."

Such was the verdict rendered by the Coroner's jury empanelled to enquire into the details of the accident which occurred in the yard here, resulting in Brakesman Spencely, of Lindsay, being scalded to death. Dr. Farley, Coroner, presided. The jury was not long in reaching a verdict after all evidence had been submitted.

When the enquiry was resumed yesterday afternoon the first witness called was Charles Piercely, who testified he was train despatcher at Lindsay, for the G. T. R. He heard of the accident which caused Brakesman Spencely's death. A message, on the 5th of February advised the officials at Lindsay that the leg of the east "Y" was blocked at Belleville. On the 11th of February a similar message was received. The message on the 5th was as follows: "East leg of "Y" at Belleville blocked; all trains take the west leg of "Y". This order was given out to all trains at Peterborough leaving for Belleville. This order was in effect on February 11th. No subsequent order was given to annul the order that the east leg of the "Y" was blocked. He had known the east leg of the "Y" to be blocked for weeks. The message he received on the 11th was not given out by witness because he knew the order of the 5th was still in force. As the trainmaster's office at Lindsay no message was received from Belleville that the east leg of the "Y" was clear. Witness could not see that he should have issued an order after the 5th of February, in reference to the condition of the 'Y,' as the order of the 5th was in force. If the conductor on the ill-fated train allowed the train to go on the east leg of he "Y" on the 14th of February, when the accident occurred, he must have been disobeying orders.

To Mr. Shorey—At Peterborough the conductor might have been informed the east leg of the "Y" was blocked, but evidently he was not so notified. It was not an unusual occurrence to receive two messages within a few days notifying a certain line was blocked. He did not consider it necessary to repeat the message of the 11th.

To Mr. Pratt—the order of the 14th conveyed the same instructions as that of the 5th of February.

Russel Merryfield testified he was an operator in the G. T. R. employ at Peterborough. Trains could not run out of Peterborough without a train order. On Feb. 13th a train left Peterborough in the evening with Conductor Nugent in charge. Witness could not say whether Nugent was in charge of a train that came to Belleville between the 5th and 13th. witness was not on duty in the evening when the train Nugent was in charge of went through Peterborough. The train in question was an extra train. Mr. Raymes, the night despatcher, gave the order of the 5th notifying that the east leg of the "Y" was blocked at Belleville was still in force on te 11th of February. There was no intimation at Peterborough after the 5th that the ea leg of the "Y" was open.

To Mr. Shorey—He was srightening up the orders at 6 o'clock that evening and the orders were on the table. If any order disappeared he could not tell how it would disappear.

This concluded the testimony and after the Crown Attorney had reviewed the evidence, the Coroner referred briefly to the facts of the case, intimating that some one was to blame for the accident which resulted in Spencely' death.

Mr. S. B. Crosby, ex-M.P., for Halifax. He is spoken of as a possible appointee to one of the vacancies in the Senate.

BIG FIRE PICTURE AT RED MILL

The management of the "Red Mill" theatre with its usual enterprise, has made arrangements for the showing here this week of films depicting the great million and one-half dollar fire in New York. This picture is said to be an unusually clear and spectacular one and will undoubtedly attract a big crowd to the popular theatre. The film will be seen at the "RRed Mill" on Wednesday of this week.

FIVE DEATHS IN FIRES IN NEW YORK AND BOSTON

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, N.Y., MARCH 4.—Two deaths, three fatally injured and a dozen others hurt, were the casualities this morning as a fire in a tenement house here before sun-up this morning. One of those fatally hurt was Fireman Charles Marsin, who pushed his way through the flames and saved te life of one woman, but was terribly burned himself. There were several heroic rescues by firemen and policemen. Fifty eight are homeless.

BOSTON, MASS., MARCH 2.—Three persons lost their lives in a tenement house fire here this morning. Seventy others had narrow escapes. The dead are all Italians, many were killed in jumping or were suffocated.

MAY NOT REACH THE BOUNDARY QUESTION TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, MARCH 4. — Will the fight over the Manitoba boundaries be resumed this afternoon? It is doubtful. The government undoubtedly would like to press the measure and get it out of the way as soon as possible, but two important private bills block the way. They are those relating to Queen's University, Kingston, and they contain a clause which has provoked considerable opposition from the Hebrew community throughout Canada. It provides that the University shall continue distinctively Christian, but without a religious test or qualification save the professing of Christianity being required of or appointed for any officer, trustee, member of council or official of the University. The Hebrew vote is an important factor in such constituencies as St. Lawrence of Montreal, Laval, Toronto Centre, Toronto South and Winnipeg and strong pressure has been brought to bear upon the members to oppose the passage of the bill. It is in such a position that it must be disposed of one way or another and its position on the paper gives it precedence over all other business, so that if objectionists talk long they may be able to take up practically the whole time of the house and thus prevent the Manitoba boundary bill being reached.

Col. Roosevelt On The Jury

Examiner Special:

MINEOLA, LA., MARCH 4.— Refusing to claim exemption, although under law he might have done so, Colonel Roosevelt today was foreman of a jury at a session of the Supreme Court here. As juror he will be paid three dollars a day and his mileage from Oyster Bay. He said he was not worried about the presidential campaign. Others, he said, were taking care of that.

To Stop Sale Of Liquor On Trains

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, MARCH 4.—There is an agitation among the members of the Ontario Alliance to stop the sale of liquor on trains in this province, following the example of Chicago and Illinois. Supt. Gillen of the Grand Trunk, admitted that liquor was sold on buffet and dining cars here, but couldn't say under what lipense or regulation this was done. Chief Commissioner Saunders of the License Branch, interviewed this morning, said he didn't know liquor was sold on trains. There was no regulation to justify it.

OTTAWA, MARCH 4.— The somewhat unusual spectacle in Canada of wife and husband applying simultaneously for divorce from each other is given in this week's Canada Gazette. The wife, Ida Alberta Durman of Toronto for a divorce from her husband and Alfred Milton Durman, bookkeeper and vice versa. In both cases statutory grounds are alleged.

Local Man Arrested On A Forgery Charge

On arrival of the noon train Saturday Chief Bond arrested Reginald Winch of Peterborough, a young man of about 25 years of age, charged with forgery. On his person was $316.35 in cash and a lot of written checks, apparently ready to negotiate. He will be here until Monday, when the Peterborough police will come for him.—Port Hope Guide.

Detective Newhall went to Port Hope this morning and in all probability will return with his man this evening.

New Line To Be Constructed

TORONTO, MARCH 4.— The new lakefront line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, between Toronto and Montreal, by way of Whitby, Cobourg and Belleville to Perth, will leave the main line east of Toronto at Agincourt station. It will run along the main line for about half a mile, when it diverges to the south on the McLevan farm (part of lot 22, in concession 3) crossing the Markham road on Fred Fisher's farm (north half of lot 19, in the same concession) at a point midway between Brown's Corners and Malvern. It then keeps on a straight line, crossing Sterling's farm at a point between the C.P.R. main line and the Canadian Northern; then nearly up to the main line again to cross the Bouge Creek and ones across the line strikes off down southeast to Whitby and onward.

PELLETIER IS WORRIED

Editor Examiner:

OTTAWA, MARCH. 4—The fact that Hon. L. P. Pelletier has received a telegram signed by some fifty law students of Laval University, asking him to insist upon justice being done to the minority in the boundary bill is merely one of the indications of how the wind is blowing in Quebec. It is admitted by Pelletier's friends that he has confessed that the situation is a very difficult one, but this is offset by the publication in L'Evenement, the personal organ of the Postmaster-General and the speaker of the senate, asking people to be calm and have faith in the ministers. It is not believed that more than five of the Nationalist-Conservatives will bolt. The others will remain with the party hoping against hope that something may happen which will eclipse the issue before the next appeal to the people.

CHURCH UNION.

Observation of the votes taken by various congregations of religious bodies throughout the country on the question of church union do not need to be closely analysed or balanced to show that there is lacking that unanimity of opinion which alone justifies expectation of church union being, not only successfully effected, but effectively and beneficially carried out. A mere, or substantial, majority in favour of church union might bring about the union of the several churches concerned, but such union would not eliminate discordant elements that would forbid harmonious fusion; we should be more likely to have confusion. Destruction of denominational identity might mean destruction of denominational ambition and enterprise. Now, every denomination is the centre of a distinct vital force. Church union might remove the holy rivalry that exists among denominations, tending to concentration of effort that, with confused responsibility, might easily be lacking. Church union might prove to be no more successful than cooperative housekeeping would be.

DOWN WITH THE STREET POLES.

In former days the royal touch was held to cure the "poll evil." In these days, the pole evil for its amendment needs the touch of authority, and in this regard, the bill introduced in the legislature by Mr. Beck is a move in the right direction, and will tend, if carried and applied, to give the quietus to the nuisance of poles upon city streets, and remove, or greatly minimise, it. When the Bell Telephone Company removed the poles from the south side of Hunter street, between George and Aylmer streets, the change, the improvement amounted to a revolution. If the ghastly grove of crooked and straight, sloping and upright, poles, were removed from George street, with the attendant maze of wires, we should hardlly recognise the street, so great would be the transformation.

The object of the Beck's bill is to effect things like this and give municipalities power to cure the pole evil. Vested rights are all very well, but vested rights that invest our streets with hideous equipments of poles and dangerous equipments of wires have no right to be regarded as rights. The streets belong to the people, and the people should have control of them, to the extent of removing hideous conditions and dangerous conditions to boot. Here are the clauses of Mr. Beck's will, for which we should be grateful:

Where the commission is of opinion that it is necessary or expedient for the protection of life or property or for the convenience of the public that the use of overhead lines upon any highway or public communication or part thereof in a city or town, including the wires of telegraph, telephone, electric light, heat, or power companies, should be discontinued, the commission may so direct and may require that such wires be placed and carried in underground conduits to be constructed and maintained in accordance with the directions and to the satisfaction of the commission, and may abrogate any right to carry lines on poles in such a city or town which may have been given by any act or by any municipal by-law, license or agreement.

It also provides that:

Where the corporation of the city or town is willing to undertake the construction of a tunnel or conduits or other system for carrying lines underground in any highway or public communication or part thereof, the commission may require all companies and persons whose lines are carried overhead upon any such highway or public communication to make use of such tunnel or conduits or other system for the purpose of carrying their lines and to pay to the corporation such compensation for the use thereof as may be agreed upon or as the commission may determine, and such compensation may be either a lump sum of a sum to be paid annually or periodically, as the commission may determine and direct.

It will be seen by the last section quoted above, that there is something for the municipality to do. What Peterborough has to do is to provide conduits for undergrounding poles, and the law will do the rest. The expense to the city need not be burdensome; the law provides that companies shall pay adequate compensation for be use of conduits. Why should not the City Council "get busy" and be ready for the application of the law when it comes into force. Action is all the more called for since it is impossible to consider paving George street while the pole nuisance exists in its present aggravated form.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The doctors of Kingston are providing that to increased cost of living is added increased cost of dying—they have decided to raise their fees.

Mr. Lancaster might surrender in regard to his Ne Temere abolition bill but he takes it no-surrender in regard to the division of right of the Borden Government to apply the spoils axe. He has made forty dismissals from office in Lincoln, and says he has only fairly begun.

The condition of ill health of Col. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer of Ontario, is considered to be so serious that it is not expected that he will return to the Legislature, this session at least. It is expected that Hon. E. B. Lucas, will this week deliver the budget speech, which under normal conditions, would have been done by Hon. Mr. Matheson.

GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT.

(Ottawa Free Press).

The proposed Federal Commission to regulate the good roads movement will do well to pay some attention to the method of road improvement adopted in New York State, which has approximately the same population as the whole Dominion of Canada. That state began the movement in 1899, and has since then expended about $4,500,000, but the results were so satisfactory that it was decided to embark upon a more extensive scheme, and consequently a bond issue of $50,000,000 was floated to be expended within a period of seven years. Pennsylvania has already spent over twenty million dollars in good roads, and it is estimated that thogether there is now available for good roads in the whole United States no less a sum than $95,000,000.

The system adopted in New York State is very efficient. Every mile of highway in that state, outside of the incorporated villages and cities, is placed under the direction of the State Highway Commission. State roads, of which there are about 3,200 miles, are being constructed entirely at the cost of the state. To country roads the State contributes half the cost of construction, and it also gives one-third of the cost of township roads. The maintenance of these roads is based upon the French system, where a patrolling foreman takes charge of from five to ten miles of road. He is provided with a horse and cart, crushed stone, and the necessary implements, and makes the minor repairs as they are needed. In this way the roads are always kept in perfect condition. While the townships and counties pay for part of their improved roads, the work on them is done under the direction of the State Roads Commission. This has been found necessary in order to secure a uniform system of road-making. Statute labour has been abolished, and a system adopted under which the state contributes twenty-five cents for every dollar raised by the township.

This is to be the basis of the expenditure of the ten million dollars which Quebec is going to expend on good roads. That government will apparently enter upon a very vigorous policy, and if it gets its proportion of the federal grants there will soon be a substantial improvement in the highways of Quebec.

Thirty-nine Appointments in Lincoln Says Lancaster

The Axe Swings Merrily—Only a Tenth of the Offices to be Made Vacant and Filled

ST. CATHARINES, MARCH 2. — (Special.)—E. A. Lancaster, M.P., told the annual meeting of Lincoln Conservatives this afternoon that, since the change of government, thirty-nine appointments had been made in the county. He was objecting to a resolution to appoint a patronage committee. Mr. Lancaster took objection, as the committee would overlap the executive, and he could not listen to both. He claimed he had been chosen by the people to make appointments, and he was responsible to the county for the dismissals and to the association for appointments. If he were not fit he should be removed.

Speaking of the thirty-nine appointments, Mr. Lancaster said that was a greater number than in any other riding and that number did not comprise one-tenth of what he had in view.

The resolution was finally unanimously withdrawn, every one expressing satisfaction with the existing conditions and with the work of both members.

In reference to the Nationalist members, Mr. Lancaster declare they were willing to agree with the government upon anything rather than work or vote with Laurier and that while they differed in caucus with some Conservatives, they always abided by the result and voted accordingly—and would do so on the Manitoba boundary question.

Dr. Jessop dealt principally with bilingual schools, telling the convention that the premier was now waiting for the inspectors' report. He predicted a hot fight on the part of the French-speaking members, but forecasted a victory in favour of purely English schools. He added that he would do everything possible to eliminate the teaching of French in Ontario, declaring that, having had personal experience as a school teacher, he well knew that children speaking various languages could be instructed with very little difficulty in English with out the use of any other language. He emphatically reiterated that he would vote against any bill or resolution which tended in any way to permit the teaching of French as a primary language in either public or separate schools.

INDUSTRIES BUYING SITES AT GUELPH

The Royal City Securing and Assisting Location of Industries

GUELPH, MARCH 1. — That the Stewart Sheaf Loader Company of Winnipeg mean business in locating in Guelph is shown by the fact that yesterday they took up the options they held on the Farr and Gibson properties in the industrial section of St. Patrick's Ward. The Gibson property consists of 75 acres in a splendid location for industrial purposes, and the price paid was $10,000, which is considered a fair price for such desirable property. The Farr farm consists of ten acres, and brought a much higher price relatively than the other, it being bought for $5,000, or $500 per acre, while the Gibson property brought $133.33 per acre.

Mr. Laurie of the Hare Engineering Company was in the city yesterday closing the deal with the parties from whom they purchased the land in that section to build their factory on.

"SOME HAVE MEAT, AND CANNOT EAT"

So Bobby Burns tersely describes the man, but still poor, dyspeptic. But their case is not near so desperate as when Burns wrote. For the man who has the will now can eat without suffering for it, if he just follows the meal with a Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablet.

These unsurpassable tablets banish the condition of the chronic dyspeptic—the man who is tabboo—the sufferer from heartburn, gas on the stomach or occasional indigestion. You can eat hearty meals of wholesome food—and digest them, too—if you take Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets.

Compounded by expert chemists, after practically the best formulæ known to medical science, they are quick and certain in their action, giving prompt relief from all forms of stomach trouble, toning up and strengthening the digestive organs and bringing about permanent cures.

A man is no stronger than his stomach. Fit yourself for your best work by taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, 50c. at your druggist's. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 146

"INITIALS ONLY"

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

We saw people standing in various attitudes of grief and dismay about a couch, one end of which only was visible to us at the moment. The doctor had just joined them, and every head was turned towards him and everybody bent forward in anxious expectation. I remember the face of one grey haired old man. I shall never forget it. He was probably her father. Later, I knew him to be so. Her face, even her form, was entirely hidden from us, but as we watched (I have often thought with what heartless curiosity) a sudden movement took place in the whole group—and for one instant a startling picture presented itself to our gaze. Miss Challoner was stretched out upon the couch. She was dressed as she came from dinner, in a gown of ivory-tinted satin, relieved at the breast by a large bouquet of scarlet poinsettias. I mention this adornment, because it was what first met and drew our eyes and the eyes of every one about her, though the face, now quite revealed, would seem to have the greater attraction. But the cause was evident and one not to be resisted. The doctor was pointing to these poinsettias in horror and with awful meaning, and though we could not hear his words, we knew almost instinctively, both from his attitude and the cries which burst from the lips of those about him, that something more than broken petals and disordered laces had met his eyes; that blood was there—slowly oozing drops from the heart—which for some reason had escaped all eyes till now.

Miss Challoner was dead, not from unsuspected disease, but from the violent attack of some murderous weapon. As the realization of this brought fresh panic and bowed the old father's head with emotions even more bitter than those of grief, I turned a questioning look up at George's face.

It was fixed with a purpose I had no trouble in understanding.

II

"I KNOW THE MAN"

Yet he made no effort to detain Mr. Slater, when that gentleman, under this renewed excitement, hastily left us. He was not the man to rush into anything impulsively, and not even the presence of murder could change his ways.

"I want to feel sure of myself," he explained. "Can you bear the strain of waiting around a little longer, Laura? I musn't forget that you fainted just now."

"Yes, I can bear it; much better than I could bear going to Adela's in my present state of mind. Don't you think the man we saw had something to do with this? Don't you believe—"

"Hush! Let us listen rather than talk. What are they saying over there? Can you hear?"

"No. And I cannot bear to look. Yet I don't want to go away. It's all so dreadful."

"It's devilish. Such a beautiful girl. Laura, I must leave you for a moment. Do you mind?"

"No, no; yet—"

I did mind; but he was gone before I could take back my word. Alone. I felt the tragedy much more than when he was with me. Instead of watching, as I had hitherto done, every movement in the room opposite, I drew back against the wall and hid my eyes, waiting feverishly for George's return.

He came, when he did come, in some haste and with certain marks of increased agitation.

"Laura," said he, "Slater says that we may possibly be wanted and proposes that we may stay here all night. I have telephoned Adela and have made it all right at home. Will you come to your room? This is no place for you."

Nothing could have pleased me better; to be near and yet get the direct observer of proceedings in which we took so secret an interest! I showed my gratitude by following George immediately. But I could not go without casting another glance at the tragic scene I was leaving. A stir was perceptible there, and I was just in time to see its cause. A tall, angular gentleman was approaching from the direction of the musicians' gallery, and from the manner of all present, as well as from the whispered comment of my husband, I recognized in him the special official for whom all had been waiting.

"Are you going to tell him?" was my question to George as we made our way down to the lobby.

"That depends. First, I am going to see you settled in a room quite remote from this business."

"I shall not like that."

"I know, my dear, but it is best."

I could not gainsay this.

Nevertheless, after the first few minutes of relief, I found it very lonesome upstairs. The pictures which crowded upon me of the various groups of excited and wildly gesticulating men and women through which we had passed on our way up, mingled themselves with the solemn horror of the scene in the writing room, with its fleeting vision of youth and beauty lying pulseless in sudden death. I could not escape the one without feeling the immediate impress of the other, and if by chance they both yielded for an instant to that earlier scene of a desolate street with its solitary lamp shining down on the crouched figure of a man washing his shaking hands in a drift of freshly fallen snow, they immediately rushed back with a force and clearness all the greater for the momentary lapse.

I was still struggling with these fancies when the door opened, and George came in. There was news in his face as I rushed to meet him.

"Tell me—tell," I begged.

He tried to smile at my eagerness but the attempt was ghastly.

"I've been listening and looking," said he, "and this is all I have learned. Miss Challoner died, not from a stroke or from disease of any kind, but from a wound reaching the heart. No one saw the attack, or even the approach or departure of the person inflicting the wound. She was killed by a pistol-shot, it was at a distance, and almost over the heads of the persons sitting at the table we saw there. But the doctor shake their heads at the word pistol shot, though they refuse to explain themselves or to express any opinion till the wound has been probed. This they are going to do at once, and when that question is decided, I may feel it my duty to speak and may ask you to support my story."

"I will tell what I saw," said I.

"Very good. That is all that will be required. We are strangers to the parties concerned, and only speak from a sense of justice. It may be that our story will make no impression, and that we shall be dismissed with but few thanks. But that is nothing to us. If the woman has been murdered, he is the murderer. With such a conviction in my mind, there can be no doubt as to my duty."

"We can never make them understand how he looked."

"No. I don't expect to."

"Or his manner as he fled."

"Nor that either."

"We can only describe what we saw him do."

"That's all."

"Oh, what an adventure for quiet people like us. George, I don't believe he shot her."

"He must have."

"But they would have seen—have heard—the people around, I mean."

"So they say; but I have a theory—but no matter about that now. I'm going down again to see how things have progressed. I'll be back for you later. Only be ready."

Be ready. I almost laughed—a hysterical laugh, of course, when I recalled the injunction. Be ready! This lonely sitting by myself, with nothing to do but think, was a fine preparation for a sudden appearance before these men—some of them police-officers, no doubt.

But that's enough about myself. I'm not the heroine of this story. In a half hour or an hour—I never knew which—George reappeared, only to tell me that no conclusions had as yet been reached; an element of great mystery involved the whole affair, and the most astute detectives on the force had been sent for. Her father, who had been her constant companion all winter, had not the least suggestion to offer in the way of its solution. So far as he knew—and he believed himself to have been in perfect accord with his daughter—she had injured no one. She had just lived the even, happy and useful life of a young woman of means, who sees duties beyond those of her own household and immediate surroundings. If, in the fulfilment of those duties, she had encountered any obstacle to content, he did not know it; nor could he mention a friend of hers—he would even say lovers, since that was what he meant—who to his knowledge could be accused of harbouring any such passion of revenge as was manifested in this secret and diabolical attack. They were all gentlemen and respected her as heartily as they appeared to admire her. To no living being, man or woman, could he point as possessing any motive for such a deed. She had been the victim of some mistake, his lovely and ever kindly dispersed daughter, and—while the loss was irreparable he would never make it unendurable by thinking otherwise.

Such was the father's way of looking at the matter, and I own that it made our duty a trifle hard. But George's mind, when once made up, was persistent to the point of obstinacy, and while he was yet talking he led me out of the room and down the hall to the elevator.

"Mr. Slater knows we have something to say, and will manage the interview before us in the very best manner," he confided to me now with an encouraging air. "We are to go to the blue reception room on the parlour floor."

I nodded, and nothing more was said till we entered the place mentioned. Here we came upon several gentlemen, standing about, of a more or less professional appearance. This was not very agreeable to one of my retiring disposition, but a look from George brought back my courage, and I found myself waiting rather anxiously for the questions I expected to hear put.

Psoriasis Was Cured

After Five Years of Suffering ---Three Doctors Failed and Said Case Was Incurable

Itching and Burning Was Terrible Until Relief and Cure Was Effected by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Psoriasis is another name for chronic eczema. It is the worst form of this dreadful itching skin disease. Once eczema has reached this stage, it is usually considered incurable.

But here is a case which proves again the wonderful healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Not only does relief come quickly, but the resulting benefits are thorough and lasting.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Concession, Ont., writes: "I thought it my duty to write you telling you the great benefit I received from using Dr. Chase's Ointment. For five years I suffered with what three doctors called Psoriasis. I doctored with three different doctors, with no good results, and one of our noted doctors told me if any one offered to guarantee me a cure for $50.00 to keep my money in my pocket, as I could not be cured.

"The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head. The itching and burning was hard to bear. At last my brother read in the paper about Dr. Chase's Ointment as a healer. I got 6 boxes, and I am glad to say I am entirely cured, not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise the ointment enough, and you are at liberty to use my testimony, as I hope thereby to induce other sufferers to try the same."

THERE'S MANY A SLIP

There entered the Public Lavatory Saturday night, two long thirsts, only partly satiated. They were in a state that was bordering on maudlin and were still able to steer a fairly straight course. The bars had closed, but the two had provided well for the weekly closed season of nothing doing from Saturday at 7 p. m. until Monday at 6 a.m. They had three bottles of what some call the stuff that cheers and what temperance enthusiasts would call the devil's liquid. There were two long bottles that retail at a dollar each, and are guaranteed to make a cab necessary after a few liberal "sports," otherwise potations. There was one other fat flask, representing about seventy-five cents, all of which were in the possession of one of the thirsty pair. As has been stated the thirsts had been partly satisfied, but as is the peculiar condition in these cases, they were good to stow it away until it stowed or "stewed" them.

The story centres around the fact that the lavatory was sought as a place of retirement; the floor is tiled and the hands of the man in possession were unsteady. First they decided to tap the flask, but in some manner it slipped and fell on the hard floor, with the expected result. A consultation was held and it was decided to try a dollar bottle. Advice to be careful and promises of such were freely interchanged, but the floor had an exceedingly magnetic influence on that bottle, and it went the same way. "I'll save some of it," said one of the men, excitedly, but it was a vain hope.

The air was blue with language, and keen with the fumes of distilled rye. A picturesque and wordy postmortem was held, but neither of the two suggested the opening of that second long dollar one. They departed in an ugly mood for some place where the floor was soft, and where they would not suffer, as they would regard it, a similar occurrence.

BEWARE Young Man

Its the Little Dandruff Germs That Are Causing Your Hair to Thin Out

Parisian Sage Stops Falling Hair

The clever young man of to-day doesn't take any chances on losing his hair. A man who is baldheaded at 30 looks like 45, and is placed at a disadvantage when seeking employment.

If you have dandruff it means down near the roots of your hair an army of dandruff germs are attacking the hair root and destroying its vitality.

Then hair falls out; grows thin and baldness results. Young man; put your faith in PARISIAN SAGE, it will stop falling hair, kill dandruff germs, abolish dandruff and itching scalp, or money back.

PARISIAN SAGE is only 50 cents a bottle at Wm. Madill's and dealers everywhere.

MISS LOUISE KNIGHT SINGS AT ST. PAUL'S

Miss Louise Knight, of St. Johns, New Brunswick, who is in the city, the guest of her cousins, Mr. and Miss Bennet, Gilmour street, is a vocalist of unusual natural endowment and musical capability. Yesterday morning at St. Poul's, Miss Knight sang "Come Unto Me" from the Messiah. She has a beautiful voice, well trained, and she employs it with rare musical intelligence, and in this selection she sang with an excellent appreciation of its devotional spirit and musical requirements. Miss Knight sang "Come Unto Me" by request, after having sung it in St. Johns previously and the congregations of both churches were delighted with the treatment she gave it, with her sweet, true voice and with her artistic and appealing vocal method. It is rare to hear singers, who in the true sense, "sing with the spirit and the understanding also." Too many opportunities can not be given of hearing Miss Knight sing, and it will be learned with pleasure that she has kindly consented to assist St. John's choir, with their choral musicale, on March 18th.

No matter how sincere she may be, the telephone girl doesn't always ring true.

Your grocer helps protect your family's health by selling you Tillson's Oats in packages.

Perhaps you don't know this: The measures taken to preserve and protect health from its multitude of enemies have resulted in the last 10 years in prolonging the average length of life 3 or 4 years.

The Pure Food campaigns which have performed a large share of this work, might well be called Longer Life Campaigns.

The two great essentials of Tillson's Oats are making them clean to begin with, and keeping them pure and clean until they get to you who are going to eat them.

That is why the best grocers throughout Canada sell Tillson's Oats.

And that is why the most discriminating of Canadian housewives buy Tillson's Oats.

AN ORATORIO CHORAL SOCIETY

An oratorio choral recital will be held in St. John's church on Tuesday, March 19th. The final rehearsals for this important musical event now in progress, give promise of a similar choral performance to that of three years ago, when Mr. R. J. Dewey put on a grand rendition of Stainer's works. This year Mendelssohn's "Come Let Us Sing" will be the basis of the programme and after evensong last night, the choristers gave an hour to quietly rehearsing the principal numbers. The chorus will number sixty voices.

ALBERTA PUBLICITY CAR AT PETERBORO' MAR. 13, 1912

The Camrose Publicity Club have arranged for a special Grand Trunk Pacific tourist car to contain the exhibits of the Province of Alberta, to tour Eastern Canada with a view of attracting further settlement to that Province.

This car will arrive in Peterborough at 8.30 a.m., March 13th, and will remain on the Station siding at the Grand Trunk depot until 5.30 p.m., the same day. Everybody interested in that great country are cordially invited to pay this car a visit.

SURVEY WORK

There is great rejoicing in Weyburn Sask., over a communication received by the Board of Trade from Mr. Chamberlain, the General Manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, stating that survey work will begin on two projected lines affecting that place as soon as the assent of the Provincial Legislature has been received and that grading will certainly be begun this year.

The lines in question run from Cedeux, a point on the Regina, Griffin branch, through Weyburn to the international boundary, and from Weyburn along the boundary to Lethbridge respectively. This construction together with the completion of the projected line from Brandon west will ensure that Weyburn is a Grand Trunk Pacific Divisional point.

THE COUNTIES' COUNCIL ARE DISCUSSING HELM BEQUEST

(Cobourg Sentinel Star.)

The John Helm bequest of $100,000 to establish a Counties Hospital occupied the attention of the Counties Council on Friday last. The question was intelligently discussed by members, and they were greatly assisted by the presence of Dr. Bruce Smith, who gave valuable information as to the cost of construction, maintenance and comparison of cost of other hospitals. But ten of the members failed to climb the huge snow drifts and the further debate on the question was laid over until March 12th. There is a wide difference in the opinions of the members and the public as to whether the Counties should not make a record of building the first Counties Hospital in the Province, or allow the gift of the site (50 acres) to revert back to the estate, and the $20,000 to go to Cobourg and $20,000 to Port Hope, and the $60,000 to go to Toronto Hospital, Gravenhurst Sanitarium and Sick Children's Hospital. The gift is a magnificent one, and no doubt the donor would have wished to have it established at Port Hope as it was there his wealth was made, but as all the amount has to be spent in hospital work, the Counties are left perfectly free to accept or reject the proposal. While it looks at first sight as though the Counties should accept the offer, a large majority of the people of Cobourg are in favour of taking the $20,000 and erecting our own hospital. If the bequest is not accepted, it will be in no spirit of resentment against the wish of the donor, but with the sole object of doing the greatest good with the greatest number. It is also a sensible view of the hospital question that a number of smaller hospitals would serve the public better than one large and central hospital. If hospitals were erected in Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Brighton and Campbellford it would serve the people all over the Counties better than by having the patients sent to one institution where they would have to travel long distances to reach it. There is no rivalry in this matter between Cobourg and Port Hope, as if a Counties Hospital is built, Cobourg will still build her own hospital. On March 12th, the matter will again be taken up, and no doubt decided. We think that the Reeves and Deputy Reeves of every municipality in the Counties should call the electors together and give—or have—all information given them, and be guided by the voice of their constituents.

THE BRITISH COAL STRIKE AND ITS SOCIAL RELATIONS

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The coal strike in England has been often considered from an economical point of view, with the most self-evident result that one regrets the immense losses of fortunes which are the necessary consequences.

It may be useful also to look at it from another point of view. Consider it together with other symptoms of our days, just as monstrous as this strike and just as characteristic for our time, and closely connected, not with this particular strike, but with conditions similar to those which brought about this strike. I am referring to the mammoth fortunes of men like Rockefeller and Carnegie, and to the mammoth disarrangement of mind of great masses which culminate in the crimes of the McNamara brothers and consorts.

If you combine these three movements you get a picture with all shades and lights which derides the palette of any artist or the pen of any writer and which is highly dramatic in its effect; and we can hardly realize the difficulties which the men encounter, who have to deal responsibly with these problems.

But the very fact of the mere possibility of these things must show us that some things in the present social order must be wrong. What is it, and how will it be remedied?

It is impossible to attempt here to give a good idea of even one side of the question. I will try merely to sketch it.

"It is plain enough," someone will say. "It is the old struggle for life; that is all." Yes, but not the struggle of one, two, or a million men against so many others; it is the struggle of class against class; each class represents a valuable integral part of the nation. The one class represents its wealth, the other class its men, and the interests of both classes diverge, not in all, but in some points, and it is the task of any Government to look out for the interests of the whole—to protect one class from being abused by the other; and this often makes it necessary to interfere with the internal affairs of the parties. In the case of this particular coal strike, it is a question whether the Government has a right to fix a minimum wage for the miners or not. The mine-owners naturally deny that any one has a right to tell them how to run their very own business, and they say that this would be the first step towards the replacement of the present capitalistic order by a socialistic one, and that old age pensions, sickness and accident insurance, factory inspection, etc., are enough socialism for them, and also sufficient protection for the working-men. Let us admit that, and give credit for it to the Social policy of Lloyd-George, to whose energy, influence and understanding it is due, that Great Britain has caught up to Germany in the care and protection of her workingmen. We sincerely believe that the burdens of insurance, which employers and employees have to bear will be one of the best investments which has ever been made in the interests of Great Britain.

The minimum wage question has freed other Governments before this and they have hesitated to take steps, but labour unions have already succeeded in securing arrangements with many employers, and they (the employers) will admit that the minimum wage has not only the tendency to keep the low wages above a certain level, but it has also proved a check on the high wages—as a compensator and equalizer between highly qualified brethren. And if the highly qualified working men are quite willing to bear this sacrifice for their just-as-willing, but less-gifted brethren, why should not the employer share in this by granting minimum wages? Is he a less faithful Christian, as soon as his Christianity costs him something? Does "the Sermon on the Mount" not refer to him?

Does he not realize the dignity of men, when the cleverer workingmen recognize it, by renouncing a part of the higher wages, which they deserve, in favour of the less-qualified men. And this is the base of minimum wages—that everything which is made, is not made for self-purpose but for the purpose of improving conditions of living, for increasing culture and raising civilization to a higher level. But man has dignity and honour—he is made in the image of God, and if one amongst men is kept below his dignity and the respect to which he is entitled, then the blame undeniably falls on society as a whole, and all that you have to admit now is that, that the wages a man earns are a most important assistance to him in keeping up his dignity.

Let us remember that the refusal of the recognition of the rights of men brought about the tragical revolutions at the end of the eighteenth century in France, and which spread from there over Europe. We are responsible for the eventual refusal of recognition of the dignity of men.

Let us try to do our duty.

Old-age pensions, compulsory insurances and, best of all, minimum wages, are good means in the older Europe. Canadian politicians and statesmen of to-day should not be satisfied by copying older European methods, in caring for the less-fortunates of this nation.

LOST SLEEP TEN YEARS

Any one who knows Mr. B. F. Sugg, of Tyner, N. C., will tell you that he speaks nothing but the truth.

Mr. Sugg has suffered recently from sleeplessness and in a recent letter says: "For ten years I have suffered greatly from a nervous ailment which caused me to lose at least three hours of needed sleep every night.

"I tried everything I could find to get relief, and finally one bottle of Vinol gave me more relief than all other remedies. I am grateful to Vinol for my present good health."

Many persons who are in a nervous, run-down condition get so they cannot sleep, and this is almost certain to wreck their health unless the right steps are taken.

Our delicious cod liver and iron remedy without oil, Vinol, builds up the body and nourishes the nerves with pure, rich blood, and makes it possible to get natural, restful sleep. We guarantee that Vinol will do you good (money back if it fails), and if you are weak, nervous and sleepless, you certainly should try Vinol. "The Stampede"

To Return to "The Grand" Next Saturday for Two Performances

A. G. Delamater's name in connection with a theatrical attraction is becoming well known as a positive guarantee of merit and worth. He will again present his "The Stampede" at the Grand Opera House next Saturday. This play of Western life is one of De Mille's latest successes. Delamater has given "The Stampede" a magnificent setting and has placed a cast of more than the average strength at the head of which is Lillian Buckingham, a Western actress, who comes east with a reputation as an emotional actress of the highest order. Those who liked the recent dramas in which the Indian predominated, such as "The Roundup," "The Squawman" or "Strongheart" will be sure to like "The Stampede." It is a beautiful drama, superbly acted and tense in its story and climaxes. It has made a wonderful success in the United States as well as in the different cities it has been seen in throughout Canada. Special prices have been arranged for both matinee and evening performances.

MR. ELLIOTT'S RETIREMENT

Mr. Geo. E. Elliott, of the Inland Revenue office, Peterborough, has resigned his position, to take effect the end of the present month. Since the election there has been a scramble of applicants for the position vacated, and his retirement leaves the government with no more unpleasant work to do than filling the office.

DAIRY HERDS AFFECTED.

Members of Veterinary Association Urge a More Stringent Inspection.

CHATHAM, MARCH 4.—In a paper read before the Veterinary Medical Associations' meeting held here yesterday afternoon Dr. W. Clapp of Dresden, declared that there is scarcely a dairy herd in the country that has not at least one milch cow afflicted by tuberculosis. This paper provoked considerable discussion, and there was an unanimity of opinion that the Government should make more stringent laws regarding dairy herds. The association also strongly approved of municipal abattoirs, where all meats are Government inspected both before and after killing.

LEAVE FOR WEST

Mr. E. S. Clarry, formerly of the Trent Canal Office, left on Saturday for Edmonton, where he will enter the real estate and insurance business. His many friends in Peterborough will wish him every success in the West. He was identified with many interests in this city and will be greatly missed in many connections, including the militia. He was paymaster of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons. Mr. Clarry was for some time city editor of the Examiner.

Another former city editor of the Examiner also went West last week, in the person of Mr. M. J. Hutchinson, who has been connected with the McLean Publishing Company and the Acton Publishing Company for some years. Mr. Hutchinson will go into newspaper advertising work on the Regina Leader.

AVOID HARSH DRUGS

Many Cathartics Tend to Cause Injury to the Bowels.

If you are subject to constipation, you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is harmful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way affect a cure and their tendency is to weaken the already weak organs with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever devised. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it on the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user a cent if it does not give entire satisfaction and completely remedy constipation. This preparation is called Rexall Orderlies. These are prompt, soothing, and most effective in action. They are made of a recent chemical discovery. Their principal ingredient is odourless, tasteless and colourless. Combined with other well-known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation, it forms a tablet which is eaten just like candy. They may be taken at any time, either day or night, without fear of their causing any inconvenience whatever. They do not gripe, purge, nor cause nausea. They act without causing any pain or excessive looseness of the bowels. They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons, and aged people, as well as for the most hearty person.

They come in three size packages, 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. Remember, you can obtain them only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

Leather's expensive—in fact prohibitive to most of us.

Imitation leather has been altogether too much imitation and too little leather to appeal to people of discriminating tastes.

But recently one of our more progressive manufacturers engraved some wonderful rolls, with which they print fine paper stock to so close a similitude that one instinctively rubs his hand over it to "feel the grain."

There are sixteen shades, in seal grain, hide, etc.

We have these leathers in plain effects with decorative friezes and appliques (applique work will be the "rage" by Fall so get in ahead of the crowd)—and also used as grounds for some of the most stunning pattern papers ever shown in Canada—or anywhere else, for that matter.

PETERBOROUGH'S FAVOURITE SHOPPING PLACE

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"MY friend," said Mrs. Louise Noble, "you and I and Fred, young, heedless, cynical, living in this reckless town of New York, may laugh sometimes at old things like the law and religion when they say, 'thou shalt not.' We may think that phrase was written for old fogies. And we may sneer at 'The wages of sin is death.' But my friend, there comes to all of us sometimes the knowledge that the law and religion are right. WHAT THEY SAY WE SHALL NOT DO—THAT WE CANNOT DO WITHOUT SUFFERING. I have learned that. Also I have learned that the wages of sin is death. It's worse than death—it's a Hell on earth."

Louise Suydam was the wife of Walter Livingstead Suydam, a New York millionaire. After eight years of marriage she decided that she was mismated, and eloped with Frederick Noble, a plumber. Mr. Suydam divorced her and she married Mr. Noble. After living together less than six months, less than three weeks after their marriage, these two unhappy people committed suicide. And the reason for this act was that they had found that the love (?) which caused them to defy conventions and morality, which they looked upon as an eternal affinity decreed by God and nature, and not to be denied, no longer existed. The monotony and commonplaceness of ordinary married life had killed this love, which was so great that they were willing to sacrifice everything to it, in less than three weeks.

Probably you know most of these facts. They were chronicled widely enough. I am merely relating them for those who did not chance to read them, and recalling them for those who did.

In the words I have quoted, I think Louise Suydam Noble preached as powerful a sermon as any minister ever gave. For the minister tells us that the wages of sin is death, because that is what he believes. She tells us that, because she knows. She had received that wages; and more than that—a "Hell on earth."

In an ordinary married life, where the marriage is between two people who love each other dearly, where there is a reasonable degree of prosperity, where there are many friends and many interests and activities to add to the happiness of both parties, there is, nevertheless, much stress and strain upon the affection that these two feel. There are times, when the irritating little cares of married life grow irksome, tthere are days when one wears upon the other, there are moments when tempers flare up and things are said that should not be.

Now tell me, if there is all this stress and strain in normal married life where there is everything to favour happiness, what will there be in that union, which, by defying conventions, has thrown away standing and friends and the joys of a lawful respected domestic hearth with happy children about it, and very likely material prosperity to boot?

In every married life, the lovers' love, in which passion is a prime element, must gradually change. The love may become the affection of habit which one feels for anyone with whom he lives. It may cool into something little more than mutual indifference. It may degenerate into actual dislike, it may develop into a sweet and enduring friendship and tenderness, which to me is the most beautiful love on earth.

What chance is there for this happy outcome in a marriage like that of Louise Suydam and her affinity?

"Affinity," Earle couldn't live with his first wife because he decided they weren't mated. He broke up his home and made his little child fatherless to go to his "affinity," Julia Kuttner, whom he said was his true soul mate. In about ten years she appeared in the divorce courts, testifying that her soul mate choked and beat her.

"But, my friend," says Louise Noble, "there comes to all of us sometimes the knowledge that the law and religion are right. WHAT THEY SAY WE SHALL NOT DO—THAT WE CANNOT DO WITHOUT SUFFERING."

To any man or woman who is tempted to defy convention in any way and set up a higher (?) standard of morality for herself or himself, I commend these words of Louise Suydam Noble.

You may not believe ministers, or friends, or your family. You may say they are theorizing. You must believe her. She knew. God help her.

MAN WITH FROZEN FEET IN POLICE COURT

Succumbed to the Vigilance of the Police Force on His First Visit to the City

OTHER CASES DEALT WITH

Two young men from Roseneath in charge of a team of horses, ran amuck in East City on Saturday afternoon, and when found by an officer they were lying in the ditch in a helpless condition. The sleigh was found a short distance away with the tongue broken. They pleaded guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct and were fined two dollars each, with an option of ten days in gaol attached. They accepted the former alternative and beat a hasty retreat.

Peterborough's alluring possibilities proved disastrous to Henry Clark's career as a vagrant in a two-fold manner. The first was when he beat his way to this city on a freight car and got his feet badly frozen in the attempt, and the second shock he experienced was when he came in contact with the strong arm of the law. In the police court this morning, he pleaded guilty to the charge of vagrancy and admitted his inability to scare up a visible means of support. Clark came from Montreal.

"They are looking for some bank burglars in Montreal. Perhaps you could give us some information?" suggested his Worship.

The Magistrate followed this up by imposing a fine of two dollars to be paid in advance, or in default of payment fifteen days in gaol. Clark will take the latter course, during which time his frozen members will receive medical attention.

Joseph McConnel blamed Robert Smith for drawing him into the altercation which was responsible for his presence in court. McConnel and Smith were engaged in a fistic encounter in the Montgomery house on Saturday afternoon which later culminated in their arrest by P. C. McGinty.

"Are you guilty or not guilty" queried his Worship.

"I guess I am guilty" replied McConnel.

"A pretty shrewd guess," assented the Magistrate.

He was discharged, but Robert Smith, the alleged instigator of the fight, pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk and disorderly. He was fined two dollars and costs, amounting in all to $5.75.

Clear Lake Section of Kawartha Transportation Company Must be Operated by Sept. 1st, 1917

The bill under which a charter has been granted the Kawartha Transportation Company provides that the construction of the section to Clear Lake shall be commenced by the 1st of September, 1913, and shall be completed and put into operation by the 1st of September 1917. The other sections shall be commenced within three years from the passing of this Act, that is three years from the present time, and they shall be completed and put into operation within two years thereafter. The other lines referred to is one to Chemong and another to Rice Lake as previously announced. If these provisions are not carried out, the powers granted by the Act become void.

The head office of the company, which is capitalized at $200,000, will be located in Peterborough. The provisional directors are: Messrs. L. H. Grahame, Edmund R. Tate, Chas. W. S. Dunn, Harry G. Fitzgerald, R. B. Rogers and L. M. Hayes.

The company may issue bonds, debentures or other securities to the extent of $20,000 per mile of railway constructed. Permission is also given to dispose of electricity for lighting and power purposes, but not in any municipality except under a by-law providing for it by such municipalities that seek power from the company. Other clauses provide for the securing of permission to run over other railways. Mayor Bradburn was in Toronto when the bill was presented and looked after the city's interests, especially in regard to the time at which construction work must be commenced and the lines put in operation.

All arrangements have been completed for a right, live time, at the Ad Club meeting to-morrow evening (Tuesday, Feb. 5th) at Hooper's Palm Parlour, commencing with dinner at 6.15. The speaker of the evening, Mr. C. H. Ashley, of the Toronto Saturday Night, in his address "Better Sales and More of them" as announced, will throw out ideas and suggestions that will fit right on to local business men desiros of securing more and better business.

The committee of the local club regret that in the quarters provided for to-morrow evening they will not be able to accommodate more than fifty. OLD RATE OF PAY TO BE MAINTAINED

The increases in salary affecting yard and train men on the G.T.R. system, which came into effect on the 1st of January ult, have, on the shorter "runs" been cancelled.

It was thought by the authorities that while the employees on the long runs were justified in receiving the increases by reason of their heavier duties and responsibility, those on the shorter runs and branch lines had abnormally increased wages, was scarcely fair to the former. The Railway Commission having left the matter with the authorities of the Company, a circular has been issued to the above effect and the old rate of wages on the branch lines will be maintained, commencing the first of May.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

MADAME SHERRY.

Two big audiences saw and were entranced by the tuneful music of "Madame Sherry" at the Grand Opera House on Saturday afternoon and evening, and the universal verdict was that the production was the best musical offering of the season. "Madame Sherry" previous to Saturday, had been known to local play-goers only through the "Ev'ry Little Movement" number, which is repeated at intervals throughout the action, but those who were present on Saturday found a score of beauiful numbers, splendidly rendered by a capable cast. The singing and dacing numbers were away above the average, and the costumes and scenic investiture lavish to the extreeme. Bright and sparkling in its lines, and full of humorous situations "Madame Sherry" is delightful. Miss Ada Meade as Yonne Sherry was a charming little comedienne, whose singing was altogether pleasing and whose winsome ending won her the instaneaneous favour of the audience. Miss Marie Horgan gave a capital impersonation of "Madame Sherry," her work being responsible for galos of laughter and Mr. James Francis, as Theophilus Sherry demonotrated a clever comedian, whose methods were refined and effective.

THE WEATHER

We are having some decidedly cold weather, particularly for so late in the season. Perhaps, however, it is better that it should come now than later on. Sunday morning's observation showed nine below zero as the lowest during the night. This (Monday) morning gave eleven below as recorded during the night. The cold weather is likely to continue for a few days longer at least.—W. P.

FIGHTING THE "DEAD-HEAD"

Charles W. Clark, the Chicago baritone, who has resided years abroad, has an antipathy for those who caress the free ticket as a prized possession, and has strengthened his position by issuing the following Scriptural quotations:

This generation shall not pass.—Mark XII., 30.

Suffer not a man to pass.—Judges III., 28.

None shall ever pass.—Isaiah, XXXV., 15.

Enthusiastic Welcome Extended to Hon. Mr. Graham

WARM TRIBUTES TO BLAKE

London, March 4.—The coal strike, the greatest in the history of the British Isles, is marking time over the week-end. One satisfactory feature is the complete absence of any disorder in the districts affected. All negotiations looking to a settlement have ceased, as the miners who were recently gathered in London have dispersed to various parts of the country to attend to local matters connected with the strike.

Labor leaders, in speeches during the last day or two, have insisted upon the far-reaching importance of supporting the miners, because now that the Government has decided to institute a minimum wage in connection with the mines, it will be impossible much longer to withhold the establishment of a minimum wage in all industries. Thus the strike will become a triumph for the cause of labor all around.

The next word is with the Government and Premier Asquith's promised statement to-day is awaited with the greatest interest. The Parliamentary whips, however, have not yet made any arrangement for the introduction of a minimum wage bill.

At a mass meeting of the dock workers of Bristol yesterday, a resolution was adopted to the effect that imports of foreign coal should not be handled.

Most of the railways announce a further curtailment of their services, beginning to-day. Fourteen stations in London will be closed down altogether until the strike ends.

French Miners Also?

Paris, March 4.—The possibility of the French miners following the example of the English workers, while remote, nevertheless exists. This subject was discussed by the national congress held recently at Angers, but the decision was left entirely to the discretion of the executive committee of the Miners' Federation, who, it is known, will order a strike only in the event of Parliament acting unfavorably on various reforms for which the miners are now agitating. So that a strike of the French miners could not, strictly speaking, be considered a movement in support of the English strikers.

Several district committees of miners have voted in favor of a 24-hour strike on March 11, with the possibility of continuing it indefinitely, if Parliament does not take the hint. But the attitude of a majority of the miners in France appears to be on the whole conservative, although it is difficult to determine the extent of the influence exercised by the British strike on the minds of the French workers.

CASCARETS SURELY STRAIGHTEN YOU OUT

No Headache, Biliousness, Upset Stomach, Lazy Liver or Constipated Bowels by Morning.

Are you keeping your bowels, liver and stomach clean, pure and fresh, with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway through these alimentary or drainage organs every few days, with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oil or Purgative Waters.

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets thoroughly cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food, and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken or cause any inconvenience, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have headache, Biliousness, coated tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

Blown Through Roof.

Hamilton, March 4.—Wm. Barnes, sexton of St. Andrew's Church, Grimsby, was blown through the roof of a shed, in which was installed the acetylene gas plant for lighting the church for the weekly prayer service. He carried a lantern, and it is believed that this ignited some escaped gas. No person was near at the time, but an explosion was heard by persons who live near the church, and when they went over they found that Mr. Barnes had been blown through the roof of the shed. He was dead when they arrived. Deceased was about sixty-five years of age, and is survived by his widow and one married daughter.

TRIUMPH FOR LABOUR

British Miners Are Well Pleased With Situation

DOCK MEN SYMPATHETIC

Ottawa, March 4.—The Liberal victory in South Renfrew was celebrated by a banquet given to Hon. George P. Graham in the House of Commons by [illegible] on Saturday night.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier disclaimed that he had any intention of resigning his position as leader of the Opposition and stated that he would remain head of the party as long as he was wanted and as long as God spared him his health and strength.

Sir Wilfrid presided, having Mr. Lemieux at his right and Mr. Graham at his left, and among others at the main table were: N. W. Rowell, M.P.P., leader of the Ontario Opposition; A. B. Copp, M.P.P., leader of the Opposition in New Brunswick; Hon. Charles Murphy, Hon. Sydney Fisher, Hon. Mackenzie King, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Sir Frederick Borden, Hon. William Pugsley, Hon. Frank Oliver, Hon. Robert Jaffray, Hon. Raoul Dandurand, and Frank F. Pardee, the chief Liberal whip.

After expressing confidence that the defeat of reciprocity was only temporary, Sir Wilfrid said his health was so splendid that he could hardly believe himself to be 70 years old. He continued: "There are other things that from time to time recall the flight of years. Yesterday there passed to the great beyond one whom in the olden days was my friend and master. Edward Blake is no more. No Liberal can be indifferent to that event. He was the man who planted the seed of Liberalism in the early days. None but those who came into close contact with him can realize what he did towards the development of those principles which we all hold dear.

"It is one of the sad, sad things in life that memory is so short. The Canadian people of to-day do not realize how much they owe to Blake. Canadians lost one of her ablest sons, her greatest lawyers, and most brilliant Parliamentary orators."

N. W. Rowell and Hon. George P. Graham also spoke.

Dealing with provincial matters, Mr. Rowell said that there was a stalwart band of 22 Liberals in the Legislature, all fighters, already they had compelled Sir James Whitney to adopt three of their proposals, and, he added, "We are ready to continue to supply the brains and the political planks if they will but put them into force."

MERCANTILE SCHEDULE TO BE FINISHED

Tuesday March 5.—Lock Works vs. Machine Shop, 8 to 9 p.m.

Bell Telephone vs. Clerks, 10 to 11 p.m.

Monday, March 11—Clerks vs. Tool Room, 7 to 8 p.m.

Saturday, March 9—Bell Telephone vs Tool Room, 7 to 8 p.m.

BIERBAUER MAY GO TO THE PIRATES

(London Advertiser)

The Pirates are in such a bad way for a first-baseman that it would not be improbable that Bierbauer may be purchased from the London Club before the Canadian League season opens. Many a youngster who has made good in the big leagues has been grabbed up from the minors because the big league team simply had to have somebody to fill the position. Moonie Gibson, under that his breaking into the big league was pulled off in this manner. He was grabbed up by the Buffalo Eastern League team at a time when their catching staff was out of business owing to injuries. He went in and made good because he had to, but was later traded to Montreal because the Buffalo team had a surplus of backstops when the others recovered. From Montreal, Gibson went to Pittsburg, and has been with the Pirates ever since. Mooney claims that he was a raw recruit without a year's experience in fast baseball when he went with the Buffalo team.

WILL PLAY IN ORILLIA

Orillia, March 3. — Orillians are not over the hockey fever as yet and much interest is taken in the game to be played here on March 6th between the All-Stars of the North and the speedy home seven, who lost the championship by but three goals. Orillia will play the regular seven and the visitors will consist of Dwyer, of Peterborough, goal; Dennison, of Peterborough, point; Lawrence, of Collingwood, cover; Shields, of Collingwood, rover; Longman, of Barrie, centre; Graham, of Gravenhurst, left wing; and Semple of Midland, right wing.

Steve Vair, the well known hockey player of Barrie, will manage the visiting team, and Gren. Caldwell of Barrie, will officiate.

HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

No. 3 Company accept the challenge of the bugle band to a game of hockey to be played as soon as possible.

Three teams have challenged for the Clarke-Graham Junior City League trophy and games will be played this week to decide the ownership of the cup, which was donated three years ago by Messrs. Fred. Clarke and Chris. Graham, to be emblematic of the junior championship of the city. It was won by the Chieftains the first year and as not since been competed for. Lakefield Juniors and the Thistles and Northern Lights of Peterborough are the three teams who have signified their willingness to play off for the trophy and has ordered the Thistles and Northern Lights to meet and the winner to play Lakefield for the Cup. It should be understood that only players who are under eighteen years of age are qualified to play in this series. The Northern Lights and Thistles are asked to get together at once to arrange for their game.

CURLING

Skip Thompson's rink entered the fourth round of the primary fixture on Saturday evening by defeating their opponents' rink, skipped by H. Foote to the tune of a 23-5 score.

One game in the consolation event was also played off, the result being in favour of T. B. Yeats' rink, which entered the second round with a score of 12-7 to their credit.

The draw for to-night is as follows: Renwick vs. McDermid; J. H. Ferguson vs. Lang; McIlroy vs. Calling; Davidson vs. Connal; Brightman vs. Morrow; W. G. Ferguson vs. Morphet; Wightman vs. Bowes; Stevenson vs. Maitland.

BASEBALL

BERLIN TO TRAIN AT WINDSOR.

BERLIN, FEB. 4.—Owner "Pop" Williams and Manager Bube Deneau of the Berlin Canadian League team, have definitely decided that Windsor will be the training quarters for the champions two weeks before the schedule is commenced. The team is practically selected, and will be announced in a few days. Manager Deneau will try out five catchers before he selects a pair to take the backstop plate left vacant by the transfer of Joe Dunn of Baltimore. They are: Lead, of Boston; Fulton of Albany; Henderson of Bay City; Ackerman, of New York, and Schroeder of Detroit. Jack Miller, last year's utility man, will also be available.

(Cobourg Sentinel-Star)

At the morning service last Sunday in St. Andrew's church the Sessional was augmented by the addition of three worthy Elders. His Honour Judge Roger, having been ordained years ago in Peterborough, required only to be inducted to the office here. He was almost the unanimous choice of the congregation. Messrs. J. R. Herdman and Norman Dell were ordained by the laying on of the hands of the Session in the presence of the Moderator. This beautiful service was performed in the presence of a large congregation who remained standing throughout. Mr. Beattie preached from the very appropriate text: "Let this mind be in you which was also in Jesus Christ."

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale people look good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach.

A remedy that makes the stomach strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease-producing bacteria and cures a whole multitude of diseases.

Get rid of your Stomach Weakness and Liver Laziness by taking a course of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—the Great Stomach Restorative, Liver Invigorator and Blood Cleanser.

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of known composition, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

DIVERSION OF GREAT LAKES

(Special to The Examiner)

OTTAWA, MARCH 4.—An influential deputation representing the Shipping Federation of Montreal, the Dominion Marine Association and other navigation interests, will wait upon the government to-morrow to ask that the Dominion shall make a formal protest against the proposed diversion of the waters of the Great Lakes to the Chicago drainage canal. They will, it is understood, bring the assurance that the American shipping interests on the Great Lakes are equally interested in maintaining the level of the lakes and are equally united in opposition to the Chicago proposition.

Shot At Rothschild

LONDON, MARCH 4.—A man who had failed to secure an interview with Baron Leopold Rothschild, shot at him several times as he entered his motor car this morning. The shot missed Rothschild, but struck and severely injured a passerby. The assailant was arrested.

CITY BASKETBALL LEAGUE TO-NIGHT

There will be a meeting of the City Basketball League, held in the Y. M. C. A. building to-night when the following teams, who have signified their intention of entering teams should have a representative present, as the schedule will likely be drawn up: Elks Club, Brownies, Collegiate Hustlers and any other club wishing to enter a team will be made welcome.

Tuesday, at 4.30, there will be a meeting held in the Boys' Department of the Y. M. C. A. to organize what will be known as the Juvenile City Basketball League. This is especially for teams from the schools or juvenile clubs of the city, so that teams wishing to have a part in this league will do well to have a representative present.

DENISON STARRED

Hobe Armstrong, the Trenton Junior crack, who played cover point for the All-Star Junior O.H.A. team against the Toronto Canoe Club on Saturday night, spent Sunday in the city, the guest of local friends. Speaking of the game he said that Fred Denison was the best man on the ice. The game was fast at all stages and the All-Stars are looking forward to another hard battle to-night when they play at Ravina Rink. Armstrong returned to Toronto to-day for the game.

BOXING

"One-round" Hogan, who is engaging in strenuous training work at Rye Beach, announced to-day that he was at least 50 per cent. better than he was when he last appeared in New York. As usual, he predicts that he will put Packey McFarland to sleep before the end of their 10-round fight on Tuesday night at the Fairmount A. C., New York. Naturally Packey makes a similiar claim, so a record crowd is expected.

Tommy Callahan of Buffalo, will meet Joe Atwood of Welland, Ont., in the main bout of the new Prospect Club, at Niagara Falls, N. Y., recently licensed by the State Boxing Commission, next Monday night. Accommodation for 1,200 has been provided.

'Knockout' Brown is so busy these days that he can hardly find time to count his money. He began training to-day for a bout with Jim Raywood, on March 7th, at Fall River. Six days later he will face Young Erne in Philadelphia. On March 23 Jack O'Donnell will be his opponent before one of the New York clubs.

New York followers of the mitt game will have a chance next Wednesday night to see whether Charles Victor, the Jersey City middleweight, is a real "Second Stanley Ketchel," a title that his admirers have given him. Sailor Burke will be his opponent, and an old-fashioned slug fest is predicted. Victor has fought 20 battles and won 17 of them by the knock-out route.

The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet

For Schools, Hotels, Banks and Private Residences

Heretofore it has been impossible to install a Sanitary System of inside closet without water works and sewage, and you will agree with us when we say that the present outdoor systems of closets are not only very insanitary, but are at the same time one of the most fruitful sources of both moral and physical ills.

The "Parkyte" Sanitary Chemical Closet is constructed principally for families and public bodies who live in a district where it is impossible to have waterworks and sewage. It can be placed in any part of a Residence, Store, School, Hotel, Bank, etc.

We have secured the Agency for this valuable Sanitary Closet, and invite investigation of its merits.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS FOR PETERBORO' BASEBALL CLUB ISSUED TO-DAY

Some Information for Local Fans in Connection With the Canadian Baseball League and Its Prospects.

SHARES AT $5 EACH

At a recent meeting of those interested in the representation of the City of Peterborough in the Canadian Baseball League the question of whether the league should place a team in the city or that local capital should control the franchise, was discussed, and it was unanimously agreed that the latter would be more in keeping with the business acumen of the citizens and as more beneficial to the welfare of the game.

With that end in view, it was decided to organize a joint stock company to be called "The Peterborough Baseball Club, Limited," with a capital of ten thousand dollars ($10,000), divided into two thousand (2,000) shares of five dollars ($5) each, the same to be under the provision of the Ontario Companies Act, and the proper persons authorized to take the necessary steps to procure a charter for the company. The provisional directors of the company will be announced to-morrow.

The Canadian Baseball League, as constituted last year, consisted of Hamilton, London, Brantford, Berlin, Guelph and St. Thomas. This season the cities of Ottawa and Peterborough have been added, and the rating of the League by reason of these additions has been raised from Class "D" to Class "C".

Representatives from some of the other clubs have been in the city recently and apart from being thoroughly satisfied with the outcome of last season's business, are very optimistic over the ensuing season, as baseball has taken a firm hold in Canada and bids fair to become the national pastime.

For the benefit of those not wholly conversant with organized ball it might not be amiss to say that minor organizations such as the Canadian League are under the same paternal wing of the National Commission as the major league clubs, and are being given better consideration at present in the matter of classification, draft prices and protection than ever before. The salary limit of the league is $1,200 per month, that is, the total salaries of the players shall not exceed that figure. The draft price of a player in Class "C" is paid at $750 this year. The gate receipts are divided as follows: Saturday's and holidays, 50 per cent. and 50 per cent. Other days, 60 per cent. to the home team and 40 per cent. to the visiting team. Each team pays its own travelling expenses when on the road and the players their own keep when at home. The guarantees have been fixed as follows: Ottawa, $225 per series; other teams, $40 per game. The umpires during the coming season are to be paid salaries by the League from a fund set apart for that purpose.

The provisional directors are placing a limited number of shares (say 500 or 600) before the public, and lists are in the hands of a few individuals, who are authorized to take subscriptions for stock in the company. The number of shares is limited to twenty (20) to any one person, and the citizens are requested to subscribe early as the lists will be closed when the above number has been reached.

Got A Pain In Your Back?

IF YOU HAVE HEED THE WARNING.

You get a pain in your back, and you wonder what is the matter. When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Heed the warning; cure the weak, lame, aching back and dispose of any chances of further trouble.

If you don't do this, serious complications are very apt to arise, and the first thing you know you will be troubled with Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease; the three most deadly forms of kidney trouble.

On the first sign of a pain in the back, Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken

They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the backache and prevent any further complications arising.

Mr. Stewart Johnston, Richardson Mines, N.S., writes:—"For years I was troubled with my back, and I had to give up work. I tried Dr. after Dr., and was getting no better. I had almost given up hope when I began to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I took three boxes of them, and found I was completely cured. I feel I owe my life to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

FIRST GAME IN TRENT VALLEY SEMI-FINALS

Both Lakefield and T.A.S. Have Strong Line-ups for Tonight's Game at Brock Street Rink

The biggest Trent Valley crowd of the season will be at Brock street rink to-night when T.A.S. and Lakefield meet in the first of home and home games to decide which team will contest the finals with the Marmora Club. Lakefield are running a big excursion to Peterborough for the event and several hundred enthusiastic citizens of the Cement town will be down to root for their favourites. The Northerners showed in their game against Hastings that they have a well-balanced, capable seven and they will undoubtedly take a lot of beating to-night. The Abstainers are in good shape, however, and are confident of getting lead enough to-night to carry them through the return game at Lakefield on Wednesday. There is a lightning fast sheet of ice ready for the game. "Howie" Anderson of the All Saints Club has been decided upon as referee and will send the teams away at 8.15 o'clock. The line-up:

Lakefield		T.A.S.

Hill		McFadden

Rowe		E. Lancefield
	Cover-Point.
Crawford		T. Lancefield
	Rover
Blewitt		McPhee

TOOL ROOM TEAM BEAT MACHINE SHOP BY 6 TO 2

The Tool Room team, champions of the Mercantile League last year, added another to their string of victories on Saturday night, when they defeated the C. G. E. Machine Shop in a League fixture. The score was 6 to 2 in favour of the Tool Room who were ahead 4 to 0 at half time. The Tool Room team and Bell Telephone seven are having a hot fight for the championship. The Telephone team have yet to lose a game, while the Tool Room exponents have dropped one, losing to the Bell team. The next battle between the two teams, provided both of them win their other scheduled game, will either settle the race in favour of the Bell or leave the two team tied for the championship. The Tool Room have three games to play, a postponed game with the Clerks and regularly scheduled games with the Lock Works and Bell while the Hello squad have yet to play the Clerks and the Tool Room. They clash with the Clerks to-night after the Trent Valley fixture.

ALL STARS BEAT CHAMPS DENISON IN THE LIMELIGHT

Toronto, March 4th.—The hand-picked septette of O.H.A. junior All-Stars, selected with an eye to beating the Ontario Association's champions, the Toronto Canoe Club, accomplished the feat at the Excelsior rink on Saturday night in a game which resulted in a score of 4 to 2. At the intermission the score was 2 to 2. The rink was comfortably filled, and with to-night's game at Ravina Park there should be a handsome balance to be devoted to the purposes of the Sick Children's Hospital.

The All-Stars were provided with pale blue sweaters and stockings with a black star on the sweater. The selected players all arrived on Saturday, and the team lined up as follows: Goal, Hainsworth, Berlin; point, Dennison, Peterborough; cover, Armstrong, Trenton; Rover, Sandercock, Woodstock; centre, Butterfield, Orillia; right, Jupp, Orillia; left, Slemon, Berlin. The composite team is registered at the Empress Hotel.

The teams did not furnish a good exhibition of hockey. The ice was fast and conditions favored the players, but the forms showed by the team was not what was expected. Individually the lads were brilliant. To-night at the rink in West Toronto there should be a spectacular game. The ice is large, and while it will favor the Canoeists to find themselves the arena to which they are the most accustomed, the All-Stars will also find the larger playing surface to their liking, most of them coming from clubs which play on large rinks.

The selected team were under the disadvantage of not having played together before. In fact, the eastern lads had never seen the westerners until they gathered at their hotel on their arrival in Toronto. Under those circumstances team play could scarcely be expected. In spite of the extreme speed of the Paddlers they were not superior in that respect to their rivals on Saturday night. The O.H.A. champions maintained their reputation for tenacious checking but they were met in kind by the Stars, with the result that the game, particularly in the first half, was not remarkable for its team play and combination.

Both defences were very good. There was little to choose between them in the matter of defence play but in speed and attack there was a slight margin in favour of the picked team Dennison and Armstrong are verily stars ,although both were plainly hampered by the restricted playing arena. Perhaps Hainsworth had more to do than Laird but both goalers were particularly good. The youngster from Berlin was lucky on several occasions when he went out of his goal and missed the rubber ,only to have the Canoeists miss the open net. The Paddlers bursed around him in the second period like a swarm of bees, but he handled their shots neatly and with good judgment. Romeril, the champions' rover, who has been the star of the team all season, had a margin on Sandercock. The Woodstock youngster suffered from a sick stomach, and it was a question whether he would be able to continue after half time. His well known speed was apparent in flashes only, and he played too much on the defensive, the changing from cover point, his regular position, to cover, interfering with his usefulness somewhat. Butterfield of Orilia and little "Mack" McKenzie, the 112 pound centre of the Red Ring team, had a merry tilt, but the Orillian was slightly the more effective. The other Orillian representative, Lovering Jupp, had a barrel of speed, which Murray had a difficulty in duplicating. Dopp was not as fast as usual, and Solomon of Berlin was able to make numerous shots unchecked.

The Stars scored the first goal after about ten minutes of play, and the Canoe Club got on even terms shortly afterwards. The Stars then went to the front again and the champions scored the tying goal shortly before half time. The four counters were all made at close range.

In the second period the "chosen few" went right in for two additional credits, and the Paddlers tried desperately to even up the count. Frequently they swept into the All-Star defence three abreast, but Dennison and Armstrong were too much for them. It should be said in justice to the Canoe Club that they had hard luck in front of their opponents' net in the second half. Both teams went close in for their shots. Sidley broke away half a dozen times and was right in on Hainsworth when Dennison upset him with stiff body checks. Armstrong and Dennison made several rushes the length of the rink, and their work in this respect was one of the features of the game. Both defences, in fact, did a great deal of rushing, while the forwards checked one another to a standstill around centre ice.

OBITUARY

MRS. ARCHIE McGIBBON.

The many friends in Peterborough of Mrs. Archie McGibbon, Penetanguishene, will regret to learn of her death at that place on Thursday, Feb 22nd. Mrs. McGibbon was the only daughter of Rev. Isaac Campbell. Th following in reference to the occasion is from the Penetanguishene Herald.

Seldom, indeed, has it been our office to make mention of a death so generally regretted in town, or in which so much sympathy manifests itself, as in that which occurred on Thursday last, 22nd instant, when Gertrude Frances McGibbon, wife of Mr. Archibald McGibbon, passed away. She made a strong fight for life, but it was denied her.

Mrs. McGibbon was but a young woman, of only 26 years, and had been married about four years. She was the only daughter of Rev. Dr. Isaac Campbell, Presbyterian minister now stationed at Lucan, Ontario, and who was for several years pastor of the Presbyterian church in Penetanguishene.

During her residence in this town both as a girl and as a married woman, she was greatly loved and admired by all who knew her, for her bright, sunny disposition and her utterly unselfish character.

She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, her father and two brothers, besides hosts and hosts of girlhood and later-day friends. Her two small children, Charles who is just two years, and the baby Helen, who is only a few weeks old, will receive all the care that loving hands may give, but no care, no consideration nor kindness can compensate for the mother love of which they have been deprived. But, no, we cannot believe that. The mother love is not lost, but will go on living throughout the ages and later in life it will surely be felt and realized by these little ones who are now too young to miss the mother's care.

Many floral tributes and expressions of sympathy were sent to the house of mourning, but these very inadequately evidenced the very widespread and deep sympathy which was felt by all classes in the community with the sorrowing husband and for the motherless babes, as well as for the other relatives and friends in their great loss.

The funeral took place on Saturday, Rev. Mr. Gilmour officiating, and the pall-bearers being Norman McGibbon, Jack McGibbon, Walter Beck, Edward Jeffery, Chantler Jeffery and Edward Wright.

A large concourse attended the funeral and many men, women and children lined the streets in silent and reverent sympathy as the cortege passed on its way to the Presbyterian cemetery.

JOHN O'DONOGHUE.

There passed away in St. Joseph's Hospital, yesterday, one John O'Donoghue of Campbellford.

The deceased, who was seventy-five years of age, and a single man, had been in the Hospital, here, for a considerable time.

His brother, Michael, who came from Campbellford, on Saturday, returned with the remains this morning.

The funeral will take place to-morrow in Campbellford.

REVIVAL SERVICES

During the past week very successful revival services were held each evening in Mark Street Methodist church, conducted by the Pastor, the Rev. C. E. Cragg. The evening proceedings commenced wih a song service occupying about fifteen minutes after which the Revival Service took place. Sermons of a very interesting and forcible nature were given by the pastor. The subject he chose last evening was "The Wages of Sin is death," and in this sermon explained in unmistakable terms how a man, steeped in dissipation and vice often earns his wages by bringing on premature death. Last week's services attracted a large crowd each evening and these services will be continued next week.

KNOX CHURCH NOTICES.

The Young People's Guild will meet to-night at 8 p.m.

The Board of Managers will meet at the same hour.

Mid-week service will be held on Wednesday evening at 8 p.m.

NERVOUSNESS AND DYSPEPSIA

CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES" THE GREAT FRUIT MEDICINE

In Nervous Dyspepsia, the Dyspeptic does not suffer from this Stomach trouble—but the bitter trouble does arise from the Dyspepsia.

The stomach is a network of nerves. Now if all these nerves are irritated by improper food, hasty eating, or poisoned by gases from the constipated bowels, then they will make one hungry.

"Fruit-a-tives" cures both the Dyspepsia and the Dyspepsia because "Fruit-a-tives" cures all stomach troubles, keeps the stomach sweet and clean, and enables you to eat and sleep as you did when a child.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Do not soak fresh fish in water before cooking. This treatment only ruins the flavour and makes the fish soft.

A dish of water placed in a hot oven where pies, cakes, or puddings are being baked will prevent them from scorching.

By using soapy water when making starch, the clothes will have a glossy appearance, and the irons will be less likely to stick.

When plates and dishes have to be warmed on the oven top or in the oven, if a newspaper is put underneath it will break the heat and prevent from cracking.

Silk handkerchiefs should be washed with borax in tepid water, with a little or no soap. Iron them before dry.

Tar stains may be removed from cotton fabrics by covering the spot with butter and allowing it to remain for a few hours before washing.

If you wish to keep books in good condition, have open shelves. Glass doors certainly exclude dust, but they are apt to keep in damp and harbour moths.

An easy method of cleaning lamp chimneys is to hold the glass over the spout of a kettle of boiling water until it becomes well steamed; then polish with a clean, dry cloth.

If there is cold chicken left from the roast, cut it into dice, mix with a cream dressing, put into the baking dish, sprinkle the top with cheese and stuffed olives and bake in a quick oven until brown.

The walls of cupboards and pantries are often damp on wet or sultry days without apparent reason, when other sections of the kitchen wall will be comparatively dry. The best device for any wall that is inclined to dampness is to make it impervious to moisture by applying a varnish of one part shellac and two parts naphtha.

STRIKE IS SPREADING

Paralysis Creeping Over the Industries of Britain

MR. ASQUITH'S STATEMENT

London, March 5.—It is quite impossible to hazard a guess as to the probable duration of the coal strike. James Keir Hardie, the Independent Labor member of Parliament, expresses the opinion that the strike will end in a triumph for the miners within ten days, but that the men must be prepared to remain on strike for six weeks.

Premier Asquith's statement in the House of Commons yesterday gave no new information and was only interesting as showing that the Government had not lost hope of bringing the disputants together.

A report was received from Derbyshire of a movement on the part of the miners in the midland counties to bring about an amicable arrangement with the mine owners. Such a partial settlement is hardly probable, but if it really came about, it would do much towards effecting a general settlement.

The coal strike is now affecting every class of the community. Tens of thousands of workers have been dismissed, and the railway service is dislocated and disorganised. Like creeping paralysis, the stoppage of the coal supply is threatening the whole life of the nation. The miners are making holiday. They are, as they put it, "having their fling" while the nation suffers, the poor go cold and hungry, and their fellow-workers are turned into the streets.

Factory after factory is closing down all over the United Kingdom as a result of the national coal strike, and those responsible for the trouble are simply marking time for the present, although it is expected that negotiations will soon be resumed.

Besides the miners, considerably over a million of whom have ceased work, it is now estimated that there are upwards of 200,000 workers in other industries idle owing to the strike, and this number is being added to hourly.

The crews of coal-carrying vessels lying in the coaling ports are now being discharged, as the ships are unable to get cargoes, and the railroad employes are suffering in a similar way because of curtailment by the various companies of their train services. One short railroad line in Yorkshire has discontinued working entirely.

Asquith's Statement.

London, March 5.—(Through Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The House of Commons was crowded yesterday afternoon to hear Premier Asquith's important statement on the coal crisis. Mr. Asquith reviewed the whole course of negotiations between the striking coal miners and the mine owners, mentioning the fact that the Government had been closely watching from the beginning the various stages of the controversy. He paid a tribute to both sides upon the ability, the skill and the calm, cool temper with which they had presented their case.

Referring to his speech at the Foreign Office he said it was an impromptu speech and that the report of it which had been published was both correct and exhaustive. He was not in the habit, he said, of engaging in flirtations with socialism and then trying to conceal from the public the manner in which he had been employing his time.

He said that in his arguments to the miners' representatives he was carefully abstained from expressing any opinion as to which side was right or wrong, but the point he put to the men was the point he was now putting to the House and to the country as a whole.

He was not adopting a contentious attitude. His object was peace. (Cheers.)

Proceeding, Mr. Asquith affirmed that the Government's acceptance of the principle of a reasonable minimum wage was subject to two conditions: First, that the wage must vary district by district; second, that it must be accompanied by safeguards protecting the employers against abuse and providing against diminution of the output, which in the long run would be disastrous to all concerned and to the industry. He pointed out that the men recognised both conditions, but declared that the federation's schedule contained the lowest possible rates beyond the range of negotiations.

Coming to the present position, he said that the negotiations had not come to a breakdown, but to a deadlock.

He wished, however, to say also that apart from this the Government was not idle. It felt strongly that the best way of fixing a reasonable minimum wage in the various districts was by agreement between the parties, and he still hoped that that might be done.

Mr. Asquith throughout spoke with extreme gravity, and the House followed every sentence intently.

Mr. Bonar Law, the Unionist leader, said that he did not dream of criticising the Government, nor did he desire to discuss the question. He assured the Premier that the Opposition would do nothing to make the task of the Government more difficult, and thanked Mr. Asquith for his clear and frank statement. (Cheers.)

SILENT ON SCHOOLS

Borden Utters No Word of Them in Boundaries Debate

STORM EXPECTED TO-DAY

Ottawa, March 5.—The chief interest of the opening day's debate on the second reading of the Government bill to extend the boundaries of Manitoba lay rather in what was not said than in what was said. Premier Borden, in opening the debate when the House met, dealt only with the geographical and financial terms of the bill.

As yet not a word has been said about the school question. The cloud hung on the horizon all day, but the storm will break possibly to-day. The Nationalist amendment dragging in the school question is expected then. The Government, by giving the followers of Mr. Bourassa their quid pro quo on the naval question, has managed to secure the support of a number of the recalcitrants. Half a dozen are expected to bolt.

With regard to the date from which the financial provisions should take effect, the Premier, in introducing the bill, recalled that, as far back as 1884, Manitoba had laid claim to the territory now granted her. This claim had been renewed in 1891, and at the constitution of the new Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan in 1905 when Sir Wilfrid Laurier had given as the reason for not complying with the request at the time that Ontario and Quebec had not been consulted.

Why should Manitoba suffer from that delay? asked the Premier. The present Government had not seen fit to go back as far as 1905, which Manitoba asked, but in as much as the boundaries now settled had been approved by unanimous resolution of the House in July, 1908, it was only just and right that the financial arrangements should go in affect as on that date.

But it might be asked, said Mr. Borden, why Manitoba should be given any compensation at all. This principle, he declared, had been approved by Parliament in 1905 when the late administration fixed the terms of the constitution of Alberta and Saskatchewan. She could surely not object to it now.

Hon. William Pugsley replied to the Premier. The unanimous resolution of 1905, he claimed, was not a bargain. It had not been agreed to by Manitoba, and remained incomplete till now. It was therefore not binding on the Dominion or the province.

Why not deal with the claims of British Columbia? he asked. Why not show consideration to the Maritime Provinces, which had borne the burden of confederation? He did not like the "sweet bye-and-bye" argument. It was all very well to say that this would be attended to when the western provinces were given back their lands, but the time to deal out justice to the Maritime Provinces was now. He called on the Premier to let the question stand over till a conference of Provincial Premiers could be held and a basis arrived at that would give satisfaction to the whole people of Canada.

Arthur Meighen (Portage la Prairie) pointed out to Mr. Pugsley that periodical readjustment had been made from time to time since confederation of the financial terms of the provinces in lieu of debt, and no objection had been raised.

He taunted the Opposition with endeavoring to work up jealousies among the provinces on the ground that Manitoba was getting too much, while their party friends in the Manitoba Legislature were shouting that Manitoba was getting too little.

Hon. Frank Oliver protested against the Dominion handing over to Ontario "the only piece of property of real value," in the territory annexed to Manitoba. The arrangement was fair neither to Manitoba, Ontario, and the Dominion. Ontario had the port of Nelson, but had no jurisdiction; Manitoba had the jurisdiction, but not the port. If it were fair to give Ontario the port, it would have been possible to arrange the boundary so as to give her jurisdiction over it.

He contended that the increase in debt allowance to Manitoba was unfair in comparison to Alberta and Saskatchewan, which had much larger effectively populated areas.

J. A. M. Aikens (Brandon) said the bill had met with fever among the Opposition when one ex-Minister (Pugsley) had complained that Manitoba was getting too much, another (Oliver) had complained that she was not getting enough.

The whole policy of the Opposition, he said, was to sow seeds of discord between the provinces, so that out of the havoc that would result they might somehow derive political benefit. The same thing was seen in the resolution of Mr. Rowell in the Ontario Legislature that the boundary should be extended to Fort Churchill.

FOSTER IS CHOSEN.

He Will Represent Canada on Imperial Commission.

Ottawa, March 5.—Hon. George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, has been recommended for appointment as the representative of Canada on a royal commission which has for its purpose the investigating and reporting upon the natural resources of each part of the Empire, the development attained and attainable and the facilities for the production, manufacture and distribution of these resources.

The commission has also for its object the investigation of trade of each part of the Empire with the others and with the outside world, the food and raw material requirements of each and the sources available. The commission will also investigate to what extent, if any, the trade between each of the different parts has been affected by existing legislation in each, either beneficially or otherwise.

This recommendation is the direct result of the Imperial Conference held last June in London. During that conference, Hon. Mr. Fisher, the Premier of Australia, had on the order paper on June 16, two resolutions urging that trade between the different parts of the Empire should be more fully developed.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier proposed on that day that something more should be brought before the conference and moved the following resolution: "That His Majesty should be approached with a view to the appointment of a royal commission representing the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, South Africa, and Newfoundland, with a view of investigating and reporting upon the natural resources of each part of the Empire represented at this conference, the development attained and attainable and the facilities for the production, manufacture and distribution; the trade of each part with the others and the outside world, the food and the raw material requirements of each and the resources thereof available. To what extent, if any, the trade between each of the divergents has been affected by existing legislation in each, either beneficially or otherwise."

Sunday Shooting in Britain.

London, March 5.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The War Office has decided to allow territorials to have rifle practice on Sundays, provided the shooting as far as possible be confined to "compulsory work to attain proficiency, that the quiet of the Sabbath be not needlessly disturbed and that the men be given an opportunity of attending church. This decision was reached after conferring with the Archbishop of Canterbury, other prelates and leading nonconformists.

Suffragettes Keep Up the Merry Civic Ration Act

BIG ASSEMBLY A FIASCO

London, March 5.—The suffragettes started operations again early yesterday morning. A small band of them, armed with hammers and stones, went through the Knights Bridge and Brompton road district, in the west end of London, breaking up the plate-glass windows of the big drygoods stores in that neighborhood. As usual, owing to the disturbance being unexpected, the police on duty in the district were unable to cope with the suffragettes, who were distributed over a wide area.

The storekeepers and their staffs of employes were compelled to do sentry duty in the front of their premises, but in many cases were unable to keep the women from doing damage.

A detachment of mounted police was the first reinforcement to arrive on the scene. One of them was immediately dragged from his horse by excited women.

In one store alone damage to the extent of $1,250 was done. Thirty women were arrested.

The windows of the Marquis of Crewe's and the Lord Chancellor's residences were smashed with hammers yesterday morning during the suffragettes' raid.

Ellen Pitfield, the suffragette who attempted to set fire to the general postoffice of London Sunday evening, was yesterday committed by a magistrate for trial at the Old Bailey sessions.

The much advertised meeting in Parliament Square last night, to protest against the refusal of Premier Asquith to receive a deputation, proved a fiasco, so far as concerned the sensational display of militant powers and cunning, which was predicted by the organizers. About fifty women were arrested, but the damage done was inconsiderable, as compared with Friday's raid.

While the militant suffragettes were vainly endeavoring to break through the cordon of police round about Parliament Square, the two hundred medical students organized a raid upon the suffragette premises to pay them back in their own coin. Marching to the building occupied by the women's press in Charing Cross road, where there was a big display of suffrage literature, they bombarded it with stones, smashing all the windows to an accompaniment of cheers from the delighted spectators.

Another band, bent on retaliation, attacked the International Suffrage Shop in Adam street, the Strand, smashing a big plate glass window and wrecking the front of the building.

Asquith Family Threatened.

London, March 5.—Mrs. Asquith, wife of the Premier, is receiving anonymous letters threatening that unless women are enfranchised the Asquith family will be poisoned.

Precautions have been taken against any untoward occurrence.

Port Nelson the Choice.

Ottawa, March 5.—The report of Chief Engineer Armstrong, in charge of the construction of the Hudson Bay Railway, tabled in the House by Hon. Frank Cochrane yesterday afternoon, shows that Port Nelson will be preferred to Fort Churchill as the terminus.

Mr. Armstrong finds that while Fort Churchill has naturally the better harbor protection, it has an inadequate site available for railway terminals, is open only for five months of the year and involves a large and more expensive route, with greater cost of annual maintenance.

Port Nelson, however, has ample and easily-utilized terminal sites and is open seven months in the year for navigation and, from the standpoint of ultimate utility, is decidedly to be recommended.

It is interesting to note, in view of the recent order-in-council giving Ontario the south side of the harbor mouth at Port Nelson, that Chief Engineer Armstrong declares that a suitable terminal site is available on either side of the river. The estimated cost of terminal development at Port Nelson, having in view the handling of from sixty to seventy million bushels of grain within sixty days, is $20,000,000.

Michigan Apple Crop Suffers.

St. Catharines, March 5.—From statements made at the annual Fruit Institute of Niagara District Growers here yesterday afternoon, there is a possibility that the entire crop of the state of Michigan will be ruined as the result of the severe winter, the trees having been exposed to over 30 degrees of frost.

C. E. Bassett, secretary of state, for the horticultural society, made the statement, which he partly qualified by saying that if any orchards produce a yield, it will be due to use of clover crop, which hindered the full growth of trees and buds, so that they entered the winter hard and solid.

Prof. Gussow of Ottawa declared that yellows and little peaches cannot be cured, as both are what he termed constitutional diseases.

Life-Saving Station at Niagara.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 5.—A communication was received yesterday by the Board of Trade from William German, M.P., stating that every indication pointed to the early establishment of a life-saving station here, as a result of the recent ice bridge tragedy. Americans are making an effort to have the Congress establish a station over the river.

Brantford, March 5.—"The saddest case I have ever heard of," said Magistrate Livingstone in sentencing Arthur Taylor to two months' hard labor here yesterday for theft from John Drake.

Taylor was arrested in Toronto recently, having eloped with Drake's wife. He also took a sum of money belonging to her husband and left a board bill of $60. He has a wife and family in England.

"INITIALS ONLY"

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREENE

Mr. Slater was there according to his promise, and after introducing us, briefly stated that we had some evidence to give regarding the terrible occurrence which had just taken place in the house.

George bowed, and the chief spokesman—I am sure he was a police-officer of some kind—asked him to tell what it was.

George drew himself up—George is not one of your tall men, but he makes a very good appearance at times. Then he seemed suddenly to collapse. The sight of their expectation made him feel how flat and childish his story would sound. I, who had shared his adventure, understood his embarrassment, but the others were evidently at a loss to do so, for they glanced askance at each other as he hesitated, and only looked back when I ventured to say:

"It's the peculiarity of the occurrence which affects my husband. The thing we saw may mean nothing."

"Let us hear what it was and we will judge."

Then my husband spoke up, and related our little experience. If it did not create a sensation, it was because these men were well accustomed to surprises of all kinds.

"Washed his hands—a gentleman—out there in the snow—just after the alarm was raised here?" repeated one.

"And you saw him come out of this house?" another put in.

"Yes, sir; we noticed him particularly."

"Can you describe him?"

It was Mr. Slater who put this question; he had less control over himself, and considerable eagerness could be heard in his voice.

"He was a very fine-looking man; unusually tall and unusually striking both in his dress and appearance. What I could see of his face was bare of beard, and very expressive. He walked with the swing of an athlete, and only looked mean and small when he was stooping and dabbling in the snow."

"His clothes. Describe his clothes." There was an odd sound in Mr. Slater's voice.

"He wore a silk hat and there was fur on his overcoat. I think the fur was black."

Mr. Slater stepped back, then moved forward again with a determined air.

"I know the man," said he.

III

THE MAN

"You know the man?"

"I do; or rather, I know a man who answers to this description. He comes here once in a while. I do not know whether or not he was in the building to-night, but Clausen can tell you; no one escapes Clausen's eye."

"His name?"

"Brotherson. A very uncommon person in many respects; quite capable of such an eccentricity, but incapable, I should say, of crime. He's a gifted talker and so well read that he can hold one's attention for hours. Of his tastes, I can only say that they appear to be mainly scientific. But he is not averse to society, and is always very well dressed."

"A taste for science and for fine clothing do not often go together."

"This man is an exception to all rules. The one I'm speaking of, I mean. I don't say that he's the fellow seen pottering in the snow."

"Call up Clausen."

The manager stepped to the telephone.

Meanwhile, George had advanced to speak to a man who had beckoned to him from the other side of the room, and with whom in another moment I saw him step out. Thus deserted, I sank into a chair near one of the windows. Never had I felt more uncomfortable. To attribute guilt to a totally unknown person—a person who is little more to you than a shadowy silhouette against a background of snow—is easy enough and not very disturbing to the conscience. But to hear that person named; given positive attributes; lifted from the indefinite into a living, breathing actuality, is an entirely different proposition. This Brotherson might be the most innocent person alive; and, if so, what had we done? Nothing to congratulate ourselves upon, certainly. And George was not present to comfort and encourage me. He was—

Where was he? The man who had carried him off was the youngest in the group. What had he wanted of George? Those who remained showed no interest in the matter. They had enough to say among themselves. But I was interested—naturally so, and, in my uneasiness, glanced restlessly from the window, the shade of which was up. The outlook was a very peaceful one. This room faced a side street, and, as my eyes fell upon the whitened pavements, I received an answer to one, and that the most anxious, of my queries. This was the street into which we had turned, in the wake of the handsome stranger they were trying at this very moment to identify with Brotherson. George had evidently been asked to point out the exact spot where the man had stopped, for I could see from my vantage point two figures bending near the kerb, and even pawing at the snow whic hlay there. It gave me a slight turn when one of them—I do not think it was George—began to rub his hands together in much the way the unknown gentleman had done, and, in my excitement, I probably uttered some sort of an ejaculation, for I was suddenly conscious of a silence in the room, and when I turned saw all the men about me looking my way.

I attempted to smile, but instead, shuddered painfully, as I raised my hand and pointed down at the street.

"They are imitating the man," I cried; "my husband and—and the person he went out with. It looked dreadful to me; that is all."

One of the gentlemen immediately said some kind words to me, and another smiler in a very encouraging way. But their attention was soon diverted, and so was mine by the entrance of a man in semi-uniform, who was immediately addressed as Clausen.

I knew his face. He was one of the doorkeepers; the oldest employe about the hotel, and the one best liked. I had often exchanged words with him myself.

Mr. Slater at once put the question:

"Has Mr. Brotherson passed your door at any time to-night?"

"Mr. Brotherson! I don't remember, really I don't," was the unexpected reply. "It's not often I forget. But so many people came rushing in during those few minutes, and all so excited—"

"Oh, now I recall him! Yes, Mr. Brotherson went out of my door not many minutes before the cry upstairs. I forgot because I had stepped back from the door to hand a lady the muff she had dropped, and it was at that minute he went out. I just got a glimpse of his back as he passed into the street."

"But you are sure of that back?"

"I don't know another like it, when he wears that big coat of his. But Jim can tell you, sir. He was in the cafe up to that minute, and that's where Mr. Brotherson usually goes first."

"Very well; send up Jim. Tell him I have some orders to give him."

The old man bowed and went out.

Meanwhile, Mr. Slater had exchanged some words with the two officials, and now approached me with an expression of extreme consideration. They were about to excuse me from further participation in this informal inquiry. This I saw before he spoke. Of course they were right. But I should greatly have preferred to stay where I was till George came back.

However, I met him for an instant in the hall before I took the elevator, and later I heard in a round-about way what Jim and some others about the house had to say of Mr. Brotherson.

He was an habitue of the hotel, to the extent of dining once or twice a week in the cafe, and smoking, afterwards, in the public lobby. When he was in the mood for talk, he would draw an ever-enlarging group about him, but at other times he would be seen sitting quite alone and morosely indifferent to all who approached him. There was no mystery about his business. He was an inventor, with one or two valuable patents already on the market. But this was not his only interest. He was an all round sort of man, moody but brilliant in many ways—a character which at once attracted and repelled, odd in that he seemed to set little store by his good looks, yet was most careful to dress himself in a way to show them off to advantage. If he had means beyond the ordinary no one knew it, nor could any man say that he had not. On all personal matters he was very close-mouthed, though he would talk about other men's riches in a way to show that he cherished some very extreme views.

This was all which could be learned about him off-hand, and at so late an hour. I was greatly interested, of course, and had plenty to think of till I saw George again and learned the result of the latest investigations.

Miss Challoner had been shot, not stabbed. No other deduction was possible from such facts as were now known, though the physicians had not yet handed in their report, or even intimated what that report would be. No assailant could have approached or left her, without attracting the notice of some one, if not all of the persons seated at a table in the same room. She could only have been reached by a bullet sent from a point near the head of a small winding staircase connecting the mezzanine floor with a coat-room adjacent to the front door.

Two windows look upon Broadway, and the party wall is unbroken by window, door or other opening. It follows then that the only possible means of approach to this room lies through an archway, or from the elevator door. But the elevator made no stop at the mezzanine on or near the time of the attack upon Miss Challoner; nor did any one leave the table or pass by it in either direction till after the alarm given by her fall.

But a bullet calls for no approach. A man at the bottom of the staircase might raise and fire his pistol without attracting any attention to himself. The music, which all acknowledge was at its full climax at this moment, would drown the noise of the explosion, and the staircase, out of view of all but the victim, afford the same means of immediate escape, which it must have given of secret and unseen approach. The coat-room into which it descended communicated with the lobby very near the main entrance, and if Mr. Brotherson were the man, his sudden appearance there would thus be accounted for.

To be sure, this gentleman had not been noticed in the coatroom by the man then in charge, but if the latter had been engaged at that instant, as he often was, in hanging up or taking down a coat from the rack, a person might easily pass by him and disappear into the lobby without attracting his attention. So many people passed that way from the dining-room beyond, and so many of these were tall, fine-looking and well-dressed.

It began to look bad for this man, if indeed he were the one we had seen under the street-lamp; and, as George and I reviewed the situation, we felt our position to be serious enough for us severally to set down our impressions of this man before we lost our first vivid idea. I do not know what George wrote, for he sealed his words up as soon as he had finished writing, but this is what I put on paper while my memory was still fresh and my excitement unabated:

He had the look of a man of powerful intellect and determined will, who shudders while he triumphs; who outwardly washes his hands of a deed over which he inwardly gloats. This was when he first rose from the snow. Afterwards he had a moment of fear; plain, human, everyday fear. But this was evanescent. Before he had turned to go, he showed the self-possession of one who feels himself so secure, or is so well-satisfied with himself, that he is no longer conscious of other emotions.

"Poor fellow," I commented aloud, as I folded up these words; "he reckoned without you, George. By to-morrow he will be in the hands of the police."

"Poor fellow?" he repeated. "Better say 'Poor Miss Challoner!' They tell me she was one of those perfect women who reconcile even the pessimist to humanity and the age we live in. Why any one should want to kill her is a mystery; but why this man should—There! no one professes to explain it. They simply go by the facts. To-morrow surely must bring strange revelations."

And with this sentence ringing in my mind, I lay down and endeavoured to sleep. But it was not till very late that rest came. The noise of passing feet, though muffled beyond their wont, roused me in spite of myself. These footsteps might be those of some late arrival, or they might be those of some wary detective intent on business far removed from the usual routine of life in this great hotel.

I recalled the glimpse I had had of the writing-room in the early evening, and imagined it as it was now, with Miss Challoner's body removed and the incongruous flitting of strange and busy figures across its fatal floors, measuring distances and peering into corners, while hundreds slept above and about them in undisturbed repose.

Then I thought of him, the suspected and possibly guilty one. In visions over which I had little if any control, I saw him in all the restlessness of a slowly dying down excitement—the surroundings strange and unknown to me, the figure not—walking too quiet; facing the past; facing the future; knowing, perhaps, for the first time in his life what it was for crime and remorse to murder sleep. I could not think of him as lying still—slumbering like the rest of mankind, in the hope and expectation of a busy morrow. Crime perpetrated looms no large in the soul, and this man had a soul as big as his body; if that I was assured. That its instincts were cruel and inherently evil, did not lessen its capacity for suffering. And he was suffering now; I could not doubt it, remembering the lovely face and fragrant memory of the noble woman he had, under some unknown impulse, sent to an unmerited doom.

At last I slept, but it was only to rouse again with the same quick realization of my surroundings, which I had experienced on my recovery from my fainting fit of hours before. Someone had stopped at our door before hurrying by down the hall. Who was that someone? I rose on my elbow and endeavoured to peer through the dark. Of course, I could see nothing. But when I woke a second time, there was enough light in the room, early as it undoubtedly was, for me to detect a letter lying on the carpet just inside the door.

Instantly I was on my feet. Catching the letter up, I carried it to the window. Our two names were on it—Mr. and Mrs. George Anderson: the writing, Mr. Slater's.

I glanced over at George. He was sleeping peacefully. It was too early to wake him, but I could not lay that letter down unread; was not my name on it? Tearing it open, I devoured its contents,—the exclamation I made on reading it, waking George.

The writing was in Mr. Slater's hand, and the words were:

"I must request, at the instance of Coroner Heath and such of the police as listened to your adventure, that you make no further mention of what you saw in the street under our windows last night. The doctors find no bullet in the wound. This clears Mr. Brotherson."

IV.

SWEET LITTLE MISS CLARKE.

When we took our seats at the breakfast-table, it was with the feeling of being no longer looked upon as connected in any way with this case. Yet our interest in it was, if anything, increased, and when I saw George casting furtive glances at a certain table behind me, I leaned over and asked him the reason, being sure that the people whose faces I saw reflected in the mirror directly before us had something to do with the great matter then engrossing us.

His answer conveyed the somewhat exciting information that the four persons seated in my rear were the same four who had been reading at the round table in the mezzanine at the time of Miss Challoner's death.

Instantly they absorbed all my attention, though I dared not give them a direct look, and continued to observe them only in the glass.

"Is it one family?" I asked.

"Yes, and a very respectable one. Transients, of course, but very well known in Denver. The lady is not the mother of the boys, but their aunt. The boys belong to the gentleman, who is a widower."

"Their word ought to be good."

George nodded.

"The boys look wide-awake enough if the father does not. As for the aunt, she is sweetness itself. Do they still insist that Miss Challoner was the only person in the room with them at this time?"

"They did last night. I don't know how they will meet this statement of the doctor's."

"George!"

He leaned nearer.

"Have you ever thought that she might have been a suicide? That she stabbed herself?"

"No, for in that case a weapon would have been found."

"And are you sure that none was?"

"Positive. Such a fact could not have been kept quiet. If a weapon had been picked up there would be no mystery, and no necessity for further police investigation."

(To be continued)

DOCTORS COULD NOT HELP HIM

BUT DIN PILLS DID

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone in the Bladder. He decided to operate but said the stone was too large to remove and too hard to crush. I returned home and was recommended by a friend to try Gin Pills.

They relieved the pain. I took two boxes and went back to the specialist. He said the stone was smaller but he could not remove it although he tried for two hours and a half. I returned home and continued to take Gin Pills—and, to my surprise and joy, I passed the stone. Gin Pills are the best medicine in the world, and, because they did me so much good, I will recommend them all the rest of my life".

Sciatica AND Lumbago

Suffered for Twenty-five Years and Could Get No Relief

Now Tells of the Wonderful Results Obtained by the Use of

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Sciatica, neuralgia and sciatic rheumatism are the result of a run-down nervous system. For this reason all treatments must necessarily fail which do not build up the nervous system.

Mr. Collins suffered for twenty-five years and never was able to obtain satisfactory treatment until he began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. While the Nerve Food forms new blood and restores the exhausted nervous system, the Kidney-Liver Pills invigorate the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

Mr. W. T. Collins, Morpeth, Ont., writes: "It affords me pleasure to be able to speak favourably of two of Dr. Chase's medicines—the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. I had been a sufferer for twenty-five years from sciatica, lumbago and neuralgia and tried almost all the medicines I could hear of, without one particle of benefit, until I commenced to use Dr. Chase's. I noticed an improvement before I had used two boxes, and the benefits obtained by continued use have been wonderful. I have so much confidence in these two medicines that I have recommended them to dozens of my friends, and I have yet to hear of a single case in which they failed to give satisfaction."

Dr. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THE APPROACH OF SPRING

Although in the calendar of the average advertising man the autumn season starts the business year, yet it is an undoubted fact that spring is probably the season which offers the most and the best opportunities to the greatest number of advertisers.

The approach of spring and the return of the outdoor season marks a quickening of the business pulse in almost every department of life.

Human instincts seem to follow Nature in her awakening to a new life, and "preparation" within and without the home is the keynote of the spring months.

THE SPRING CLEANING SEASON.

The spring-cleaning season alone is responsible for a huge demand upon the resources of the majority of business houses, for the task of cleaning and redecorating a house inside and out implies a brisk demand, not only for domestic cleaners, such as furniture cream, polishes, carpet soaps, scouring soaps, metal polishes, pails, brooms, dusters, vacuum cleaners, carpet sweepers, household soaps, soap powder, disinfectants, but for other articles which are used upon a most liberal scale by builders, decorators, etc., such as paints, enamels, wallpapers, etc.

Here then we find quite a host of businesses affected directly by the coming of spring. Opportunities for effective business-bringing advertising are so numerous and so obvious that it is unnecessary to dwell upon them at further length.

But beyond these there is a lot of business which indirectly results from the general turnover to which the home is subjected by the housewife. She finds her curtains shabby, her upholstery needs renewing, various articles must be replaced, there are new carpets and floor coverings to be bought. The advertiser can make a number of useful suggestions to householders, and thereby strengthen considerably the buying spirit which is abroad at this period.

To paraphrase it: In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to—furniture.

Thus the early months of the year afford the house furnisher a golden opportunity. Tactfully-worded advertising devised in harmony with the season and with an eye to those who are about to marry, can pull quite a lot of business on a comparatively large scale.

SPRING CLOTHING.

The clothier must also get busy in the spring, for the demands upon his resources are indeed limitless. Throughout the house and for herself personally and her family the housewife has a multitude of wants which a clothier can fill and fill very profitably if he is disposed to prepare by good advertising to get his full measure of spring trade.

The bright weather also inspires thoughts of new spring garments for milady and her daughters, to say nothing of the new suits and new footwear required by the males of the family. Accordingly, each family apportions a more or less large sum of money to be spent upon clothing of all kinds, boots, hats, underwear, etc.

Thus far we have dealt simply with the inevitable requirements of the average man, woman and child in the early part of the year. The proportion of profit which will fall to any particular trader will certainly depend upon the effort he makes to get it. The main point is that it is there to be got, and the man who fails to attract the fair proportion to his doors will find that a more enterprising competitor gets his share.

OUT-OF-DOOR NEEDS.

But there are other things which, although they may not be included under the head of inevitable wants, yet are bound to come with more or less certainty. The opening of the outdoor season brings a host of needs in its train. Travelling and sports are responsible for heavy demands upon a variety of businesses to supply a multitude of wants, including travelling outfits, bags, rugs, requisites for sports and outdoor games, cycling, etc., whilst hotels and railway companies should prepare to profit by the demands of the week-enders and Easter holiday-makers.

Gardening is, of course, one of the most important of the spring industries, and nurserymen, seedsmen and manufacturers of garden tools, lawn mowers, etc., can easily reap a rich harvest by aggressive, suggestive and sales promoting—advertising.

We might go on and fill columns by merely mentioning the names of the various businesses affected by the wants of the average human being in the spring, but the list already given is sufficient to show that the spring season is one of the greatest—if not the greatest—buying seasons of the whole year, and the results achieved by those advertisers who have acted upon this knowledge fully justify the time and forethought expended upon a campaign of publicity for the purpose of capturing a goodly share of the season's business.

THE SEASONAL NOTE.

The seasonal note is, of course, the right note to strike in all spring advertising, and the announcements should be as suggestive as possible. Human nature is certainly more responsive to the influence of suggestion in the early part of the year, a circumstance no doubt due to that mysterious uprising of a new hope which so surely comes even to the oldest and most pessimistic of us, in the young months of the calendar.

A spring campaign cannot be started on the spur of the moment; it should not be left too late to give a full measure of thought to the details. The time to get to work is now, and between the completion of your plans and the appearance of the first spring advertisement in the daily papers, every detail, not only of the advertising but of the literature, such as booklets, circulars, etc., and follow up letters should be carefully and critically overhauled with a view to strengthening every point and making sure that the pull for business is as strong and serviceable as it may be made.

The Morphine Supply Shut Off

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—A figure clad in stripes shambled toward a guard in Sing Sing Prison shortly after roll call. He gazed furtively about, cautiously raised three fingers and shuffled back into line. The guard, whistling aimlessly, strolled over.

"Nothin' doin'," he articulated from the side of his mouth. "I couldn't get you a 'shot' for a thousand dollars.

It was Sing Sing's way of announcing that the illicit traffic in morphine opium, cocaine, and other drugs, which had been going on for years, has ceased. For almost the first time in the history of the penitentiary scores of pasty-faced culprits went without the daily grain of narcotic that to some means more than life itself.

Seven Guards Dismissed.

It became known yesterday that seven of the fourscore guards have been dismissed for bringing drugs, whisky, and tobacco into the prison. Others are one the verge of dismissal.

According to Warden John S. Kennedy and William A. McCabe, confidential agent of Superintendent of Prisons, Joseph F. Scott, there has been an organized "morphine ring" working both without and within the prison. This ring, consisting of guards, convicts, ex-convicts, and others, was so strongly entrenched that its members openly boasted two months ago when Chief McCabe began his work that "nobody could be caught with the goods."

Liable to a Year in Prison.

Yet seven members of the ring, including Keeper George Barrett, who had been at the prison four years, have been dismissed, and they have escaped prosecution only because of valuable information they have given Mr. McCabe and Warden Kennedy.

"These men are guilty of a misdemeanour," said Warden Kennedy, "and are liable to a year in prison. The practise of bringing narcotics is so abhorrent and so morally disaffecting that the prison officers guilty of it should be treated as felons."

Admits Illicit Traffic.

Cheif McCabe admitted that thousands of dollars' worth of drugs have been illicitly conveyed to the convicts.

"A guard is paid $56 a month when he enters the service," said Chief McCabe. "He is advanced at the rate of $60 a year until he receives $75 a month. It has been a comparatively easy matter for some guards to earn many times their salaries through the illegal smuggling in of dope to the prisoners.

"Almost daily 'friskings' are going on at Sing Sing now, and credit for the cleaning out of the 'drug ring' is due entirely to Superintendent Scott.

"Many persons outside of the guards and convicts," he says, "are concerned in the traffic. There are ex-convicts and other friends of the prisoners who supply the money, illegal drug stores in New York from which the drugs are procured and certain tradesstores in New York from which tradesmen and others in this town who, perhaps unwittingly, have aided in the smuggling."

Money and Drugs in Mail.

Chief McCabe explained this last statement by saying that he had discovered a butcher shop in Ossining where mail sent to "John Jones," "Bill Brown," "Sam Smith," etc., was delivered to guards who called for them. These letters and packages contained money and drugs. The money the guards kept, the drugs they smuggled into the cells.

The two hundred men in the prison addicted to the use of drugs adopted the expediency of bribing the guards only after resources had failed them. Visitors to the convicts are so carefully watched and searched in some instances that nothing can be smuggled into the prison.

Men of superior sense are not usually found among those of the highest fortune.

We find means to cure folly, but none to reclaim a distorted mind.

The great business of man is to improve his mind and govern his manners; all other projects and pursuits, whether in our power to compass or not, are only amusements.

The mind needs diversion in order to make thought stronger.

Neglected Colds Lead to Consumption

Unless a complete cure is effected the inflammation passes rapidly to the throat's bronchial tubes and then to the lungs.

You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or a new nose—hence consumption is practically incurable.

In using Catarrhozone you don't take medicine into the stomach—you just breathe a healing piney vapor direct to the lungs and air passages.

Catarrhozone
Guaranteed to Cure

The purest balsams and the greatest antiseptics are thus sent to every spot where catarrhal trouble exists—germs are killed, foul secretions are destroyed, nature is given a chance and cure comes quickly.

Colds and throat troubles can't last if the pure healing vapor of Catarrhozone is breathed—sneezing and coughing cease at once, because irritation is removed.

Use Catarrhozone to prevent—use it to cure your winter ills—it's pleasant, safe, and guaranteed in every case. 25c., 50c., and $1.00 sizes. Sold by all dealers. By mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

RIDER SAYS HE WOULD HAVE FAILED BUT FOR ZAM-BUK.

Mr. Thompson-Clarke, of Vancouver, Secretary of the British Columbia Football Association, has just reached London, Eng., after riding from Vancouver to Montreal—3,600 miles—on a bicycle.

Interviewed after his long ride, Mr. Thompson-Clarke told a story of terrible hardship, and showed how it was only by the aid of the great herbal healer, Zam-Buk, that he was able to finish his gigantic task. He said:—

"Before leaving Vancouver, I played in the Football Championship, and received a nasty kick on my leg. I bandaged it up and thought it was not sufficiently serious to upset my programme for my long cycle ride, but when I got to Salmon Arm, B.C., about 300 miles from Vancouver, I was hardly able to use the limb. The wound had been aggravated by the dust and friction of my stocking, and it looked as if I were going to have to abandon my trip altogether.

"At Salmon Arm, an Indian—one of the Thompson Indians—came forward and asked me what was the matter, and on hearing that I had a poisoned wound, suggested that I should use some salve which he said possessed extraordinary power.

"It proved to be a box of Zam-Buk, and he gave it to me in exchange for one of my photographs. I cleansed the wound and applied the Zam-Buk. It soothed the wound wonderfully and after a little delay I was able to cycle off with only slight discomfort.

"I continued the Zam-Buk treatment, and in ten days there was hardly a sign of the wound. Not only on that occasion, but later on throughout my arduous journey I found Zam-Buk an indispensable aid.

"I used it also for chapping of the face, caused by the ice-cold winds which I met with in the Rocky Mountains. In future, on my long rides I shall always carry a box of Zam-Buk after having thus thoroughly tested it and proved its great value.

"You can publish this letter along with photograph just as you wish.

THE GREAT SKIN-CURE

THE SHAMPOO.

All sorts of rules are laid down about the washing of the hair, but the problem must be solved by every woman for herself. The method and frequency of the shampoo must depend on the nature of the hair, her occupation, and on the water supply.

Where the water is so hard as to require a great deal of borax, ammonia, or other water softener, it is a mistake to wash fine hair very often. Brushing with powder should sometimes be made to do the work of a shampoo. Very strong hair, however, especially if it is inclined to be overgreasy, is only improved by such additions to the water used for washing.

When the hair still has a disappointing look of grayness after washing it is usually because it has not been washed sufficiently well. Many women who will invariably wash a pocket handkerchief, or scrub their finger nails, into a condition of absolute purity, will only half wash their hair, owing to a mistaken idea that they are taking particular care of it. Three distinct soapings and rinsings are not too many to give if you wish your hair to be glossy and fragrant.

The average woman rolls her hair in a towel for a few moments while she slips on her kimono, after a shampoo, and then kneels before a fire to complete the drying process. Here again strong hair will not suffer, but exposure to strong heat is very injurious to fine, dry hair. No intelligent owner of a valuable muff would think of putting it in front of a stove to dry—yet thereabouts she will keep her infinitely more valuable hair after it has been washed.

In summer weather an open window is the best drying place, in winter a warm but airy room.

There used to be a popular superstition to the effect that hair which was combed while wet would never curl and never grow longer. Probably it was invented by some ingenious mother who knew that it is impossible to comb damp, tangled hair without breaking, and wished to keep your daughter from the errors of impatience.

HIS DANCE PROGRAMME.

1—Two-step. X.
2—Waltz. Miss Brown, pink lady.
3—Two-step. Miss VanSant, blue.
4—Waltz. X.
5—Two-step. Miss Dusall, red, black in hair.
6—Waltz. Miss Dawson, old rose.
7—Two-step. Miss Barnes, gold locket.
8—Waltz.—Miss McKay.
9—Two-step. Miss Buchannon.

"Son," said the mother that evening, "what are those remarks after your partners' names? Miss Brown would not be pleased to know she had been called the pink lady."

"Why, mother, that's all right. Lots of the fellows mark their programmes like that. You see, a fellow can't always remember a girl when he meets her for the first time, there are so many of them. So, to avoid embarrassment, he notes some distinguishing mark. Now, Miss Brown wore a pink dress. The X indicates, of course, the girl I accompanied to the dance. Miss Dusall wore a red dress, but so did others, so to be sure not to waste any time hunting her I noted that she had a black band around her hair. The girls with whom I am acquainted I know without any descriptive notes. Oh, it's all right, mother. In that way we never have to go up to a girl and ask her if she is herself."—Indianapolis News.

All He Wanted.

A man whose career had confined his knowledge of things to eat to such standard products as ham and eggs and pork and beans found himself among a company who ordered intelligently from an extensive bill of fare, relates the Chicago Post. It contained so many classified dishes as to make a fair-sized book, the pages of which he pawed aimlessly and in dismay. The waiter who needed only his order to go to the kitchen was standing at one side deferentially with his order slip and pencil in hand.

The delay was noticeable and irritating to the unskilled diner, and finally he pointed blindly to the middle of the page with his finger.

"Give me some of that," he said.

The waiter looked over his shoulder and remarked:

"That's mayonnaise dressing, sir."

"I know it. I can read."

"But" (apologetically) "what will you have it on, sir?"

"On a plate, you bonehead!. Do you feed your customers in troughs here?"

MIXED RELATIONS.

A lawyer received a call from a new client, a man bent upon recovering a sum of money advanced upon a note and not repaid.

"Who is the debtor?" asked the lawyer.

"Oh, she's a relative of mine."

"How nearly related?"

"Very nearly."

"But, my dear sir," persisted the lawyer, "you must be more explicit."

"Well, she may be my mother-in-law."

"May be? Then you are likely to marry her daughter?"

"I've already married the daughter."

"Then, of course, the defendant is your mother-in-law."

"Perhaps you'd better hear the whole story," returned the client. "You see, a year ago we lived together, my son and I. Across the way lived the Widow Foster and her daughter Mary. I married Mary and my son married the widow. Now, perhaps you can tell me whether my son's wife is my mother-in-law or my daughter-in-law."

The lawyer did not answer. The problem was unfamiliar. He was not ready.

"I don't think I can take your case," he said. "It presents too many complications."

"Very well," returned the man, taking his hat despondently. "But there's one thing I forgot. Since our double wedding a child has been born to each of us. What relation are those two children to each other?"—Oil City Blizzard.

TALES OF THE POSTAL POLICE

Inspector Reddy Tells of His Experiences in Ferreting Out Crimes Against Uncle Sam's Mail Service

A NOTORIOUS bank burglar once remarked that he would rather be captured by a pack of bloodhounds than by a Post Office inspector. He hinted that he had done a thriving business cracking bank safes, but he had always eluded capture until, succumbing to temptation, he blew a little post office safe because it looked "dead easy."

"That was my finish," he said. "Two Post Office inspectors camped on my trail for nine months. I led them a merry chase through nearly every State in the Union before they got me. They got me all right, and I got a long term for the measly little $15 I got out of that safe. I learned my lesson, and I learned it well. To-day no one has a more wholesome respect for Uncle Sam's property than yours truly."

One of the inspectors referred to by the burglar is T. M. Reddy, for twenty-two years in the postal service and for the last five or six years attached to the New York office. A month ago he resigned to become the New York representative of the Federal Advisory Commission.

For many years Reddy was attached to the North Carolina district. His territory extended into the wild and remote mountainous regions, and there he was brought in daily contact with moonshiners and other lawless persons who spent their lives in the fastnesses of the mountains, rarely, if ever, coming out into the open or descending to the lowlands.

"I guess I had more real action right there in the North Carolina mountains than I've ever had before or since," said Reddy. "I have figured in many big and sensational cases since I went to New York, but my life hung in the balance more times in that moonshine country than I care to think about. Now that it's all behind me, I often think that I was the luckiest man ever born to get away with my life.

"My initiation into that country was peculiar in the first place. I was making my headquarters at Greensboro when ordered by the Washington office to go to a point in the mountains about fifty miles west of Asheville. That meant a horseback ride from Asheville, and it was my first time on a horse at that. A little post office had been robbed, and as this was one of a series of such robberies the Chief was very anxious to run down the band of yeggs who were operating so successfully.

The Bell Signals.

"My first day in the mountains convinced me that my work was cut out for me and that I was among a class of people strange and, to say the least, extremely rude. I was following a little trail up a mountainside when a rifle barked and my hat flopped to the road. I looked about me, pulling my gun as I did. Then another shot rang out and my pistol clattered to the road. I had been shot through the forearm. I then realized that it was best to await developments.

"Nearby I heard a bell ring. It sounded like an old fashioned triangle used at some farmhouses to call the hands in for dinner. In the distance I heard other and similar bells strike. Pretty soon one of the wildest looking specimens of humanity I ever saw clambered from behind a tree and slouched up to me.

"'Who be yer, stranger, and what yer after in these parts, anyhow?' was his greeting.

"I told him I was a stranger trying to make my way before nightfall to the little hamlet where the robbery had occurred. He had me covered with his rifle, and after ordering me to hold up my hands he very carefully inspected the contents of my saddle bags; made me turn my pockets inside out, and when assured that I wasn't one of 'them d—— revenues' he ordered me to proceed up the trail ahead of him. He took me to his cabin, where his wife, who was quite as wild and unkempt in appearance as her husband, bandaged up my arm and then prepared dinner for me.

"The bell I heard was to warn those further up the mountain that a suspicious looking stranger had entered the glen. Other signal men sent the note of alarm along until my approach had been heralded for miles beyond the spot where I got my first taste of a moonshiner's bullet.

"But the chap who shot me, after satisfying himself that I wasn't a 'rev.' and that I was all right, passed me along, and I had no further trouble reaching my destination. On my return trip it was a description furnished by the man who shot me of some strange looking men who had passed over the same trail a day or two previous that led to the capture of the safe blowers. On this clew I followed them into Asheville and then South until I reached Charleston, S. C. There I got close on their tracks again, and before I had been there two days succeeded in arresting six of them, among them 'Ohio Hump,' 'Portland Ned' and 'Connecticut Shorty,' three of the most notorious yeggs in the country. All got good long terms.

"A strange thing happened in connection with that 'pinch.' After sweating the 'Ohio Hump' for ten hours without a minute's let up he told me why the gang had made for Charleston. It seemed they got little cash out of their North Carolina jobs and they needed funds. A man by the name of Rudolph Ravens was a resident of Charleston, and to all intents and purposes a highly respectable citizen and a very prosperous grocer. He, it seems, ran a 'fence' known to all the yeggs, and he would always come to their rescue with funds in case they got stranded or were arrested. We laid for Ravens, caught him with the goods on him, got a confession from him and sent him to the federal prison for a long term. He was said to be the wealthiest and most powerful ally the yeggs ever had.

Here Reddy paused to greet a caller who said he had run over from Philadelphia to "report progress." It transpired that he was a reformed money order swindler, a man Reddy had sent up for five years and at the termination of whose term had landed him a good job. That was three years ago, and according to the former inspector, he has made good in every particular.

The Money Order Swindle.

"I'll tell you about that chap," said Reddy after speeding his guest on his way. "I was attached to the New England district when we received complaints from Lewiston, Me., Boston and other New England cities that a number of money order blanks had been stolen and that the thief was filling them out and getting them cashed in stores at the rate of about $300 a day. It seemed the swindler would visit drug stores having sub-post office stations attached and introduce himself by stating that he wished to buy that, or a similar establishment. The proprietor, as a rule, would show him over the premises and while inspecting the sub-station and its books the visitor would invariably manage to steal a number of the money order blanks. He would then skip town and at the next stop visit some store, make purchases and tender a money order for an amount double that of his purchase. He would invariably get the change and then visit other stores with similar results.

"I trailed that fellow for three months. I was always anywhere from two to four days behind him. These money orders would go through the banks, and that caused delay. After flooding the country with descriptive circulars of him I caught him red handed in a piano store in New Haven. There he had represented himself as a Yale student and had bought a piano, tendering a money order for $100, out of which he volunteered to make a first payment of $25 on the piano. He made a clean breast when I got him. I learned he was from a splendid family, and as they refused to have anything further to do with him I interested myself in his behalf, and when he convinced me he wanted another chance to make good I got him a job. He is doing fine, but once a month he comes to see me and reports. He was put away under the name of Lewis Eckbert, but that isn't his right name, and I won't reveal it for only his employer and myself know his history.

Returning to his experiences in North Carolina, Reddy related an incident which he declares was the narrowest escape from death he ever had.

"A big mail robbery was reported," the one time inspector continued, "somewhere between Burnsville and Asheville, N. C. The two points are about fifty miles apart and the road winds through one of the wildest and bleakest parts of that country. It was in the dead of winter and bitterly cold. A star route carrier by the name of Charles Gilbert would bring the mail from Burnsville to Asheville one day, returning the next. It was a horseback trip and a hard one at the best of times. Burnsville had many thriving industries and I was surprised to learn that the missing registered package had contained $75,000 in negotiable securities and about $3,000 in cash. As the pouch from which the registered matter had been taken was found to have a long slit in it I at once surmised that Gilbert had either stolen the money or else lost it. So I camped all along his route for three weeks. I watched him from every possible angle and vantage point and nearly froze to death doing so.

"One day my long vigil bore fruit. As Gilbert descended a steep mountain path instead of keeping to the beaten trail he made a detour into the woods. I was close behind him. He dismounted and tying his horse plunged into the underbrush and, making his way to a wild and rugged glen, descended to the bottom of a precipice whose sides were almost perpendicular.

"He scratched around in the leaves for a time and finally began to dig. He worked away until he brought to the surface a tin box, which he unlocked. He took out several bank notes and reburied the rest of his loot.

The Fight in the Woods.

"Then he began his tortuous climb up the side of the precipice. Many times he would have to climb hand over hand. But as he had the strength of an ox that was not difficult for him. I was stationed behind a big tree with my pistol in hand. As he reached the surface I stepped out and, ordering "hands up," approached him.

"He knew he was caught all right, so he made no resistance at first. I took his two pistols from him and was getting the handcuffs adjusted to his wrists when he caught me off my guard and with a blow to my jaw sent me staggering. I dropped my pistol in the scuffle, so we stood on even terms, neither having a gun at hand.

"Believe me when I tell you that for the next five minutes there was the liveliest knock down and drag out fight you would care to see. We scrapped all over that road, he trying his best to work me over to the side of the precipice and there drop me over.

"Finally I got an arm free and succeeded in landing a stiff punch on his mouth, which I was enabled to follow up with another. Several more blows flush on his jaw managed to weaken him, and I then threw him. Before I finished the job I had him handcuffed and bog tied, hand and foot. I had decided it was best to take no more chances with that tartar.

"I dug up his treasure box and found all the securities intact and nearly all of the money. Then I took Mr. Gilbert into Asheville, where he was tried and sent to the Federal Prison at Atlanta for a long stay. But for pure cussedness and brute strength that fellow—and he was a man close to fifty years old—took the palm. He could hit like a trip hammer, and the worst of it was he knew how to hit, for his blows cut like a knife. I was a sight when I got to Asheville, and I don't think my own mother would have recognized me until I was able to remove some of the stains of the battle."

Reddy bears several of the scars of that battle to this day, and they will go with him to his grave.

Upon the departure of a silk hatted and frock coated visitor to the Reddy offices the erstwhile inspector burst into laughter, saying:—"I never see a man in that uniform that it doesn't recall one of the most amusing, but for a time one of the equallest, experiences I ever had. A rural carrier had falsified his application blank and a Civil Service inspector came down to look up the case. Washington notified me to accompany him. We went to High Point, N. C., and, procuring a buggy and pair of horses, started off into the back country for a forty mile drive. We were proceeding through a dense forest, which I knew was a moonshine stronghold, when suddenly a shot rang out and bells began to ring. At once I knew what I was up against. The Civil Service agent had been sent from Washington at short notice and he wore a high hat and a frock coat.

"Well, sir, when the second fusillade of shots rang out, despite the fact my horses were snorting and plunging in a frenzy of fear, my guest took a flying leap from the buggy, and the next I saw of him he was streaking it down the road as if the devil himself was after him. As serious as the situation was the ridiculous side of it appealed so strongly to me that I was in paroxysms of laughter until I realized that about a dozen rifles were barking out at the retreating form of the fleeing agent.

"My horses had become almost uncontrollable until one was laid low by a bullet and the top of my buggy riddled. Then two men, rifles in hand, sprang from the underbrush and held me up. It didn't take me long to tell who I was and what we were doing there. Satisfying them that we were not revenue agents I went after my friend, whom I found hiding in the bushes about a mile down the road. He decided then and there that he had had enough of the moonshine country, and under no circumstances would he make the return trip over that road. I had to send him around another way and make my way back to High Point with one horse, leaving the other dead in the road. One of the men who held us up told me that he had never seen a high hat before and that he had taken a potshot at it for luck. And he had riddled it."

Moonshiners Are Generous.

A moonshiner's generosity and hospitality, once he knows the invader of his stronghold is not connected with the Internal Revenue Department or on mischief bent, is second only to his ferocity, Reddy declares, and he cites many instances where, after having been put through the third degree, his tormentors tried to outdo each other in heaping favors upon him, mostly in the form of jugs of "corn likker."

"An episode of this sort came mighty near getting me in trouble once," said the former inspector, "and for a time revenue officers thought they had in me a peddler of the wet goods for a nearby blind tiger still.

"I had to investigate the robbery of a remote and isolated little post office in Stokes county, North Carolina. My route lay through the very stronghold of moonshining in North Carolina. There was a still every mile or so, and the men who owned them were all banded together for self-preservation and protection. It was a country in which revenue officers only visited in squads. When a raid was planned not less than a hundred officers were sent. That meant a pitched battle, lasting sometimes several days. These battles were fought with varying results. Sometimes a few of the moonshiners were captured and their stills broken up, but more often the revenue party retreated with depleted ranks, bearing their dead and wounded among them.

"I had been through the country on several previous occasions and was known to all the pickets. They passed me along from post to post, and I reached my destination without mishap of any sort. On the return trip all the sentries were on the lookout for me. Each came to my buggy and silently deposited a gallon jug of newly made corn whiskey or apple brandy. By the time I had cleared the moonshine district I had every inch of available space in my buggy filled.

"As I approached the next town I met a party of a dozen strangers riding along.

"They were armed to the teeth, and I at once surmised it was a group of raid bent Revenuers.

"'Where you been?' the leader sang out.

"I told him I was just winding up a forty mile drive.

"'What yer got in them jugs?' was the next query.

"'Corn liquor,' I told him.

"'Throw up your hands,' was the next command, and as I glanced up I was looking into the muzzle of a dozen rifles.

"Then they unloaded my buggy. They were experts, all right, for they seemed to know the brand contained in every jug. I had to tumble out of the buggy and stand covered while the buggy was searched. A Post Office Inspector they had never heard of, and they greeted the declaration that I was a government officer with derisive laughter.

The Dog Swindle.

"The jugs were reloaded in the buggy, I was ordered to resume my seat and silently they surrounded me and took up the march to the next town. I was under arrest and all my protestations went for naught. Of course, when we arrived at the Post Office I had no trouble in establishing my identity, but my captors confiscated the liquor. They said they intended to destroy it, but I always had my doubts as to its final disposition. And it was the very best stuff made in North Carolina, too.

"That was an amusing case in which a number of wealthy New York sportsmen were swindled by a sick countryman living at Kernersville, a little town between Greensboro and Winston-Salem. Jordon was his name—Sam Jordon—and he cleaned up $2,500 before I got him. He inserted advertisements in all the sporting journals describing his fine kennels of hunting dogs. These he offered at prices from $75 to $300. All were registered, his advertisements stated, and each had a pedigree dating back a century.

"From the number of complaints that began to pour in on me it was evident that Sam had been doing a land office business. Many of the complainants wrote that after sending their check for the dog they specified, either a gun shy, mousey, half breed pointer or setter would arrive, or else a letter would come from Jordon saying that the dog purchased died on the day of shipment, but as he was the property of the purchaser from the moment the check was sent the loss was his and not the writer's.

"I learned that there had been an epidemic of dog stealing in and around Kernersville, but, strange to say, Jordon was not suspected. Some of the dogs stolen were valuable hunting dogs, but more often they were half breeds that hung around livery stables. I soon got on Sam's trail and arrested him. He made a clean breast of the whole swindle, and he left Kernersville for the Greensboro Jail, where he served out his term. But before he was caught up with some of Kernersville's best known stray dogs were gracing the kennels of some of our wealthiest sportsmen. I might add that the same pedigree did service for every dog shipped."

Commenting on his retirement from the service Reddy said he now hoped to settle down to normal life.

Meanest Criminals.

"Men in the service," he added, "never know one day from the other where they will be sent. Even a gypsy's life is more stable than ours, and the number of swindlers we are constantly called on to run down go a long way toward destroying one's confidence in fellow man. Unless you had access to the Post Office records you would be surprised to know the number of men enjoying untarnished reputations who engage in nefarious schemes, by use of the mails, to separate the unwary from their hard earned savings. The get rich quick artist plies a flourishing trade here in New York, and together with E. H. Kincaid, his brother inspector, my whole time since coming to New York has been taken up in investigating these concerns, and they were legion.

"Within the last six years, or since Kincaid was placed in charge of the local fraud cases, nearly a thousand concerns have been investigated and put out of business. Most of these we worked up together. There are a hundred others flourishing here now. All are being watched. Some are manifestly crooked, yet they are sailing just within the law. They will become more and more greedy as time wears on and do something that will bring the inspectors down upon them. Then it will be all off with them, and it will be the pen for theirs.

"There is no meaner criminal than he who lures unsuspecting and confiding widows and persons of small means to invest their little hoards in his enterprises upon promises of big dividends. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred it is the poor who fall for these schemes. And the strangest part of it is that they apparently resent our interference, believing, I suppose, that had the crooks been let alone all would have worked out well and they would have received their promised dividends.

"Take the Burr Brothers' raid, for instance. I worked on that case from beginning to end. Of the millions of dollars that flowed into their offices the greater part of it was in sums ranging from fifty to a hundred dollars, subscribed by poor persons who believed that the chance was at hand whereby they could quadruple their little capital. It was practically the same with all the other get rich quick raids. When the crash came an army of weeping, frenzied men and women would crowd around, begging us to save something out of the wreck that they might not be left penniless.

"That's one reason why I preferred my work in this fourth. There we had many hard cases to work up involving mental and physical exertion and every hardship that could be heaped upon a stranger in a strange land. [illegible] different class of [illegible] with. It was either the hardened criminal or the [illegible] ever dangerous [illegible] or the [illegible] ignorant citizen or rural official who [illegible] what was the right. We never had [illegible] cases disappointed a hearty [illegible] set out to rob the poor. In all my [illegible] in the South I didn't have half a dozen fraud cases.

"But the life has its thrills and rarely gets monotonous. Uncle Sam is just as relentless in his pursuit of the fellow who steals a postage stamp as one who robs the mails of thousands. I have gone hop-skipping and jumping over this entire country after a man whose total thefts didn't amount to $25. He had violated the postal laws, however, and I was up to me to get him. Cost does not enter into the consideration. Wherever the trail lies we must go, and the secret of our success is that distance has no terrors for us, for we must never allow the trail to grow cold. That's how I rounded up 'Ohio Hump' and his pals. Just by keeping constantly after them, night and day. Other yeggs have led me even merrier chases, but I never allowed them to get beyond my reach. One band took me from the Southern mountains to the Pacific slope. But I got them. Others have given me when they learned that we were so hot after them, relying upon surrender and confession as a factor toward mitigating their sentences.

"There was one yeggman who caused me a lot of trouble. He was known as 'Tennessee Tom,' and he operated with his pals all through the mountain districts. Post Office safes and railway stations were easy for them, and they would enter a town, finish up their job and get away without being seen by a soul. There was no one for the longest time who could give me the slightest clew to their identity. No one had seen them, and I had no description to aid me.

A Three Months' Chase.

"After closely examining the blown safes and realizing that it was the work of expert craftsmen or that of men who were artists in the use of nitro-glycerine, I knew I was in pursuit of old and seasoned yeggmen.

"After several weeks' work I found a storekeeper in a town where a robbery had been committed who had sold dynamite to a stranger. I got a good description of the purchaser. At that time yeggmen bought their nitro-glycerine, only a few of them extracting it from dynamite sticks, as they do now. I got in touch with headquarters and learned that 'Tennessee Tom' was about the only extractor of nitro-glycerine who could be in the South, all the others being accounted for elsewhere.

"That was my clew, so I set out with something tangible to work upon. Every once in a while I would learn of another purchase of dynamite, and invariably it was made by a person whose description tallied with that of 'Tom.' The trail lay across Carolina, then into Tennessee, through the lower corner of Virginia and thence into Kentucky, through Cumberland Gap. Every day or two I would learn of another looted post office just ahead of me. That kept up for several months.

Clews Difficult.

"Finally I found myself in Denver. There the trail grew cold for a week and I was beginning to become discouraged. But one day, disguised as a laborer, I was prowling around the freight yards when I saw my man, 'Tennessee Tom.' Dirty and dusty, after a long ride on the brake rods of a flyer, he slouched through the yards, three of his pals with him. The odds were too great for me to tackle the job alone, so I shadowed them through the city until they reached the dive they headed for. I got in touch with the local post office and two inspectors came down to aid me. Then we closed in on the gang. It was a fight to the finish for awhile. Even after taking their weapons away they fought desperately, and we were compelled actually to club them into submission before we landed them in the lockup. But our case was clear, and after putting them through the third degree I learned that every job I suspected them of had been theirs and that they were about two days ahead of me through the entire trip from Western Carolina to Denver. All went away for long terms, 'Tom,' the ringleader and manufacturer of the 'soup,' or nitro-glycerine, getting a longer term than the others.

"But the greatest difficulty in our work, especially cases in remote places, is in getting a lead. Once we get a tangible clew we can go ahead with clear sailing, but sometimes the cases are so shrouded in mystery that they look almost impossible of solution at the outset. That is one of the worries now and I [illegible] on a case for a time, at least, and [illegible] acquainted with my family. I haven't seen much of them for the last few years."

GREAT PYRAMID GOD'S WITNESS

Stone Monument on Nile Refutes Evolution and the Higher Criticism.

Cairo, Egypt, March 3.—The Committee appointed by the International Bible Students Association to report on Foreign Missions is homeward bound instead of visiting the missions of eastern and southern Africa. They will recommend another commission for Africa and Australasia, etc. They spent more time in India than was first expected. They decline to give any intimation respecting their report until their return to New York.

To make their work as comprehensive as possible the Committee members divide their attention, each one specializing, except Pastor Russell, who generalizes, and joins in the comparison of notes. We report Pastor Russell's discourse of to-day, from the text which he said, referred directly to the Great Pyramid located near this city: "In that day there shall be an altar to the Lord in the midst of the land of Egypt . . . for a sign and for a witness." (Isaiah xix, 19, 20.) Not only did God mention prophetically the great pyramid in Isaiah, but also in Jeremiah xxxii, 20, where we read that "He set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day."

It is intensely interesting to visit this land of the Pharaohs, at one time so intimately associated with God's "chosen people"—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph and his brethren. It is interesting to imagine ourselves back at the period of the Exodus of the Israelites, to note the place where the Israelites probably crossed the tongue of the Red Sea upon the sandbar made bare by a strong wind. It was interesting to visit what the Arabs still designate the "Wells of Moses," and to note that they are still brackish or bitter springs, "Waters of Marah."

But to me the most interesting thing in this ancient land is the Great Pyramid referred to in our text. Its location is remarkable, and its nine centuries ago marked it as one of the Seven Wonders of the world—a building covering nearly thirty acres. Its scientific lessons brought forth during the past fifty years by astronomers and other scientists are still more wonderful, but most wonderful of all to me are its prophetic teachings, first brought to our attention by Prof. Piazzi Smyth, Astronomer Royal for Scotland, and others.

The Pyramid is located on an elevated, level plain overlooking the River Nile. Peculiarly, the delta of the Nile forms a sea coast, which in shape is a true quarter circle, with the Great Pyramid marking the centre angle. This was discovered by Mr. Mitchell, of the United States Coast Survey, in 1868. He observed the regularity of the curvature around the whole of Egypt's northern coast, and, seeking the explanation, found that the fanlike delta started from the Pyramid; and he exclaimed, "That stone witness is in a more important physical situation than any other building erected by man." This fits Isaiah's description, "An altar in the midst of the land of Egypt, a pillar at the border thereof."

I must not attempt here a presentation of the scientific details of this great Monument which is now speaking to the world, both on scientific and religious subjects. I can only hope to arouse sufficient interest to lead you, my hearers, to read the particulars. I will merely offer some suggestions by way of bringing your curiosity to the point of investigation.

Scientists tell us that the measurement of its base on the four sides, at the level of its sockets, when added, gives as many pyramid cubits as there are days in four years, to the fraction — including the leap-year fraction. The diagonal measurements across the base, N. E. to S. W., and N. W. to S. E., give as many inches as there are years in the processional cycle of the stars. This cycle astronomers had already concluded to be 25,827 years,—and the Pyramid corroborates the conclusion. The distance to the sun is indicated by the height and angle of the Pyramid to be 91,840,270 miles, which almost exactly corresponds with the latest figures reached by astronomers. The Pyramid also has its own way of indicating standards of weight and measures based upon the size and weight of the earth.

The Rev. Joseph Seiss observed, "There is a yet grander thought embodied in this wonderful structure. Of its five points there is one of special pre-eminence, in which all its sides and exterior lines terminate. It is the summit corner, which lifts its solemn index finger to the sun at midday, and by its distance from the base tells the mean distance to that sun from the earth. And if we go back to the date which the Pyramid gives itself, we find a far sublimer indication. Science has at last discovered that the sun is not a dead centre, with planets wheeling about it, but itself stationary. It is now ascertained that the sun also is in motion, carrying with it its splendid retinue of comets, planets, its satellites and theirs, around some other and vastly mightier Centre.

"Astronomers are not yet fully agreed as to what or where that Centre is. Some, however, believe that they have found the direction of it to be The Pleiades, and particularly Alcyone, the central one of the renowned Pleiadic stars. . . . Alcyone, then, as far as Science has been able to perceive, would seem to be 'the midnight throne' in which the whole system of gravitation has its Central Seat, and from which the Almighty governs His Universe. And here is the wonderful corresponding fact, that at the date of the Great Pyramid's building . . . the Pleiades were distributed over the meridian of this Pyramid, with Alcyone precisely on the line. Here, then, is a pointing of the highest and sublimest character that mere human Science has ever been able to so much as hint, and which would seem to breathe an unsuspected and mighty meaning into that speech of Job when he demanded, 'Canst thou bind the sweet influences of Pleiades?'"

Prof Smyth tells us that he finds astronomically, that the Pyramid was built in 2170 B. C. He tells us that at that particular time the Dragon star, the personification of evil, was in line with its Descending Passage The inference is plain when once we perceive that the Pyramid pictures the history of the world. The Downward Passage represents the downward course of sin and death of the human race under "the Prince of the power of the air," under "the god of this world."

History in general corroborates this. The lower part of the passage ceases to be downward, and becomes horizontal to the large chamber in which it ends. That chamber, wide and high, but with troubled floor, may well be understood to represent the time in which we are living—the time in which the downwardness of our race has been measurably arrested, and when mankind are comparatively freed from the superstition which bowed down our forefathers; but the uneven floor indicates "a time of trouble," into which we believe we have already entered. Theological, social, political and financial troubles are in the pathway of humanity, and this means such anarchy as has been threatening in China and other Eastern lands, and which the Scriptures clearly declare will overwhelm Christendom.

Centuries ago an Arabian Caliph, Al Mamoun, believing the Pyramid to contain great wealth, spent a fortune in digging into its interior, not knowing of its Entrance Passage, which at that time may have been covered with the casing stones. He finally reached the Downward Passageway, but behold, the strenuous labors of his workmen dislodged a stone in the roof of the Downward Passage, and showed an Upward Passage, left concealed when building the Pyramid.

Al Mamoun's men found that Upward Passage blocked with a large granite block which they were unable to dislodge; and it is still there. Eager for treasure, they worked their way around it and found above it an Ascending Passage of about the same height as the Descending Passage, which ends in what is known as the Grand Gallery. It has the same steep grade as the Ascending Passage. It is narrow at the base, but wider higher up, and seven times as lofty as the Ascending Passage.

The interior of the walls of these passages is of creamy marble or limestone, and the Grand Gallery has seven overlappings on each of its side walls, and both the lower and end walls overhang. At its upper end is a low Passage into what is known as the Ante-Chamber. Through another low Passage we enter what is known as the King's Chamber. At the juncture of the low Ascending Passage with the Grand Gallery, is a level Passage which leads off to what is known as the Queen's Chamber, directly under the King's Chamber.

Thus the low Ascending Passage, the low Horizontal Passage, and the floor of the Grand Gallery, all come together at one point, and there we find what is known as the Well, an irregular Passage which leads downward and connects with the Downward Passage toward its lower end. This Well and the Passage leading to the Queen's Chamber apparently were secreted by the builders; but something like an explosion tore away the top stones covering the Well and the lower portion of the Grand Gallery, and thus disclosed the Well and also the Passage to the Queen's Chamber. So far for our description.

A key suggested in 1866 by a young Scotchman, Robert Menzies, and which began to open the Pyramid's religious lessons, was the Well. He wrote to Prof. Smyth, "From the north beginning of the Grand Gallery, in upward progression, begin the years of our Saviour's life, expressed at the rate of a year for an inch. Three and thirty inch-years therefore bring us right over against the mouth of the Well." In other words, that Well and the appearance of an explosion, picture our Lord's death and resurrection. In harmony with this the Downward Passage represents the course of sin and death, leading to destruction. The low Ascending Passage, blocked by the Granite "Plug," represents the Law Covenant given to the Jews, but which none of them, however, were able to keep perfectly, because "there is none righteous, no, not one"—none capable of fulfilling the demands of God's Law because of hereditary weaknesses.

From the time of our Saviour the Gospel Dispensation began, symbolically represented by the Grand Gallery. It is a Dispensation of grace or favor; nevertheless, its Passageway is deep and narrow, leading to the "Goal" at the farther end. As the Grand Gallery has an end, so this Gospel Age will have an end. It will accomplish its purpose, which is the gathering of the "elect" of God, to be the Bride of Christ and His joint-heirs in His Kingdom, which is to bless the world.

Another interesting feature is that the Ascending Passage with its Plug represents exactly the length of the Jewish Age! And, similarly, the Grand Gallery represents, an inch to a year, the length of this Gospel Dispensation! It indicates that at a certain time the great favor of becoming joint-sacrificers with the Redeemer, and thus becoming joint-heirs with Him in His Heavenly Kingdom, will terminate. The privilege of walking in the "narrow way," in the footsteps of Jesus, of self-sacrifice for the Truth's sake, will thus end. "Now is the acceptable time"—now is the time when God is willing to accept these living sacrifices, which He declares are "holy and acceptable to God" (Romans xii, 1), through the imputation of Jesus' merit.

But while the Grand Gallery as a whole stands as a representative of the entire Gospel Age, at its top we have illustrated the steps necessary to be taken by each and every one who would constitute a member of the Bride class, to become new creatures, to become partakers of the divine nature, sacrificing all that appertains to our human nature. The Ante-Chamber represents the present life of God's consecrated children. Its peculiar wainscoting seems to symbolically say that lessons must be learned by each one who enters—in other words, it symbolizes the School of Christ, in which consecrated believers have lessons of faith, experience, patience and fortitude to prove their worthiness to pass beyond into Heaven itself, represented by the King's Chamber.

Before entering this Ante-Chamber or school, the pupil must stoop low, for it is entered by a low Passage, implying humility. And no sooner has he risen than he finds himself confronted by a huge granite obstruction, known as the Granite Leaf, and he can make no further progress except by bowing low to pass under it. Granite seems to be used in the Pyramid in much the same way that Gold was used in Israel's Tabernacle—to symbolize things Divine. This Granite obstruction threatens to block our way, and requires us to bow low before it. Symbolically, it says, It is not sufficient that you have a desire for Godliness, and faith in Jesus, and a desire to be taught of Him; you cannot go further unless you make a full surrender to God—unless you bow to the Divine will absolutely, in consecration to God of your all.

And here another lesson is taught, for the moment the pupils bows under the Granite obstruction he begins to tread on the same Granite floor which constitutes the floor of the King's Chamber. The lesson seems to be that from the moment of full consecration the disciple of Christ is begotten of the Holy Spirit to the divine nature, symbolized by the Granite. His new standing thus declares him in Scriptural language a New Creature.

The passage leading from the Ante-Chamber to the King's Chamber is just as low as the Granite obstruction, which seems to say that as the one represents a condition of death of the will, the other represents actual death—only by actual death could our Saviour or any of His followers pass into the heavenly state, symbolized by the King's Chamber; for, as St. Paul declares, "We must all be changed," because "flesh and blood cannot enter the Kingdom of God."

We understand the Horizontal Passageway leading to the Queen's Chamber to symbolically represent the trials and testings that will be upon the human family incidental to attaining human perfection under the glorious reign of Messiah's Kingdom, when the Church as the Bride of Christ will be associated with her Lord in effecting human restitution to all the willing and obedient.—Acts iii, 19-23.

If, as we believe, God has in this great mountain of stone caused to be outlined the Divine Plan of the Ages, it undoubtedly will tell its wonderful story in trumpet tones, "in that day." What we can appreciate of its teachings in harmony with the Bible we find wonderfully comforting in this day when skepticism is so rife—when the scholars of Christendom are telling us that the Bible prophecies from which Jesus and the Apostles quoted and which they applied were not written at all by the persons supposed.

At this time, particularly, it is refreshing to Christian faith to find not only the Bible itself is opening before us, and one quotation illuminating another and all uniting in the testimony that God is Love, and that "His mercy endureth forever," but that the Messianic Kingdom so long promised is at hand, and that it will bring, as foretold, great joy to all people, with the best opportunity for returning to Divine favor and everlasting life. At this time it refreshes our hearts to note the testimony of God's great Stone Witness in the land of Egypt—testifying to Divine foreknowledge of the evil that has been upon the world, and respecting the Divine arrangement for the election of the Church, and through it, as Messiah's Kingdom, the blessing of every creature.

MAIL BAGS OF RULERS.

Pope's the Largest—Kaiser's Next with 7,000 Letters a Day.

The mail bag of the Vatican probably contains the largest number of letters that are addressed to any single person or institution. After the Pope, the Kaiser receives the greatest number, fully half being addressed to him personally.

Emperor William has never less than 7,000 letters daily, a goodly proportion of which, according to Harper's Weekly, are appeals to right wrongs about which he knows nothing, and would be powerless to act if he did. Many are private diplomatic letters.

After him comes the President of the United States, who gets a daily average of 5,000 letters. The mail of King George V. has dwindled to 2,500 letters, probably a third of the number received by his father, the late King Edward. The mail bag of the Tsar is smaller still about 200 persons writing daily to one well known to be hedged in by officialdom.

It is said that the royal palace at Madrid gets 300 letters addressed for the most part to King Alfonso, but a share falling to the lot of the Queen. The Italian King gets only about 200 letters daily, while the mail bag of the President of France varies greatly.

When the foreign population in Paris is most numerous his mail bag reaches as high an average as the American President, but in other months the average is comparatively small. It is said that the Emperor of Japan has only recently begun to be troubled in this manner, letters to him being mainly in the nature of appeals to add by swift and glorious war to the territory of the sun kingdom.

Try This Home-made Cough Remedy

Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with 1 cup of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else ever used. Usually ends a deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, croup, chest pains, bronchitis, and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasantly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural pine elements, which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equalled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

HOW TO BE A WEATHER SHARP

The following formula of weather signs was adopted by the Farmers' Club of the American Institute some years ago, and it has been found to give satisfaction:

1. When the temperature falls suddenly there is a storm forming south of you.

2. When the temperature rises suddenly there is a storm forming north of you.

3. The wind always blows from a region of fair weather toward a point where a storm is forming.

4. Cirrus clouds always move from a region where a storm is in progress to one of fair weather.

5. When cirrus clouds are moving rapidly from the north or north-east, no matter how cold it is, there will be rain within twenty-four hours.

7. When cirrus clouds are moving rapidly from south-east there will be a hailstorm on the morrow, if it be in the summer, and if it be in the winter there will be snow.

8. The wind always blows about a storm in a circle! when it blows from the north, the heaviest rain is east of you; if it blows from the south, the heaviest rain is west of you; if it blows from the east, the heaviest rain is south.

9. The wind never blows, even moderately, unless rain or snow is falling within a radius of 1,000 miles.

10. Whenever heavy white frost occurs, a storm is forming within 1,000 miles north or north-east of you.—Christian Herald Almanac.

"Say, mister," came a voice from the audience, "you can find him down on the pond, trying to see how near he can skate to the 'Danger' sign." Judge.

How to Live.—We live by admiration, hope and love. Wordsworth tells us—not, therefore, by contempt, despondency, and hatred. These contract and narrow the soul, as the others enlarge it. The more a man heartily admires, the more he takes into his nature the goodness and beauty which excite his admiration. His being grows up toward what thus evokes his enthusiasm. And the habit of admiration is the outcome of a moral discipline which represses peevish and fault-finding dispositions, and seeks the admirable in every situation ad every person that life brings to us. "Be ye enlarged" implies "learn to admire and to praise."

TURNBULL'S
THE HOUSE THAT VALUE BUILT

DOCTOR IS CHARGED.

Toronto Physician Named in Coroner's Jury's Verdict.

Toronto, March 3.—"Esther Davidge came to her death at the Western Hospital, Toronto, on Sunday, March 2, 1913, as the result of blood-poisoning, the said blood-poisoning being caused by an illegal operation performed by Dr. B. E. Hawke of 31 Wellesley street, Toronto."

This verdict was returned at the morgue last night by a jury under Coroner Young.

Before they retired the jurors were told by the coroner that they could mention the husband of the deceased in their verdict if the evidence influenced them to do so.

An ante-mortem statement taken at the hospital on Friday night was read. Mrs. Davidge said Dr. Hawke had been chosen to perform the operation because a year previous she and her husband had read in the newspapers of his having performed an abortion on a young girl.

She stated that her husband had given her $25 which she paid Dr. Hawke.

Staff-Sergeant McKinney told of an interview he had had with Mr. Davidge in Staff Inspector Kennedy's office.

Mr. Davidge, according to the witness, said he and his wife had discussed the question of an operation. The husband had stated, however, that he did not know the operation had been performed until his wife told him about it after being taken ill. He gave as a reason for desiring it that a physician had told him that his wife would not survive the shock of another childbirth.

Knights a Menace, He Says.

Montreal, March 3.—Branding the Knights of Columbus as the triumph of the spirit of masonry in the Catholic Church, a writer in La Croix, a Roman Catholic organ, makes an attack on that organization. The writer in La Croix says in the Columbus a fraternity of all Catholic organizations, the most dangerous to the interests of French-Canadians. It is the triumph of Irishism and Liberalism, and should, therefore, be looked upon askance by all French-Canadians.

The writer, after pointing out that in combating Freemasonry one must combat all organizations leading up to Freemasonry, points out that it is in the mutual benevolent societies that Masonry makes its appearance. These by their initiation, their password, and their secrets, mimic Freemasonry, and should, therefore, be suppressed. Of all these organizations the most potent is the society known as Knights of Columbus.

Arms To Be Thrown In Sea.

New York, March 3.—Fearing to conflict with the Sullivan law governing the possession of firearms, Police Commissioner Waldo announced yesterday that the annual yearly sale of firearms and other weapons which fall into the hands of the police would be abandoned this year and instead the present collection, valued at over $2,000, would be dumped into the sea. Arrangements have been made for a police boat to go out early Thursday morning, loaded down with 1,200 revolvers, 200 shotguns, 100 rifles, 200 blackjacks and knives of all shapes and sizes, all of which will be thrown overboard.

Reign of Terror in Ireland.

London, March 3.—The Irish Lord Chief Justice, speaking at the County Clare Assizes, said he might be very brave sitting there with police all around him, but was a man to be blamed for refusing to give evidence if he lived on the mountain with an enemy all round? In some parts of Ireland the people were so utterly demoralized by fear that they would not come forward to help the authorities.

NEW METHOD OF PAYING FOR STREET WATERING IS OPPOSED

Last Year's Method Cannot be Applied for Some Unaccountable Reason — Aldermen Object to Making People Pay for What They Do Not Receive.

COUNCIL'S BUSY SESSION

THE COUNCIL MEETING.

Talked about plan of paying for street watering.

Decided to let payment of registrars stand for a while.

Dropped the milk question.

Talked about the local bands.

These citizens listened to the arguments and escaped the cold outside.

Ald. Anderson made speech on this year's tax rate.

The regular meeting of the Council was held last night, with Mayor Bradburn presiding, and all the Aldermen present. The minutes of the last regular meeting were taken, as read.

A petition for a sewer on George St. between Romaine and King Edward streets, was referred to the Board of Works.

A letter from Mr. Jos. Kelly, secretary-treasurer of the Peterborough Poultry Association expressing the thanks of the Association for the Council's generous grant was received.

A communication from the Board of Trade stated that at the last general meeting of the Board a resolution had been passed favouring the adoption of a modern garbage collecting system for Peterborough.—Received.

Other Communications.

From the Hamilton and Toronto Sewer Pipe Company, soliciting orders for sewer and culvert pipe for municipal works.—Board of Works.

From the Water Commissioners, asking the Council to issue debentures for $10,000 for construction work of the Water Works for 1912.

A request for a sewer on Brock St. between George and Water streets, was referred to the Board of Works.

Reports of Committees.

The reports of the Property Committee and the Board of Works were passed, but a clause in the Finance Committee's report, presented by Ald. Anderson, was held up for discussion. It was as follows: "That the Registrars be paid in connection with the Manhood suffrage registration as advised by the City Solicitor and that the City Treasurer be authorized to issue cheque to the City Solicitor for the amounts payable and that payment be tendered to the Registrars by the Solicitor".

Mayor Bradburn—"I believe it would be just as well to strike out that clause and let the matter stand in abeyance for a while. I am in doubt as to our liability."

Ald. Gillespie—"It might be worth while trying to have the registrars discuss it with the Finance Committee.

Ald. Anderson—Judge Huycke has asked for a reply to his letter.

Following the City Solicitor's advice the Committee was quite satisfied that the bill should not be paid.

Ald. Johnston.—"It seems strange that there should be four bosses and four men and that they should be paid the same as the men who do the work. The law seems to be that a man getting $10 a day can get it easier than the man who earns $1.00. The sooner the law is changed the better.

Ald. Anderson—There is a registrar for each of the five divisions. In the three cases a deputy was appointed, and the city was billed for $10 a day for the deputies and the same amount for the registrars.

Ald. Buller—"There is no use of running into a law suit.

Ald. Anderson.—"The Committee has no desire to push the matter through. We thought that it would not cost much to have the law tested."

Ald. Morgan said he was willing to stand by the report of the City Solicitor and the Committee. We got the Solicitor's opinion and he says it should not be paid. Now we have doubts with the Committee and the Solicitor. If he is wrong we can look to him for the difference."

City Solicitor—"This is a peculiar point of law that has never been decided. Aothers than might not read it that way. Ald. Gordon thinks I am wrong. The Dominion Government

WOULD GIVE 57TH BAND $1,000 IF CITY HAD MONEY

Ald. Buller Says Citizens Are Proud of the Band and Enjoy Its Music —Other Towns Give Larger Grants

MAY PLAY MORE OFTEN

The 57th Regimental Band was the subject of some discussion at the Council meeting last night, Ald. Anderson introduced it by enquiring the ownership of the instruments. They were valued at about $2,500, and if the city owned them a list should be kept in case they were destroyed by fire and insurance was to be collected.

Ald. Buller assured him that the city owned the instruments, and remarked that there need be no doubt on that point.

"The only thing I regret," he continued, "is that we can only make the grant $500. I would like to make it $1,000, if we could afford it. Lindsay pays $700 to its band of 12 or 13 men; Berlin pays $1,000 and other cities in proportion. I feel proud of our band and there is not a citizen who does not feel the same. Thousands enjoy their music in the summer. The band is willing to play in the afternoon, if called upon. A member said to me: "If you want us to play at any other times we are willing to do so." A concert might be held at King Edward Park, or any of the others occasionally, if a band stand is built. The 57th Band is a credit to the City of Peterborough.

Ald. Anderson—"I am just as proud of the Band as any other citizen. I am an ex-member and played for years, but my enquiry was purely a matter of business."

Ald. Brown wanted to know what difference existed between the Salvation Army and 57th Regimental bands that there should be such a difference in grants, but no one undertook to reply to him.

INSURANCE RATES CUT

Some insurance Companies cut rates. Some also cut losses. A Company's policy is usually not worth more than you pay for it. You cannot get the best article at a cut price. It is the most "penny wise and pound foolish" policy to save a trifle on your premium and get inferior protection. PREMIER BORDEN SURRENDERS TO DEMAND OF HENRI BOURASSA TO REPEAL NAVAL ACT

Anti-British Nationalist Influence Secures Promise of Destruction of a Naval Act That British Admiralty Approved of—More Important for Government to Stick Together Than Keep Empire Together.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, MARCH 4. —Premier Borden and his Government have again sought terms from Henri Bourassa. The Nationalist leader remains master of the Administration and collects his "pound of flesh." Before the Premier attempted to proceed with the second reading of the Manitoba boundary bill in Parliament this afternoon he met Mr. Bourassa's demands by informing the House of the Government's intention to repeal the Laurier Naval policy and adopt the course of taking a vote of the people on it, which was stipulated by the Nationalist leader.

From February 7, when Mr. Sevigny, the Nationalist lieutenant from Dorchester, gave notice of motion, calling for this course from the Government, and Messrs. Lamarche and Mondou, subsequently put their questions on the order paper in reference to it, Premier Borden has daily asked for the matter to stand over, while Hon. Mr. Hasen, the Minister of Marine, has on more than one occasion intimated that the Government proposed no change or immediate declaration of policy. But Mr. Bourassa wins. To-day, when Mr. Mondou's question was again reached on the order paper, Premier Borden rose and capitulated.

Following are the questions and answers quoted verbatim from Hansard:

Mr. Mondou—Does the Government intend to propose the repeal of the Naval Service Act?

Mr. Borden—Yes.

Mr. Mondou—If so, does the Government intend, in case of such repeal, to propose another containing the policy of the Government in the matter?

Mr. Borden—Yes.

Mr. Mondou—If such other act is proposed, is it the intention of the Government to submit the same for the approval of the people before putting it into force?

Mr. Borden—Yes. After such consideration and inquiry as may be necessary, the Government will present its naval policy to Parliament, and to the people. That policy will undoubtedly require legislation which will involve the repeal of the present Naval Service Act. In the meantime that act will remain on the statute book for purposes in connection with the fishery protection service and otherwise. Before any permanent naval policy is put into force the people will be given an opportunity to pronounce upon it.

Mr. Armand Lavergne's recent visit to Ottawa evidently turned the trick and the assurances with which the Nationalists filled the corridors a week ago were better advised than the negatives of Ontario Conservatives. The "crisis" has been avoided by obedience to Mr. Bourassa.

TWO MORE SUFFRAGETTES ARE SENT TO THE CELLS

Were Led Shrieking to the Cells—Tell the Magistrates That Their Imprisonment Means More Vigorous Measures —London Times Says They Should Get Seven Years

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ENG., MARCH 5.—Bow Street Police Court was again jammed to the doors with Suffragettes arrested in last night's demonstration, and two of them, Victoria Simmons and Lillian Bell, were led out shrieking to the cells, to serve two months' imprisonment with hard labour. They told the Magistrates that their imprisonment meant more vigorous measures and defied them to do their worst. In some districts business is at a standstill, the shop windows being boarded up in expectation of further assaults by the women. The London Times is calling on the authorities to impose seven-year sentences on these women for conspiracy to riot.

THE POWERS MAY TAKE A HAND IN CHINESE GAME

Examiner Special:

NANKING, CHINA, MARCH. 5.—Following directions in Pekin, it is understood the president has summoned Dr. Sun Yat Sen and his friends to the forbidden city to assist him and advise him in the present critical situation. In the meantime the foreign powers, notably Japan, are leaving no stone unturned to secure prestige in sending troops to restore order and ostensibly to protect the foreigners. There is a feeling here among the prominent Chinese that the partitioning of the Empire by powers may come even yet, if conditions do not improve immediately.

BASEBALL STOCK HAS SOLD RAPIDLY IN CITY

So spontaneous has been the demand for stock in the Peterborough Baseball Club, Limited, when the shares were put on the market yesterday, that a team for Peterborough in the Canadian League, controlled by local capital, has passed from the possibility to the certainty stage. An exceptionally representative and strong Board of Directors have agreed to act. Their names will be announced to-morrow. The fans have shown their appreciation of the efforts of the committee to give Peterborough representation in organized baseball by liberally responding and the lists of stock subscription are rapidly filling up. A meeting of the committee will be held to-morrow night, and the subscriptions will close before that time.

Excursion From The West Of Old Eastern Boys This Year

An Old Eastern Boys excursion will be run from Western Canada this summer to their old homes, and an effort will be made by the Council to have some of them, at least, come to Peterborough.

Ald. Graham was recently in Alberta and Mr. Percy Engle, formerly of Peterborough, informed him of the proposed excursion. An endeavour is being made to get as many as possible from the towns between Calgary and Vancouver, to make the trip.

On motion of Ald. Brown, seconded by Ald. Graham, the Clerk was instructed to write Mr. Engle for further information regarding the plans of those in charge of the excursion.

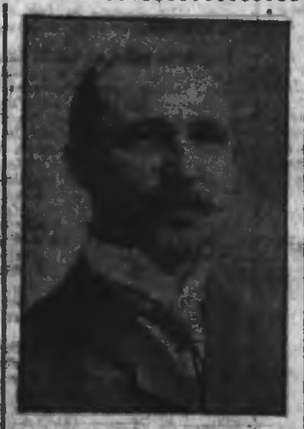
SWEEPING AMENDMENTS

Examiner Special.

OTTAWA, ONT., MARCH 5.—During the fight over the bill to enable the Canadian Northern to build a tunnel and terminal in Montreal in the Railway Committee this morning Hon. Frank Cochrane announced incidentally that it was his intention to introduce sweeping amendments to the Railway Act, to provide for more equitable compensation to property owners for damages by railways.

The C. N. R. bill was reported with amendments.

The southern tip of Florida is the only portion of the United States which never has experienced freezing weather.



Hon. Dr. Beaume, Minister of Public Works for Ontario. He was spokesman for the Government to the Good Roads deputation and promised a grant towards good roads equal to last year's.

STRIKES IN GERMANY

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, MARCH 5.—The strike fever is now rampant in Germany. Several thousand men are out at the famous Schichau warship building yards at Danzig. Thousands are on the verge of a strike in clothing trades; 2,000 are about to leave work in the Berlin paper industry and chances highly favour the outbreak of an enormous strike in Rhenish-Westphalian coal belt, involving 250,000 men, by to-night.

MR. DONALDSON, Peterboro's Favourite Baritone, Has Been Engaged by the Management of the RED MILL Theatre to Sing Illustrated Songs, in Addition to Their Regular and Popular Singer, Mr. Ayres.

Mr. Donaldson wishes the public to know, that he was not dismissed from the Princess Theatre, where he most ably rendered songs for one week. Mr. Donaldson was deserving of a better and higher salaried position, hence his engagement at the Red Mill, and judging by the huge crowds and rounds of applause which was tendered him at every performance, Mr. Donaldson is sure to become a great favourite with the patrons of the RED MILL.

Do not fail to hear Mr. Donaldson and Mr. Ayres, in all their up-to-date songs. Come early and get a good seat.

A MINOR FIRE

The Fire Brigade received a call, at 6.40 p.m., yesterday, from Box 38.

It transpired that an overheated woodstove had occasioned an outbreak in the establishment of Mr. John Hensley, at the corner of McDonnell and Reid streets. Some people chancing by on their way home from work, noticed the conflagration, and turned in the alarm from the box on the opposite side of the street.

The Chief and his men were shortly upon the scene and extinguished the flames, and damage to the extent of only ten dollars resulted.

Prince Arthur of Connaught. He was thrown heavily from his horse while following the hounds in Yorkshire, but was not seriously injured.

New Craft Ordered by Admiralty Will Develop 100 Horse Power and Have Speed of 30 Knots.

UNPRECEDENTED BATTERY

Special Wire to The Examiner.

LONDON, MARCH 5.—The British admiralty have ordered a battleship which will break all records for size and horse power and which will be built by the firm of John Brown, on the banks of the Clyde. The ship will have a displacement of thirty-thousand tons, developing at least eighty-seven thousand horse power, and her builders fully expect she will develop one hundred thousand horse power when she undergoes trials. Her speed must be thirty knots. She will have a battery of unprecedented power, consisting of eight fifteen inch guns, each firing a projectile of two thousand pounds weight and twelve six-inch weapons.

MR. WILSON EXTENDING HIS BUSINESS

Has Purchased the Plant and Buildings of the Lubricator Company

A NEW FACTORY

Mr. Rollie Wilson of the Peterborough Machine Company, has purchased the plant and buildings of the Peterborough Lubricator Company, which has been sold under liquidation, paying therefor the sum of $12,000. This plant will be added to the business of the Peterborough Machine Company and removed to the present situation on George street. At present Mr. Wilson is having plans prepared for the erection of a new factory, where will be combined the business of the Lubricator Company and his present machine works. A large automobile garage will also be erected where automobiles may be stored and repaired.

Additional ground having been procured, Mr. Wilson will have a very convenient site for repairs that may be required by steamers and launches during the summer season. We believe it is Mr. Wilson's intention to erect buildings that will be creditable to the city and will allow for a very considerable expansion of the business.

LUBRICATOR BUSINESS CHANGES HANDS

Mr. Rollie Wilson, has purchased the "Lubricator" buildings and plant, East city, for the sum of $12,000.

The Lubricator Company, which was established some years ago, seems to have been handicapped at the beginning with advantages. A company was formed with a capital of $100,000. Of this amount, shares to the total of $78,000 were sold, representing that amount of paid-up capital. But this considerable capital was not all available as working capital. The sum of $60,000 was paid for patents, and a fifteen per cent. commission was allowed on sale of stock. The balance was placed in buildings, plant, etc. The business was kept going for some time, but was finally sold for the benefit of the creditors, who will be about recouped by the purchase price of $12,000.

LEFT FOR THE WEST.

Mr. D. Hennessy, Mr. Jas. France, Mr. Wm. Cox, Mr. George Baptie, Mr. Wm. Baptie, Mr. N. Carew and Mr. Wm. Scots have left Peterborough during the past week for the West. Peterborough Town and County are adding their full quota to the new settlers of the West.

Says Eatons Cannot Win

Examiner Special:

WINNIPEG, MAN., MARCH 5. — Fred Gravelle, manager of the Calgary team, says that he hardly expects that this team will lift the Allan Cup, but he is quite confident that the cup will not go east, no matter which team wins this series. "Why, we can beat that Eaton aggregation," he said. "I saw them play in the east and they are not in our class, and I am sure that the Vic's would trim them easily despite the fact that they would be handicapped by having to play four matches in a row."

SAVE YOUR HAIR

While You Have Hair to Save, Use Newbro's Herpicide.

Every woman who is obliged to wear false hair or man, a toupee, feels that it is a misfortune. What makes the burden so doubly hard to bear is the knowledge that the loss of natural hair could, in most instances, have been easily avoided.

The arch enemy of good hair is the dandruff germ. This is now a well established scientific fact. There is one remedy on the market which, used regularly, will kill the germ and keep out every trace of dandruff.

This remedy is Newbro's Herpicide long known as the Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer. By keeping the scalp clean, Herpicide not only prevents the hair from falling out, but allows it to grow as nature intended. Begun in time and its use persisted in, this valuable remedy insures a nice healthy head of hair.

Herpicide imparts life and lustre to dull, dead, brittle hair, making it light, fluffy and beautiful.

Don't wait. Begin now to save your hair.

Applications may be procured at the better barber shops and hair dressers.

A nice sample and booklet on the care of the hair will be sent to any one upon receipt of 10c. in postage or silver. Address The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

TUESDAY, MARCH 5, 1912

SAVE ME FROM MY FRIENDS.

"The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence and the violence taketh it by force." We do not pretend to give exegetical appraisal of this rather mystic saying, but the militant suffragettes seem to apply it to their mode of crusade. Smashing plate-glass windows and smoking statesmen's crowns seem to be the favourite methods of the militant suffragettes, of Great Britain, and the same spirit seems to obsess the shrieking sisterhood of Canada. Speaking at Ottawa, a Mrs. Flora McDonald Denison, of Toronto, in advocating women suffrage, made this extraordinary proposal: "I would suggest that all the married women leave their homes till they get the vote." This language belongs to an advanced condition of lunacy, but is not surprising in a woman who is willing to sacrifice the most sacred obligations of humanity to freak advocacy of a fad. But we should not expect a man who is supposed to have a thinking mind, and brains enough to keep out of the fun to excel it in rashness of statement. Peterborough had the honour of having her pugnative representative occupy the chair at the woman suffrage meeting in Ottawa, where Mrs. Denison grew rabid. Here is a gem polished by the chairman: "The greatest crime since the crucifixion of Christ is the refusal to grant votes to women"—blasphemy and buncombe combined. Joseph Fels, the saponaceous advocate of single tax, killed himself in Canada, at least, at one blow, by endorsing dynamite methods of United States anarchists. Old women of both sexes, are doing much to destroy whatever merit there may be in the demand for votes for women. Some women might well be given votes, but the best women that should have them are those who show themselves so unbalanced, violent and hysterical and shameless; and unfitted for having votes or any other privilege except making fools of themselves. The woman suffrage movement may well pray: "Save me from my friends—hysterical old women in both petticoats and trousers.

THE PROBLEM OF SURVIVAL.

If a man worth $10,000 adds ten dollars a year to his capital; and a man worth $1,000 adds a hundred dollars a year to his capital, it won't be very long before the latter will come upon equal terms with the former, and ultimately surpass him. We hear frequently, both in season and out of season, especially out of season, a certain class of patriots bewailing the alleged aggressiveness of a certain religious element in Canada, and prophesying disaster to the state and the constitution and Christianity; and in the alleged interest of the country, stirring up strife and bitterness, sowing enmity between neighbours. These people are beginning by combatting effect, instead of removing the cause. The cause of what these people affect to bewail, is not the aggressiveness of the race and the religion referred to, but the attitude of the section of the people to which the complaining patriots belong. That the conditions complained of exist, is due not to the aggressiveness of the condemned race and religion, but to the retrogressiveness of the very class to which the complainants belong. The metaphor of the two men with money exactly meets the situation. In this country, under our form of government, the majority rules, and the dominant majority is "Protestant." If there is the danger the "patriots" claim, it will come by the change of numerical relations. If the present "minority" becomes the majority it will be in a position to exercise the rights and powers our governmental constitution confers. And who but the "majority" will be to blame, if blame there is? If the "minority" [illegible] both race and religion—increase [illegible] bers by the undisturbed operation of the natural laws of reproduction, and if the "majority" relatively decrease in numbers by outrage and disregard of the same laws, the time is not far distant when the relative preponderance of numbers will be changed. The "minority" will become the majority by the simple operation of the arithmetical laws of addition and subtraction. If our French Canadian population, continues to have families of children averaging eight or ten, and the English-speaking Canadians continue to have families of one or two or none, one can easily see the results in numerical relations of the two populations that will follow a continuance of the conditions mentioned—conditions that actually obtain. It seems to be wisdom to consider the causes of conditions that are so loudly deplored in some quarters, and to place the blame, if any, where it properly belongs. If one man increases his property value rapidly, and another slowly, if at all, the ultimate result is certain. If one element of our population increases rapidly, and another slowly, if at all, in time the lesser will become the greater.

PHILOSOPHIC SIR WILFRID.

Speaking at the Graham-Low banquet in Ottawa, Sir Wilfrid said, in referring to the change of government:

"We have lost, it is true," proceeded Sir Wilfrid, "but they cannot take away from us what has been accomplished. We are proud that we left Canada in a different position from that in which we found it sixteen years ago. Only the other day in the House of Commons, Mr. Foster, commenting on the deplorable fact that wheat is lying rotting on the fields of the great Northwest, and seeking to escape from the responsibility of the situation, attributed it to the fact that the transcontinental railway had not been proceeded with more rapidly. What better encomium of the enterprise of building the railway could be forthcoming from the ranks of those who met the project with opposition when it was conceived? Thus, day by day they give testimony to the fact that the policy of Liberalism was the policy of nation-building, of developing and expanding this wonderful common country of ours.

"I rejoice that, notwithstanding all appeals to race and prejudice, all the elements that constitute the Canadian people are more harmoniously welded together than they were fifteen years ago. There are prejudices still, no doubt. It may be that these must continue for several generations yet, but we have laid down the elements of union and brotherhood. Let us do our part to develop a united Canadian people, free from prejudices and those other things which go only to cause unrest and turmoil and to hamper the upbuilding of the splendid people we are destined to be. The prosperity and progress of Canada is the supreme end for true Liberals. That our opponents may reap where we have sown is, after all, only a secondary consideration."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

N. W. Rowell, the new Liberal leader in the Ontario Legislature, says the Ottawa Free Press, made a most favourable impression upon those who heard him at the Liberal banquet on Saturday night. He is a born orator and has a most magnetic personality.

Our Nationalist, Postmaster-General is not a disciple of Dr. Osler, who believes that a man's usefulness ends at sixty and that he might as well be chloroformed. Hon. Mr. Pelletier, has appointed a man 72 years of age to be postmaster of the city of Charlottetown, P.E.I.

"I have endeavoured ever since I have been in public life to do my best, not only for our party, but for our common country. I do not disguise that I am a party man, that I try to win; but whether we win or lose, in the true and final analysis we need only to be concerned as to whether we have loyally and faithfully done our duty."—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

WHAT SHOULD ONTARIO DO NOW?

(Toronto Star.)

Ontario is going to give Mackenzie and Mann 4,000 acres per mile for building a railway in Upper Ontario. This Province is going to receive a land grant of 3,200 acres per mile for building a railway line in Manitoba.

This means that Ontario gets 800 acres per mile less than she gives for railway building.

Nor is that all. The publicly owned Ontario railway will get a five mile strip of land along its line as far as the Nelson River only. Beyond that it gets but a two-hundred-yard right of way. They are as stingy about it as if it were city property with a per foot frontage value. Mackenzie and Mann get what is equal to a six-mile strip the whole length of their line. But the company is not nailed to the map and compelled to accept its lands in that hard and fast way. It can pick out its townships in alternate sections "in the clay belt," an agricultural region of known value.

To reach tidewater Ontario must extend her publicly-owned railway through another Province. The truth of this is not affected by the land subsidy. The people of Ontario build and pay for it, but it will be the T. N.O. and M. R. R. The long stretch of line beyond our own Province is to be exempt from taxation, but will otherwise be under the jurisdiction of Manitoba. As the system will be interprovincial it will be brought under the Federal purview. The complications will be such as to make possible the bedevilment of the whole enterprise. It is a serious question whether the carrying of the line to tidewater on such terms were not better abandoned altogether.

The same delimitation of boundaries which Sir James Whitney appears to be quietly accepting from his political allies at Ottawa he flatly refused to accept from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and the Laurier Administration did not force it on Ontario as it has been forced on us now. When he parted with Hon. Frank Cochrane it would seem that Mr. Cochrane did not part with him. This is the first considerable price Ontario has had to pay for having Governments at Toronto and Ottawa which, for party reasons, dare not quarrel with each other.

This land grant to the T.N.O. and M. is a sop to Ontario. It was designed to humbug those who want to be hum-bugged for their party's sake. The decision to give Manitoba all she wanted was reached before the Provincial elections came off in Ontario, and was announced by Manitoba politicians. The folly of blurting this out before the Whitney Government could rush to the polls and back again was so apparent that everybody had to go to Ottawa again and haunt the capital looking profoundly perplexed. Hon. Robert Rogers painted his face with an expression of anxiety. Hon. Frank Cochrane looked supernaturally wise and grim. What a battle of giants seemed to be on!

The elections were won in Ontario. Again it came out that Manitoba had won everything in dispute. It was not until Mr. Rowell had made his speech in the Legislature, causing Sir James Whitney to adjourn the debate and ask leave to think again, that anything was heard of the land grant scheme.

But here is the point and here is the measure of what Ontario got: Mackenzie and Mann could undertake to build such a line as Ontario is expected to build in Manitoba, and could get better terms than Ontario is getting. They would get better terms or they would not touch it.

FOUR MILLION CHINESE IN DANGER OF STARVATION

Here is a tragic situation. In China, through drought and flood, 3,750,000 human beings are starving and will perish this spring and summer if relief does not come. In Canada foodstuffs worth millions of dollars are spoiling because the crops were too heavy for the railways to ship to the east. And this is happening while the Chinese nation is in the agonies of a new political birth. Has the world ever beheld such an appealing need as in China, or so urgent a call for "first aid" to the suffering as that which comes to Canada? The facilities for shipping grain westward to the Pacific and on to China are better than for sending it east to the Atlantic. To save this unusable surplus from wanton waste and to send it where it is so sorely wanted is our first and most compelling national duty. In how many ways will it come back to us as individuals and as a nation? The United States alone among the nations, refunded a large part of the Boxer Rebellion indemnity on condition that the money be spent on the education of Chinese students in United States colleges and universities, and already the American nation is reaping a reward in the confidence and good will of the people of China, who now have a thousand students in the United States who will return as missionaries of international good-will. This generosity is being kept alive by the American people whose churches are now appealing for money and food to send to the relief of the famine victims. The Chinese are a grateful people, and no movement of such a humane kind will go unrewarded here and hereafter.

With such a glut of grain and a more general prosperity than exists in the United States, what are the people of Canada going to do? China is the centre of world reformation today, and the real yellow peril is not an educated and progressive China, but a China remaining in poverty, ignorance and spiritual darkness. In any case Canadians can make no mistake in relieving distress of such an unparalleled extent, no matter how political events may shape. To stop our ears to this cry of woe is to invite calamity to our own doors, for the law of compensation is still in force, nor should we forget that a country's harvest is a gift of Heaven.

Therefore, let our government and people unite immediately to send liberal supplies of wheat, oats, flour and other food; and follow this up later with scientific advice and help in forest restoration, flood prevention and improvement in agricultural methods, the lack of which has brought the present troubles.

Last year 55 delegates representing various chambers of commerce in the United States visited China and were received with a warm welcome by Chinese commercial bodies, and American and Chinese scientific men, merchants and manufacturers are already co-operating for the improvement of China's material, as well as moral, condition. Geographically, Canada, with the United States, stands as the mediator by which the civilizations of Europe and Asia can be harmonized for the peace of the world, and there has been no time when the white-winged steed of opportunity waited to invite us to fill the great office as it does to-day.

Will press and people and parliament take it up?

BISHOP SCORES RACE SUICIDE

MONTREAL, MARCH 4.—Arraigning those who refuse to perform the vital duties of the married state as disobedient to God, cheaters of nature and traitors to their country, Bishop Carroll, of Montana, addressed a large congregation assembled at St. Patrick's church last night in the third of the series of Lenten addresses. His Lorship's theme was the child, as regarded in the Christian economy, and he did not mince words, in dealing with the responsibilities and duties of parenthood.

Puritans an Example.

The people and the nation, said he, who shirked their duties in this respect were bound to disappear and he cited the example of the Puritans who once held full sway in New England. Now it was the Irish who predominated in that part of the country, this being wholly due to the fact that whereas the Puritan endeavoured to evade the law of nature, the Irishman had been loyal to the teachings of his church. Just in the same way, could it be explained why the Irishman and Frenchman were so strong in the councils of the great Canadian nation. They had not forgotten the traditions of their Catholic ancestors. If it was true that "sin maketh nations miserable" the cruel revolting crime of race suicide, made nations perish from the face of the earth.

ABSTAINERS LEAD BY TWO GOALS DEFEATED LAKEFIELD BY 5 TO 3

Cementville Seven Fought Desperately to Keep the Score Down and Added by Weird Shooting of the Abstainers Succeeded in Doing So.

IN LAKEFIELD TO-MORROW

The T. A..S. team will go to Lakefield to-morrow night with a two-goal lead over the Cementville seven, in the second home-and-home games in the Trent Valley semi-finals. The first was played at Brock Street rink last night, the Abstainers winning by 5 to 3, and leading at the half by 3 to 1. It was a hard-fought, closely contested battle all the way through with both teams working to the limit. Lakefield showed the same close-checking as they did in the Hastings game and stuck to their men like glue, keeping the Abstainers' score down by their persistent coming back every time the local team broke away. Time after time a Lakefield man would spoil a shot by a check from behind, just when a score seemed certain, and thus, although the T A.. S. had the play in the enemy's territory for threequarters of the time in the second half, the goals came slowly. With any kind of luck at all the Cold Water Brigade should have had a much bigger lead, as on the play, in the second half, they were entitled to half a dozen more goals. Shots missed the nets by inches, passes were fooled right in the mouth of the goal and the rubber flew past and over the nets or right at Hill, all the time. It was disheartening but the Abstainers never let up and kept boring in until the last whistle. With two goals to the good it will be a battle royal in Lakefield to-morrow night. The Cementville seven expect to overcome the margin handily, in their own rink, but a number of the Abstainers learned the game on a similar ice surface and the Simpson team will have to step to town to head off the local aggregation. The close checking inside combinations a difficult matter and neither team showed much team work, although Lakefield scored once on a pretty three-man combination. The Abstainers had more speed than the visitors and did well individually, the only weak spot being in shooting.

McFadden played a splendid game in goal, for the winners, featuring his work by two brilliant stops in the second half, when Blewitt and Crawford got clean through and bored right in with no one bothering them from behind. E. Lancefield checked hard, and Tom Lancefield, although under the weather, with a bad cold, worked unceasingly, his rushes, especially in the second half, being of great assistance. Halpin, at centre, was another great worker, although he had no luck at all in his shooting. McPhee tore off some speedy rushes and was a hard man to stop when he got going.

For Lakefield, Morin at right wing, Blewitt, at rover, and Coverpoint Crawford were the pick. Morin was steaming along the boards all the time, and did some nice rushing, while Blewitt, although not prominent in the first half, came back in the second half with some spectacular work. Crawford was good all through the piece.

T. A .S.—Goal, McFadden; point, E. Lancefield; cover, T. Lancefield; rover, McPhee; centre, Halpin; right wing, Coughlin; left wing, O'Dette.

The game opened at a furious clip with the checking close on both sides. The Cement ville seven had the best of the going for the first few minutes and although they had not many clear openings to shoot, they were humming around the T.A.S. nets. Hill was given the first opportunity, but his shot was a foot too high. McFadden tripped a Lakefield man in a scrimmage and the T.A.S. net custodian was chased to the side lines, Tom Lancefield backing into the nets. The Abstainers fought desperately to keep Lakefield from shooting and in the midst of the excitement Halpin broke away and got right in on top of Hill only to have his shot picked off. A moment later, however, Conghlin slammed the rubber away from Rowe as he brought it out from behind and the puck sailed into the nets for the Abstainers first score. Simpson was off at the time.

It only took the Cement ville seven fifteen seconds to tie up thes core, Hill, Blewitt and Morin flashed down together in the prettiest passing rush of the night, Morin winging one under Lancefield's elbow for a goal, just as McFadden returned to the ice. Simpson was benched again for slashing Morin and then O'Dette drew a penalty for tripping Morin as the latter shot along the boards. It was even up for a few minutes until E. Lancefield made a lucky swipe at centre in checking a man, the rubber finding its way into the Lakefield nets and T.A.S. were once more ahead.

A little later McPhee made it 3 to 1 on a rebound. There was no further scoring until half time, although the Lakefield team were shy the services of Simpson on two occasions and E. Lancefield of the T.A.S. was off for tripping.

Only the hardest kind of luck prevented the Abstainers from banging in four or five counters at the beginning of the second half. They were pretty well all over the Northerners at this stage and had the Simpsonites bottled up, but try as they might they could not score. Halpin lost three or four chances, missing rebounds in front of the net and Hill picked off four or five shots from a couple of feet out. Once E. Lancefield took a back hand shot at the empty net and the rubber grazed the post. Time after time a score seemed certain, but the horseshoe was prominent over the Lakefield nets. Crawford broke away during one of these scrimmages when the T.A.S. defence was up on the firing line and tore down on top of McFadden. It looked like an easy goal, but McFadden made a sensational stop. Back came Blewitt with another similar rush and once more McFadden nailed the shot. Finally, however, a long scoop by Blewitt drifted through, striking McFadden on the pad and glancing into the nets. T.A.S. 3, Lakefield 2.

Only one goal ahead, the Abstainers worked desperately to add to their lead. They missed several gilt-edged openings, but finally with Simpson off, Halpin passed back to McPhee from a face-off and the rover scored with a nice shot. T.A.S. 4, Lakefield 2.

Lakefield got this one back after a couple of minutes' play, a nice rush by Blewitt winding up in a score. T. A.S. 4, Lakefield 3.

The Abstainers had a glorious chance in the next few minutes when Hill, the Lakefield goaler, was benched for throwing the rubber. The Cementville bunch cheeked like fiends, however and the Abstainers failed to get a clear shot while the custodian was away.

Coughlin made it 5 to 3 when he slammed one through from close range on a pass from the corner by Ern. Lancefield. There was no further scoring. Just before time was up Blewitt was clean through and boring in on McFadden when Tom Lancefield tripped him. He was penalized and the bell rang almost simultaneously. The summary:

1 T.A.S., Coughlin.
2 Lakefield, Morin.
3 T.A.S., E. Lancefield.
4 T.A.S., McPhee.
Half Time—
5 Lakefield, Blewitt.
6 T.A.S., McPhee.
7 Lakefield, Blewitt.
8 T.A.S., Coughlin.

DECLARE A HALF HOLIDAY FOR A HOCKEY GAME

Final in Trent Valley League Will be Played Here on Friday Night and Marmora Will Send Half the Town to Peterborough to See the Battle---Bloomfield on the Line-up

The final game in the Trent Valley League will be played here on Friday night between either the T.A.S. or Lakefield and the Marmora team, champions of the Eastern district. This should be the big feature of the Trent Valley season and will undoubtedly attract a big crowd. The Marmora people are daffy on their team, which includes the famous Reg. Bloomfield, and so enthusiastic are the fans that Friday afternoon has been declared a half holiday to permit everyone a chance to come to Peterborough for the final. Needless to say a big excursion will be run and there will be an invasion of noisy bugs from the Eastern town. Tommy Deforge, cover-point of the team and several executive members were in town last night to get a line on the T.A.S. and Lakefield teams and while they did not say much, they seemed confident that their aggregation would be able to dispose of the ultimate winners.

PROGRESS OF THE LOCAL BONSPIEL

The local curling bonspiel is progressing favourably with many of the best rinks still in the ring. Skips Brightman and Colling qualified for a place in the third round of the primary last evening by defeating Skips Morrow and McIroy's rinks. Skip Renwick performed a similar stunt as regards the fourth round, by eliminating Skip McDermid's rink to the tune of an 18-6 score.

Consolation Event.

Two games were played in this competition last night, the outcome resulted in a win for the rinks skipped by J. H. Connal and Dr. Wightman. This renders the two winning rinks eligible for entry into the second round of the consolation fixture.

Four rinks went to Keene this morn-aulking in a win for the rinks skip-which are in progress there. The occasion being the fiftieth anniversary of the inception of the club. The rinks will be skipped by Messrs. J. H. Conlng to participate in the festivities and R. G. Sturgeon.

Friendly games will be played this afternoon, and in all probability will be followed by a banquet this evening. Campbellford, Hastings and Norwood will also be represented at the event.

Tool Room Won From Lock Works

The Tool Room had little trouble in putting away the Lock Works team in a Mercantile League game at Brock street rink last night, the C.G.E. aggregation winning by 7 goals to 1, with the half time score 4 to 0. Goalkeeper Cassidy of the Tool Room was ill and Manager Harris had to climb into the pads himself, giving a Riley Hern performance. The combination of the Tool Room team was too much for the Lock Works septette. Hall scored six goals for the winners. Leo Dorocher released satisfactorily. There are two games in the Mercantile League to-night, the Clerks clashing with the Bell Telephone and the Machine Shop meeting the Lock Works.

That's a great race for the management of the Peterborough Baseball club. Harry Burridge, the Eaton boy, was on the ground Saturday in company with Knotty Lee, and both were well received by the promoters of the lift-lock city, who are very confident as to the outcome of the project. Peterborough should be able to land a good man, when such men as Burridge, Templin and Jo Jo are on the market. Oh, yes, Hugh Shannon is also an applicant.—Hamilton Spectator.

The Midgets Are In Line

There are four teams now in line for the Junior City Championship, and the Graham Cup. Jack Thirnbeck's Midgets, successors to the famous Chieftains, are the latest team to challenge for the silverware, and Manager Thirnbeck intimates that he has a seven that will make them all step some to head them off.
